The programming and promotion of the event, which will be seen by an invited audience, mainly of Lees carpet dealers, was developed by Victor M. Ratner, director of Theatre Tele-Sessions, a subsidiary of TNT.

'Andersen' Benefit Entirely Cost-free

All organizations and individuals participating in the benefit world premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion Theatre here on Nov. 24 are donating their services, according to Maurice Bergman, publicity chairman for the Variety Clubs Will Rogers Memorial Hospital benefit committee.

"This is a unique benefit," said Bergman, "in that the entire gross proceeds will go to the hospital. Every ticket will be paid for, and no one is collecting a penny for his or her work in behalf of the premiere."

Goldwyn is donating the film, while Charles B. Moss, managing director of the Criterion, and his staff, are giving their services free for the evening. In addition, all members of Richard Walsh's IATSE will work without pay.

Among others who will contribute their services are Radio City Music Hall ushers; National Ticket Co., Donahue and Coe advertising agency; Morrill and McDermott, typographers; and Wilbar Photo Engraving.

"In addition," Bergman pointed out, "members of the industry are buying most of the tickets."

before election at Grand Junction, Colo., between Aspinall and 23 exhibitors, many of whom had traveled hundreds of miles to be present. At the end of the meeting, during which the exhibitors presented facts and figures about their operations to show the injustice of the tax, the Congressman not only pledged himself to vote for repeal but advised the exhibitors how the industry should proceed after Congress convenes to get the tax killed.

"This is the information I've been waiting to have for some time," said Aspinall after the theatre owners had told individually of their plight. He asked for financial affidavits, pledging himself to take their case before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The meeting was organized by Robert Walker, of Walker's Unitah Theatre, Fruita, Colo. Walker had obtained a commitment several weeks ago from the Congressman, but when Aspinall heard no complaints about the tax from other exhibitors in his district he indicated that he might not consider the commitment binding. Learning of the Congressman's changed attitude, Walker traveled over the district and explained to theatre owners that if the Congressman was to be convinced of the injustice of the tax he would have to be given facts and figures in a meeting of several exhibitors.

Commenting on the meeting, the statement from Cole and McGee said:

"This successful meeting in Colorado gives emphasis to something we have recommended over and over since the start of this campaign. And that is that the best and surest way to obtain a commitment to vote for repeal is for a group of exhibitors to meet the Congressman and present their individual experiences with this tax."

Goldwyn's Stand on Subscription TV

Samuel Goldwyn declared in New York on Friday that it would be at least five years before subscription TV was commercially feasible and that then pay-as-you-go TV would have a share of the motion picture market.

He denied published reports that he had said "within five years 50 per cent of the nation's theatres will be closed and the motion picture market will be shared equally by pay-as-you-go TV, regular TV and theatres."

Cohn Briefs NETTC On FCC Meeting

The State Department said Johnston would be back from France sometime within the next two weeks, then would leave on a short visit to several Latin American countries, but would make this trip as MPAA president rather than as chairman of the Point Four board. Argentina and Brazil, where the film industry has been in trouble in recent years, are almost certain to be visited by Johnston.

Johnston was due to arrive in Paris today. He is being accompanied by MPAA vice president Joyce O'Hara.

Print Shortage Intolerable, Starr Tells Carolina Meet

Charlotte, Nov. 11.—The matter of print shortages is the "most pressing and acute immediate problem facing us today," in the opinion of Alfred Starr, president of the Theatre Owners of America. Speaking at the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, Starr said that print shortages were brought about chiefly by multiple runs in a given area on the same clearance, resulting in day-and-date contracts which the distributor finds impossible to fulfill.

"It is just too easy for the distributor to charge the exhibitor with being the sole cause of this unhappy situation," Starr said. "It is true that many exhibitors demand equal clearance with other theatres over a wide area, but this demand stems logically from the fact that all exhibitors in that area are required to pay the same

219,884 RKO Pictures Shares Bought by Sherrill Corwin

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Sherrill C. Corwin, RKO Pictures vice-president and studio head, bought 10,000 shares of RKO common and became the beneficial owner of an additional 209,884 shares during September, according to a report issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The beneficially owned shares came from a total of 1,049,420 shares held by the Bank of America, National Trust and Savings Association, pledgee for Screen Associates, Inc., acting as the nominee for Corwin and others.

The transaction represented Corwin's share in the purchase by the Ralph Stolkin group of Howard Hughes' controlling interest in RKO Pictures, sold at $7 per share. The stock is held in escrow by the Bank of America until payments to Hughes are completed. The report said Corwin was listed for total RKO holdings of 219,884 shares.

The report covers transactions by industry officers and directors during the period from Sept. 11 to Oct. 9. During this period, according to the SEC, Howard Hughes liquidated his total RKO Pictures holdings with the sale of 1,013,420 shares of common to the Stolkin syndicate. Ned E. Depinet, former RKO president, also liquidated his holdings, selling 35,000 shares in the same transaction.

At RKO Theatres, David J. Greene added 1,500 shares of common to a trust which held 32,300 shares at the end of the period. In addition, he listed 16,450 shares in his own name, 10,000 through partnerships, and 3,600 through members of his family. A. Louis Oresman sold 1,000 shares of RKO Theatres common, leaving his holdings at 28,100; William F. Whitman and John E. Redmond each sold 1,200 shares, each retaining 1,300.

At Monogram W. Ray Johnston sold 3,700 shares of common.

Lachman N.Y. Chief Barker

Edward Lachman was elected chief barker and other officials were selected without any opposition as the Variety Club of New York, Tent No. 35, held an election of officers at its annual membership luncheon-meeting on Monday. Lachman urged that Variety "serve by performing a public relations job for show business, being a super-COMPO in doing welfare activities."

Edward Lachman

Lachman outlined the main projects for the new year in his acceptance speech after being introduced by outgoing chief barker William German. He agreed with Murray Weiss, International Variety Club representative who spoke in place of Jack Beresin, that a charity and a clubhouse are the two fundamental things "necessary to keep interest in the (New York) club and keep it alive."

A five-man Heart Committee is to be formed to select a charity or charities.

Ted Mann Charges Decree Violations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Alleged malpractices in the Minneapolis area were outlined in a letter by Ted Mann, former president of North Central Allied, to the Senate Sub-committee on Small Business.

Mann charged that distributors were violating the U. S. Supreme Court order that pictures were to be bought one by one and that the purchase of one picture was not to be conditioned on the purchase of another. He further claimed that the distributors were continuing to fix admission prices, despite the fact that the Supreme Court had denied them that right. Mann, in his letter, said unless an exhibitor agreed to an advanced admission price requested by the distributor, the theatre owner was not awarded the picture.

leaders withdraw from all-industry undertakings to concentrate on getting better prices for Allied members. Another top agenda item will be a discussion of methods for increasing revenue of Allied regional units.

There is no telling the exact order in which items will be considered. Myers announced the less controversial ones would be taken up early Saturday, when many members will still be travelling to Chicago.

On arbitration, the board will hear the report of Allied's arbitration committee and the draft of the distributors' plan, and will either approve or reject the plan as submitted or give new instructions to the Allied committee.

Myers pointed out that the question of renewing Allied's membership in COMPO comes up automatically because it was last renewed in Oct. 1951 "until the next convention board meeting to be held sometime in the fall of 1952."

Ben Marcus, chairman of a special committee, will make a report on ways and means of increasing revenues of regional units by distributing fan magazines or other activities.

Other items on the agenda include:

Reports on distributor polices on film prices in the various territories, along with consideration of proposed remedies, "including appeals to appropriate committees of Congress";

Discussion of Motion Picture Association of America president Eric Johnston's speech before the Theatre Owners of America, in which he said film companies would produce for television;

Discussion of the government's 16mm. suit and of the industry's application to the Federal Communication Commission for theatre television frequencies;

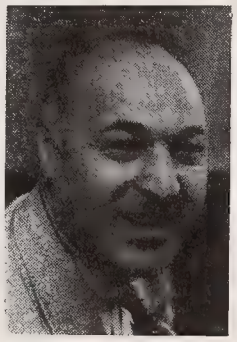
Suggestions that Hollywood create a permanent display for use at state fairs and other exhibits;

Discussion of ASCAP's demands for royalty payments on public performances of copyrighted music not recorded on entertainment film;

A report on Cinerama by Allied president Wilbur Snaper;

Proposals for the location of the 1953 Allied convention;



A report by Nathan Yamins on the experience of New England exhibitors at a hearing before the Commissioner of Public Safety on the use of acetate film; and

A discussion of methods employed by a Kansas City exhibitor to maintain order in his theatre.

Television--Radio

with Pinky Herman

THE rapid strides already made by Television in the American scheme of things can best be realized in the light that this new medium has closed a gap in less than four years which had taken its older brother, radio, a decade to do. In the national coverage of the Presidential election, the exciting descriptions, analysis of the ever-changing tabulations and the easy-to-follow charts and graphs depicting the comparative gains not only of the Presidential candidates but also the combatants for the Congressional seats, proved that sound plus sight, Television, is undoubtedly vastly superior as an enlightening medium to radio. However, the malodorous repetition of commershills (in this case that seems to be the correct spelling) oftentimes breaking into the middle of important sentences being uttered by John Cameron Swayze and John McCaffery, (NBC-TV) was downright annoying. No one argues with the right of a sponsor who lays down a bundle to take advantage of an assured audience, but when a can of Prestone is flashed on the screen incessantly and at most inopportune moments, then the good-will it might have established runs the risk of turning instead, into reverse reaction. In this case, instead of "Presto, the commercial is gone," it unfortunately seemed to be, "Prestone, it's here again." . . .

Starr said that any exhibitor had the right to ask himself why he should follow another theatre on a later run when both were paying the same terms. The TOA president asserted that in many cases the exhibitor would be glad to drop back to 60 days, 90 days or even six months if he were given an incentive to do so by getting lower film rentals.

"In my opinion," he said, "the distributor is almost entirely responsible for the shortage of prints that result from this unhappy condition, and it seems perfectly obvious to me that a change must be made lest the whole system of clerance fall apart and chaos replace it."

Starr accused the "senseless policy of the distributors of maintaining a uniform national policy as regards each picture" as being at the bottom of the situation. He said it was "fantastic" to reason that a picture worth 40 per cent in a large metropolitan theatre was also worth 40 per cent in a small town theatre. By making price and percentage concessions to the smaller marginal theatres that need help to survive, order can be restored to the industry, he said. By making similar concessions to subsequent run theatres, distributors can relieve the pressure of simultaneous demands for prints and at the same time give the public a longer interval of time in which to see a particular picture, Starr added.

Starr declared that the existing condition was almost intolerable and growing worse daily.

Sams, Jr. of Statesville was named second vice-president, and Mrs. Walter Griffith was re-elected executive secretary and treasurer for her 25th term.

Herman M. Levy, TOA general counsel, thanked the Carolinas group for its approval of the TOA principle of arbitration. "It is most encouraging," he said, "This is the sixth TOA unit to take this action."

The theatre owners had voted to approve any arbitration decision approved by the TOA. "The basic intention of the proposed system was to provide a speedy, effective, and inexpensive tribunal for exhibitors, large and small, for grievances, large and small," he added. "It may be that the plan is subject to criticism for one reason or another; there may be room for improvement; it may be that, after a period of trial and error, amendments will be necessary or advisable. None of this, however, detracts from the justified conclusion that the plan is a good one, worthy of immediate approval by all segments of the industry."

Jack Braunagel, chairman of the TOA's drive-in theatre committee, said that one of the faults of drive-in operation is over emphasis on the sale of concessions rather than motion pictures. "Exhibitors," he said, "should know more about the product they exhibit in order to do a better selling job."

Bryant attacked the 20 per cent admission tax, describing it as a wartime levy carried over into peace.

"It has almost become a permanent emergency tax," Bryant said. "Only concerted and vigorous action by theatre owners throughout the country can bring about repeal of this discriminatory tax."

Simons and Bernstecker Address Carolinas TOA Meet

CHARLOTTE, Nov. 11.—"Good pictures are not the only answer to the exhibitor's box office problem," Mike Simons, Loew's public relations executive, said at the theatre trade school here at the last day of the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina. He said more attention should be given to the "once in a while patron."

"We must," he pointed out, "get back to the day when the customer is king."

to the European production schedule for next year.

Hartman said Paramount planned four pictures for overseas production in 1953. F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Babylon Revisited" will start in Paris in July or August, with William Wyler producing and Gregory Peck in the top role. Peck and Wyler have just completed "Roman Holiday" in Rome, and Hartman, if he goes overseas next week, will sit in on the early cutting. John Bolting's "Wings Across the Sea" will be made mostly in England, while "Elephant Walk" will be shot in Ceylon. "Legend of the Incas" is slated for production in Peru. Some low-budget films may be made in Italy under a co-production setup, but these plans have not been finalized. If the plan goes through, the pictures will be distributed by Paramount only in Europe.

Paramount will concentrate on the exploitation of new faces during the coming year. Hartman said the studio would give new contract players immediate opportunities for stardom, rather than trying to build them up over a five year period. Hartman brought with him tests of new players to show to home office executives.

Pitts Says Press Is Favorable to Films

CHARLOTTE, Nov. 11.—A survey of 83 leading U. S. newspapers revealed that the ratio in favor of Hollywood, its people and its product was better than 10 to one, Dick Pitts, director of public relations of the Theatre Owners of America, told the 40th annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina here yesterday. Pitts said there was more than 10 times as much space devoted to the promotion of stars and pictures than there was to the alleged questionable side of the industry.

"On the other hand," Pitts continued, "while many newspapers surveyed were extremely generous with space, the majority was not. And that majority principally was in the smaller cities. Too many of them went for days and days with no mention of motion pictures whatever. If the space given by the minority was matched by the majority, the ratio in favor of motion pictures would be 50 to 1, or more," he added.

product schedule and vice-president Charles Einfeld's outlining of campaigns being developed for the films. W. C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager; Edwin W. Aaron, Western sales manager, and Arthur Silverstone, Eastern and Canadian sales manager, will join Lichtman in leading the discussions.

Also on today's agenda are the setting of plans for the handling of productions 20th-Fox is offering for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's. Thanksgiving will bring Damon Runyon's "Bloodhounds of Broadway" and "Pony Soldier," while John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and Daphne du Maurier's "My Cousin Rachel" are scheduled as Yuletide attractions.

Ends Dec. 27

Plans for these pictures and the continuing campaigns for Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Snows of Kilimanjaro" will be the main productions for 20th Century-Fox's "Anniversary Week" celebration to be held Thanksgiving week, and the "Branch Managers' Testimonial," which ends Dec. 27.

Division managers attending the meeting are Herman Wobber, Western; Harry Ballance, Southern; Martin Moskowitz, Empire State; M. A. Levy, Midwest; Glenn Norris, Atlantic; Tom McCleaster, Central and Peter Myers, Canadian. Also on hand will be Buck Stoner and Paul Wilson, assistant division managers in the Western and Southern territories, respectively.

Branch managers Jim Connolly, Boston; Ben Simon, New Haven, and Tom Gilliam, Chicago, will also be in attendance since their exchanges are now supervised by the home office.

Home office sales executives in attendance include Alex Harrison, Clarence Hill, Peter Levathes, Jack Bloom, Lem Jones, Francis X. Carroll, Morris Kaplan, Roger Ferri, Larry Ayers and Dave Ornstein.

Because of the overwhelming demand for seats, Paramount has cancelled the previously announced projection room screening and has engaged the . . .

Print Shortage Intolerable, Starr Tells Carolina Meet

CHARLOTTE, Nov. 11.—The matter of print shortages is the "most pressing and acute immediate problem facing us today," in the opinion of Alfred Starr, president of the Theatre Owners of America. Speaking at the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, Starr said that print shortages were brought about chiefly by multiple runs in a given area on the same clearance, resulting in day-and-date contracts which the distributor finds impossible to fulfill.

"It is just too easy for the distributor to charge the exhibitor with being the sole cause of this unhappy situation," Starr said. "It is true that many exhibitors demand equal clearance with other theatres over a wide area, but this demand stems logically from the fact that all exhibitors in that area are required to pay the same

'Sound,' 'Secret,' in Good B'way Bows

An excellent $37,000 is expected for the initial seven days of "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier" at the Victoria. At the Paramount, which also features a stage show, a pretty good $73,000 is seen for "Operation Secret." A nice $42,000 is due for the initial week of "Prisoner of Zenda" at the Capitol.

Holding up strong is "Limelight" at the Astor and the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux. A fine $34,000 is forecast at the Astor, while a nice $10,900 is predicted for the 60th Street Trans-Lux.

219,884 RKO Pictures Shares Bought by Sherrill Corwin

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Sherrill C. Corwin, RKO Pictures vice-president and studio head, bought 10,000 shares of RKO common and became the beneficial owner of an additional 209,884 shares during September, according to a report issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The beneficially owned shares came from a total of 1,049,420 shares held by the Bank of America, National Trust and Savings Association, pledgee for Screen Associates, Inc., acting as the nominee for Corwin and others.

The transaction represented Corwin's share in the purchase by the Ralph Stolkin group of Howard Hughes' controlling interest in RKO Pictures, sold at $7 per share. The stock is held in escrow by the Bank of America until payments to Hughes are completed. The report said Corwin was listed for total RKO holdings of 219,884 shares.

The report covers transactions by industry officers and directors during the period from Sept. 11 to Oct. 9. During this period, according to the SEC, Howard Hughes liquidated his total RKO Pictures holdings with the sale of 1,013,420 shares of common to the Stolkin syndicate. Ned E. Depinet, former RKO president, also liquidated his holdings, selling 35,000 shares in the same transaction.

At RKO Theatres, David J. Greene added 1,500 shares of common to a trust which held 32,300 shares at the end of the period. In addition, he listed 16,450 shares in his own name, 10,000 through partnerships, and 3,600 through members of his family. A. Louis Oresman sold 1,000 shares of RKO Theatres common, leaving his holdings at 28,100; William F. Whitman and John E. Redmond each sold 1,200 shares, each retaining 1,300.

At Monogram W. Ray Johnston sold 3,700 shares of common.

Lachman N.Y. Chief Barker

Edward Lachman was elected chief barker and other officials were selected without any opposition as the Variety Club of New York, Tent No. 35, held an election of officers at its annual membership luncheon-meeting on Monday. Lachman urged that Variety "serve by performing a public relations job for show business, being a super-COMPO in doing welfare activities."

Edward Lachman

Lachman outlined the main projects for the new year in his acceptance speech after being introduced by outgoing chief barker William German. He agreed with Murray Weiss, International Variety Club representative who spoke in place of Jack Beresin, that a charity and a clubhouse are the two fundamental things "necessary to keep interest in the (New York) club and keep it alive."

A five-man Heart Committee is to be formed to select a charity or charities.

Others elected were Edward L. Fabian, first assistant chief barker; Martin Levine, second assistant; Meinhardt, property master; Harold J. Klein, dough guy; and the following canvassmen: Bernard Brooks, Russell Downing, Nathan Furst, Jack Hoffberg, Martin Kornbluth, Jack Levin, Charles Lewis, Harold Newman, Walter Reade, Jr., Harold Rinzler, Burt Robbins, Morris Sanders, Sanford, Cy Seymour, David Snaper, Saul Trauner, George Waldman and Max Wolff.

Speaking for his executive committee on national policy, Berenson further stated that the only salvation for this phase of the motion picture business would be to have government control, such as is exercised today on common carriers, public utilities and other allegedly monopolistic enterprises.

Ted Mann Charges Decree Violations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Alleged malpractices in the Minneapolis area were outlined in a letter by Ted Mann, former president of North Central Allied, to the Senate Sub-committee on Small Business.

Mann charged that distributors were violating the U. S. Supreme Court order that pictures were to be bought one by one and that the purchase of one picture was not to be conditioned on the purchase of another. He further claimed that the distributors were continuing to fix admission prices, despite the fact that the Supreme Court had denied them that right. Mann, in his letter, said unless an exhibitor agreed to an advanced admission price requested by the distributor, the theatre owner was not awarded the picture.

Allied Registrants Now Total 575

leaders withdraw from all-industry undertakings to concentrate on getting better prices for Allied members. Another top agenda item will be a discussion of methods for increasing revenue of Allied regional units.

There is no telling the exact order in which items will be considered. Myers announced the less controversial ones would be taken up early Saturday, when many members will still be travelling to Chicago.

On arbitration, the board will hear the report of Allied's arbitration committee and the draft of the distributors' plan, and will either approve or reject the plan as submitted or give new instructions to the Allied committee.

Myers pointed out that the question of renewing Allied's membership in COMPO comes up automatically because it was last renewed in Oct. 1951 "until the next convention board meeting to be held sometime in the fall of 1952."

Ben Marcus, chairman of a special committee, will make a report on ways and means of increasing revenues of regional units by distributing fan magazines or other activities.

Other items on the agenda include:

Reports on distributor polices on film prices in the various territories, along with consideration of proposed remedies, "including appeals to appropriate committees of Congress";

Discussion of Motion Picture Association of America president Eric Johnston's speech before the Theatre Owners of America, in which he said film companies would produce for television;

Discussion of the government's 16mm. suit and of the industry's application to the Federal Communication Commission for theatre television frequencies;

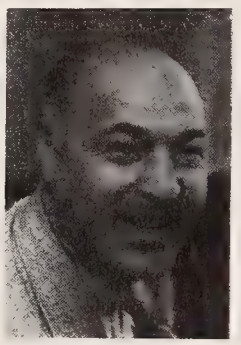
"Continuing complaints of high prices and poor service" by National Screen Service, including discussion of a suggestion that film companies guarantee or help in getting the delivery of paper and trailers from National Screen;

Suggestions that Hollywood create a permanent display for use at state fairs and other exhibits;

Discussion of ASCAP's demands for royalty payments on public performances of copyrighted music not recorded on entertainment film;

A report on Cinerama by Allied president Wilbur Snaper;

Proposals for the location of the 1953 Allied convention;



A report by Nathan Yamins on the experience of New England exhibitors at a hearing before the Commissioner of Public Safety on the use of acetate film; and

A discussion of methods employed by a Kansas City exhibitor to maintain order in his theatre.

Television--Radio

with Pinky Herman

THE rapid strides already made by Television in the American scheme of things can best be realized in the light that this new medium has closed a gap in less than four years which had taken its older brother, radio, a decade to do. In the national coverage of the Presidential election, the exciting descriptions, analysis of the ever-changing tabulations and the easy-to-follow charts and graphs depicting the comparative gains not only of the Presidential candidates but also the combatants for the Congressional seats, proved that sound plus sight, Television, is undoubtedly vastly superior as an enlightening medium to radio. However, the malodorous repetition of commershills (in this case that seems to be the correct spelling) oftentimes breaking into the middle of important sentences being uttered by John Cameron Swayze and John McCaffery, (NBC-TV) was downright annoying. No one argues with the right of a sponsor who lays down a bundle to take advantage of an assured audience, but when a can of Prestone is flashed on the screen incessantly and at most inopportune moments, then the good-will it might have established runs the risk of turning instead, into reverse reaction. In this case, instead of "Presto, the commercial is gone," it unfortunately seemed to be, "Prestone, it's here again." . . .

Starr said that any exhibitor had the right to ask himself why he should follow another theatre on a later run when both were paying the same terms. The TOA president asserted that in many cases the exhibitor would be glad to drop back to 60 days, 90 days or even six months if he were given an incentive to do so by getting lower film rentals.

"In my opinion," he said, "the distributor is almost entirely responsible for the shortage of prints that result from this unhappy condition, and it seems perfectly obvious to me that a change must be made lest the whole system of clerance fall apart and chaos replace it."

Starr accused the "senseless policy of the distributors of maintaining a uniform national policy as regards each picture" as being at the bottom of the situation. He said it was "fantastic" to reason that a picture worth 40 per cent in a large metropolitan theatre was also worth 40 per cent in a small town theatre. By making price and percentage concessions to the smaller marginal theatres that need help to survive, order can be restored to the industry, he said. By making similar concessions to subsequent run theatres, distributors can relieve the pressure of simultaneous demands for prints and at the same time give the public a longer interval of time in which to see a particular picture, Starr added.

Starr declared that the existing condition was almost intolerable and growing worse daily.

Sams, Jr. of Statesville was named second vice-president, and Mrs. Walter Griffith was re-elected executive secretary and treasurer for her 25th term.

Herman M. Levy, TOA general counsel, thanked the Carolinas group for its approval of the TOA principle of arbitration. "It is most encouraging," he said, "This is the sixth TOA unit to take this action."

The theatre owners had voted to approve any arbitration decision approved by the TOA. "The basic intention of the proposed system was to provide a speedy, effective, and inexpensive tribunal for exihibitors, large and small, for grievances, large and small," he added. "It may be that the plan is subject to criticism for one reason or another; there may be room for improvement; it may be that, after a period of trial and error, amendments will be necessary or advisable. None of this, however, detracts from the justified conclusion that the plan is a good one, worthy of immediate approval by all segments of the industry."

Jack Braunagel, chairman of the TOA's drive-in theatre committee, said that one of the faults of drive-in operation is over emphasis on the sale of concessions rather than motion pictures. "Exhibitors," he said, "should know more about the product they exhibit in order to do a better selling job."

Bryant attacked the 20 per cent admission tax, describing it as a wartime levy carried over into peace.

"It has almost become a permanent emergency tax," Bryant said. "Only concerted and vigorous action by theatre owners throughout the country can bring about repeal of this discriminatory tax."

Simons and Bernstecker Address Carolinas TOA Meet

CHARLOTTE, Nov. 11.—"Good pictures are not the only answer to the exhibitor's box office problem," Mike Simons, Loew's public relations executive, said at the theatre trade school here at the last day of the annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina. He said more attention should be given to the "once in a while patron."

"We must," he pointed out, "get back to the day when the customer is king."

to the European production schedule for next year.

Hartman said Paramount planned four pictures for overseas production in 1953. F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Babylon Revisited" will start in Paris in July or August, with William Wyler producing and Gregory Peck in the top role. Peck and Wyler have just completed "Roman Holiday" in Rome, and Hartman, if he goes overseas next week, will sit in on the early cutting. John Bolting's "Wings Across the Sea" will be made mostly in England, while "Elephant Walk" will be shot in Ceylon. "Legend of the Incas" is slated for production in Peru. Some low-budget films may be made in Italy under a co-production setup, but these plans have not been finalized. If the plan goes through, the pictures will be distributed by Paramount only in Europe.

Paramount will concentrate on the exploitation of new faces during the coming year. Hartman said the studio would give new contract players immediate opportunities for stardom, rather than trying to build them up over a five year period. Hartman brought with him tests of new players to show to home office executives.

Pitts Says Press Is Favorable to Films

CHARLOTTE, Nov. 11.—A survey of 83 leading U. S. newspapers revealed that the ratio in favor of Hollywood, its people and its product was better than 10 to one, Dick Pitts, director of public relations of the Theatre Owners of America, told the 40th annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina here yesterday. Pitts said there was more than 10 times as much space devoted to the promotion of stars and pictures than there was to the alleged questionable side of the industry.

"On the other hand," Pitts continued, "while many newspapers surveyed were extremely generous with space, the majority was not. And that majority principally was in the smaller cities. Too many of them went for days and days with no mention of motion pictures whatever. If the space given by the minority was matched by the majority, the ratio in favor of motion pictures would be 50 to 1, or more," he added.

product schedule and vice-president Charles Einfeld's outlining of campaigns being developed for the films. W. C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager; Edwin W. Aaron, Western sales manager, and Arthur Silverstone, Eastern and Canadian sales manager, will join Lichtman in leading the discussions.

Also on today's agenda are the setting of plans for the handling of productions 20th-Fox is offering for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's. Thanksgiving will bring Damon Runyon's "Bloodhounds of Broadway" and "Pony Soldier," while John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and Daphne du Maurier's "My Cousin Rachel" are scheduled as Yuletide attractions.

Ends Dec. 27

Plans for these pictures and the continuing campaigns for Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Snows of Kilimanjaro" will be the main productions for 20th Century-Fox's "Anniversary Week" celebration to be held Thanksgiving week, and the "Branch Managers' Testimonial," which ends Dec. 27.

Division managers attending the meeting are Herman Wobber, Western; Harry Ballance, Southern; Martin Moskowitz, Empire State; M. A. Also on hand will be Buck Stoner and Paul Wilson, assistant division managers in the Western and Southern territories, respectively.

Branch managers Jim Connolly, Boston; Ben Simon, New Haven, and Tom Gilliam, Chicago, will also be in attendance since their exchanges are now supervised by the home office.

Home office sales executives in attendance include Alex Harrison, Clarence Hill, Peter Levathes, Jack Bloom, Lem Jones, Francis X. Carroll, Morris Kaplan, Roger Ferri, Larry Ayers and Dave Ornstein.

French Pact Is Near the Closing Stage

Obtaining of 135 Dubbing Permits Still Uncertain

A new French film agreement with American major companies was reported here yesterday to be at the closing point, with an announcement of details forthcoming within a few days. Eric Johnston, president of Motion Picture Association of America, and MPAA vice-president Joyce O'Hara are in Paris for the negotiations, having departed suddenly from New York last weekend for the parleys.

It was reported at the Motion Picture Export Association in New York yesterday that the "stage was set" for the culmination of the pact before the departure of Johnston and O'Hara for Paris. It was still problematical whether the American companies would achieve their goal of obtaining 135 dubbing permits, in view of the fact that the French government last summer cut the U. S. majors to a total of 90 permits.

If the American companies should

TNT Set to Enter Bid for Marciano Return Bout

Theatre Network Television "will be in there pitching" in order to get the projected return world heavyweight match between Rocky Marciano and Jersey Joe Walcott on theatre TV, Nat Halpern, TNT president, said here yesterday.

Halpern's statement came on the heels of the opening of preliminary talks between fight managers and the International Boxing Club looking toward a return bout. The first match, which saw Marciano wrest the crown from Walcott, drew an estimated $400,000 box-office in 50 theatres when it was telecast over a national closed circuit last September.

A representative for the IBC said it was still too early to tell whether home television or theatre television would be used for the return match. It is understood, however, that if it is theatre-televised, the price which will be sought by the IBC will be greater than the reported minimum guarantee of $105,000 for the September bout.

Discussions now underway with the managers center around the selection of a site and a date. Under considera-

Colosseum Plans For Convention in Atlanta Completed

ATLANTA, Nov. 12.—Final plans for the national convention of the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen, to be held here Nov. 21-23 have been completed by Atlanta Loge No. 1. Because the salesmen's organization was founded in Atlanta by the late Frank W. Approximately 150 delegates and alternates are expected at the sessions which will be held at the Ansley Hotel. An executive committee meeting has been scheduled for the afternoon of Nov. 21.

U.K. Studio Union Head Visits Moscow

LONDON, Nov. 12.—George Elvin, head of the left-wing anti-American Association of Cine and Allied Technicians' studio union here, has left for a month's visit to Moscow, with settlement of the threatened studio work stoppage due for final action here.

The trade's Joint Industrial Council is scheduled to meet here to ratify the Producers' Association offer of wage increases involving members of the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employes and Electrical Trades Union, as well as the ACT. The producers' offer came after unauthorized work stoppages at studios which threatened a shutdown because schedules could not be maintained.

Still to be decided is the producers' demand that the unions refrain from what is termed as restrictive practices, particularly those attaching to foreign location work. Inter-union differences may arise over the latter.

Elvin went to Moscow at the invitation of the Russian Trades Unions and under the auspices of the Society of Cultural Relations with the U.S.S.R. It is understood he was strongly criticized by sections of his union's membership who claimed, among other things, that a month was too long for him to be away on matters unrelated to the union's interests.

Associated With 'Reds' But Wasn't One, Says Burrows

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Abe Burrows, Broadway and Hollywood writer, today denied to the House Un-American Activities Committee that he had ever belonged to the Communist Party.

Burrows admitted, however, he used to associate with Communists, that he had attended front meetings and had entertained and made contributions to various front organizations. But he insisted that he had never paid dues to the party or held a party card. "I have a stubborn pride in that I never took the final step," he declared.

Burrows later told the Committee that "my own sloppiness of action, my own thoughtlessness gave them the right to think I was a member." Asked by Rep. Velde (R., Ill.) whether he hadn't been "naive," Burrows said he would go farther than that "and say that I was stupid."

The writer appeared at his own request, to answer testimony given to the Committee by Owen Vinson, a one-time party member, who said he had known Burrows as a party member in Hollywood in 1945 and 1946.

The committee will meet again tomorrow to take testimony from Karen Morley. Miss Morley, identified frequently in hearings as a leader in the Communist movement in Hollywood, has been under subpoena for some time, but was only recently located and served.

given "Stars and Stripes Forever." Premieres, he said, will spark the openings across the country during the Christmas period.

"My Cousin Rachel," starring Olivia de Havilland and Richard Burton, based on the Daphne Du Maurier novel, is being rushed into pre-release before the end of 1952, Lichtman said, in order to have it qualify for Academy honors. Also being advanced in release to Christmas Day, he added, is "Ruby Gentry," a Joseph Bernhard-King Vidor production, starring Jennifer Jones. "The I Don't Care Girl" stars Mitzi Gaynor, David Wayne and Oscar Levant and was produced by George Jessel.

Led by Lichtman

The sales discussions yesterday were led by Lichtman, W. C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager; Edwin W. Aaron, Western sales manager, and Arthur Silverstone, Eastern and Canadian sales manager. Also developing portions of the discussions were executive vice-president W. C. Michel and vice-president Charles Einfeld.

Lichtman will announce 20th-Fox's product slate for the first nine months of 1953 at today's meeting.

RKO Board

Arnold Grant, board chairman and chief executive of the company, has postponed his trip to the Coast until current Chicago negotiations are climaxed. Undetermined, as talks continue between Fox and the Stolkin group, are the selection of a studio head and the appointment of three directors to the board, filling the vacancies created by the resignations of Stolkin, Abraham L. Koolish, and William Gorman.

In Chicago, Fox is heading the negotiations for the purchase of 1,048,420 shares of RKO Pictures, purchased in September by the Stolkin group for $7,345,940 from Howard Hughes and Ned E. Depinet, former president of the company, who owned 35,000 shares.

The current Chicago talks would also suspend negotiations on Hughes' commitment to loan RKO $8,000,000, it is believed.

Late reports yesterday were that the negotiations between Stolkin and Fox, the latter a partner in United Artists and head of Films for Television, had reached no conclusive stage in Chicago but could be climaxed or abandoned in short order, regardless. The Stolkin group also has discussed sale of its controlling stock interest in RKO with other individuals and groups.

Merge RKO Radio Publicity Divisions

RKO Radio's foreign publicity department here will come under the jurisdiction of the domestic advertising-publicity department in the near future, it was reported yesterday. The foreign publicity setup currently is a part of the foreign department and operates independently of the domestic advertising-publicity personnel.

Rutgers Neilson heads the company's foreign publicity section, which is slated to come under the direction of Richard Condon, RKO Radio's advertising-publicity director.

Review

"April in Paris"

(Warner Brothers)

HERE is the rare musical film in which the score is tuneful, the production numbers are imaginative, enormously zestful, and appropriate without being over-elaborate, and the comedy is consistently, genuinely funny. It is a superlatively entertaining, gaily-mounted production in vivid color by Technicolor in which Ray Bolger, Doris Day, and Claude Dauphin dance, sing, and cavort in comic situations with wonderful ease and freshness. In addition to the exploitable stars and title, this should receive plenty of word-of-mouth advertising. It looms as one of the better box-office pictures of the year.

Jack Rose and Melville Shavelson have written a gag-loaded script that smartly spoofs such familiar targets as government bungling in administration, the amours of an ultra-romantic Frenchman, and gay Paris when it is not gay. David Butler's direction is first-rate except for one or two situations that were excessively milked for laughs. But most of the 101 minutes are deftly-paced grand fun. William Jacobs' tasteful and adroit production has cleverly made use of Parisian backgrounds and shipboard interiors.

Bolger portrays a State Department official who mistakenly invites a chorus girl, Miss Day, to the International Festival of Arts in Paris. The invite stands when press and public favor the move. Bolger is engaged to his boss' daughter, Eve Miller, a cold, domineering women. On the boat Bolger falls in love with Miss Day and they have a wedding ceremony performed but, unknown to them, it is not done by the true captain, so it is invalid.

Miss Miller is waiting when the boat docks but Bolger, fearing for his career, doesn't acknowledge his kissless bride. He and Miss Day part company but she arouses his jealousy by going around with Parisian entertainment idol Dauphin, who after going broke in New York, had worked his passage across as a ship's waiter. At the finale Bolger foregoes his diplomatic career and Miss Miller for Miss Day.

Dauphin's tongue-in-cheek performance as the amorous Frenchman who turns out to be a happily-married homebody is immensely appealing and it neatly serves to set up Bolger's dances and the songs by Miss Day. The latter two are at their best in the numbers staged and directed by LeRoy Prinz. Besides several fine versions of the title song, a top-notch job is done on "I'm Gonna Ring the Bell Tonight." Other songs in the Sammy Cahn-Vernon Duke score include "Give Me Your Lips," "It Must Be Good," "That's What Makes Paris, Paree" and "Life Is Such a Pleasure."

Running time, 101 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 1.

The hospital trustees are seeking to create the same type of premiere event as the annual British Royal Command Performance in London. Goldwyn is being honored as the first producer to make a film available for this purpose and for his help in establishing this American industry event.

Rank declares his assumption of all production financial risks has been made possible by operation of the Eady plan.

He denies that any difference has arisen between NFFC and his company, asserting that his organization will continue to distribute product from producers which received NFFC aid.

Associated British Pictures Co. accepted the NFFC group financing scheme reluctantly and should it bow out of the plan along with Rank, little further justification for its continuance is seen. However, ABPC officials had no comment to make today.

However, Al Weill, manager for Marciano, expressed a preference for the Yankee Stadium here and for theatre televising of the bout, which he said should be fought in June. He claimed that "we can get between $250,000 and $300,000 for theatre television, plus a percentage of the motion pictures" under such conditions. He argued against holding the bout in Chicago and home televising it in cities other than Chicago.

NEWS in Brief . . .

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The Federal Trade Commission reports that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and the Bulova Watch Co. have signed a stipulation to stop using the words "Academy Award" or "Oscar" in the advertising of watches or any other commodity, unless certain conditions are fulfilled.

The nub of the FTC's objection apparently was that the terms were used in connection with items not actually given an award and were advertised in such a way as to leave the impression they actually had received an award from the Academy.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 12.—Plans to produce a series of six color featurettes in the Tri-Opticon third dimensional process were disclosed here by Sol Lesser, who holds all U. S. rights to the British-developed process.

Production will start the first of the year and the films will be ready for road-showing by mid-1953.

get a hike in their permit quotas, there is a possibility that they will be called upon to leave a larger amount of their earned revenues in France.

An MPEA spokesman said yesterday that whatever negotiations Johnston might conclude in France would not bind the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, which probably will hold separate parleys. Johnston would act only for MPEA members, although during the previous pact negotiations the SIMPP had its representative, Alfred Crown, on the scene. At last reports, SIMPP had made no immediate plans to send a representative to France. Crown now is with RKO Radio and it is likely that either James Mulvey, president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, or Ellis Arnall, SIMPP president, or both, will talk for the association in Paris.

Majors Will Meet Monday On Japanese Licenses

Although Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, is in Paris on negotiations for a new French film pact, it is expected that he will be back in New York in time to hold a scheduled meeting with major company executives on the allocation of Japanese import licenses on Monday. Johnston set a Nov. 17 date for the meeting at which the companies would announce their decisions as to how they would split up licenses for the second half of the fiscal year.

The 10 member companies of the Motion Picture Export Association face the problem of sharing 53 licenses and their decision as to distribution is expected at Monday's meeting. In the first half of the fiscal year, the companies were allowed 63 permits and the MPEA is pushing to have that number restored. Irving Maas, vice-president of the MPEA, is in Tokyo on negotiations for the increase.

UNIVERSAL SETS 10 FOR RELEASE IN FOUR MONTHS FROM DECEMBER THROUGH MARCH

Daff, Feldman List Schedule

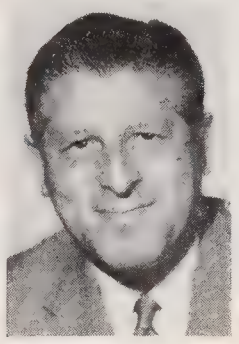
Universal-International will release 10 pictures during December, January, February and March, eight in color by Technicolor, Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president, and Charles J. Feldman, general sales manager, announce.

Detailing U-I's releases for December through March, they said the company's Christmas release will be "Against All Flags," in color by Technicolor, starring Errol Flynn and Maureen O'Hara. Also slated for December release is 'The Black Castle," starring Richard Greene, Stephen McNally, Boris Karloff, Lon Chaney and Paula Corday, which was given a Hallowe'en pre-release.

January will be U-I's "All Technicolor Month" highlighted by the release of Raoul Walsh's "The Lawless Breed," starring Rock Hudson and Julia Adams; "Meet Me At the Fair," starring Dan Dailey and Diana Lynn and "The Redhead From Wyoming," starring Maureen O'Hara and Alex Nicol.

Alfred Daff



Charles J. Feldman

February will be headed by the release of "Mississippi Gambler," in color by Technicolor, starring Tyrone Power, Piper Laurie and Julia Adams. "Girls in the Night," successor to "City Across the River," and featuring Joyce Holden, Glenda Farrell, Harvey Lembeck and Leonard Freeman, and introducing Patricia Hardy, is the second February release. "City Beneath the Sea" starring Robert Ryan, Mala Powers, Anthony Quinn and Suzan Ball will have a series of pre-release openings in February and a regular release in March. It is in color by Technicolor.

"Seminole" will be released in March. It stars Rock Hudson, Barbara Hale, Anthony Quinn and Richard Carlson, and is in color by Technicolor. The second Technicolor March release will be "Gunsmoke" starring Audie Murphy, Susan Cabot and Paul Kelly.

SEE 'BRILLIANT' FUTURE FOR FILMS

MILTON R. RACKMIL, president, and N. J. Blumberg, chairman of the board of Universal Pictures Co., issued the following joint statement as the company announced its releasing plans for the coming months:

Milton R. Rackmil

N. J. Blumberg

"Universal is inspired more than ever by the thought that the future of the motion picture business can be a brilliant one. We are a company of optimism and enthusiasm.

"However, we do not mean that these attributes make us unaware of the many problems that confront this industry.

"We believe that if our industry unites for the general welfare and attacks its problems with concerted effort, nothing but success can result.

"The main objective of Universal is to design its program of pictures so that the theatres of this country can prosper with us.

"In the final analysis the major problem is to get more people into the theatres by offering the public the best in entertainment and the best in publicizing and promotion of good pictures which will provide the entertainment the public seeks."

Universal Will Back Its New Films With Top Showmanship

The pattern followed by Universal during the past year in publicizing its pictures to provide exhibitors with promotional impact at the point of sale will be extended during the coming months, David A. Lipton, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, announces.

David A. Lipton

U-I's advertising and promotional campaigns for 1953, according to Lipton, will be designed to achieve advance national penetration on pictures and personalities, as well as extend the point of sale activities at the theatre level.

"The extensive use of national magazine and Sunday supplement media to reach audiences, including Look, the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, Cosmopolitan, McCall's, Redbook, Woman's Home Companion, Seventeen, fan magazines, American Weekly, This Week and Parade, which were used by U-I during the past year, will be continued and expanded where pictures lend themselves to this type of advertising treatment," Lipton said.

"In this accelerated program, Universal-International will not overlook the trade press, which we have found to be so effective in alerting the exhibitors of the nation to the values inherent in our pictures. Likewise, we will use daily newspapers to an even greater extent than in the past to reach the general public and to get them into the theatres where our pictures are showing.

"National commercial tie-ups also will be used to a greater extent to achieve advance penetration on pictures, with special emphasis being given to advertisers who not only use the national magazines but who can provide access to network television spots."

Universal-International, according to Lipton, will continue to use both television and radio for advance penetration and point of sale selling.

"We believe in the policy of launching our pictures aggressively and backing them right down the line," Lipton declared. He said U-I will continue with promotional campaigns in connection with key city and territorial premieres, using personalities, special events and territorial saturation advertising in the newspapers and on radio. Personalities will not only be used in the keys but in the sub-keys as well.

'U' Will Meet Public Wants

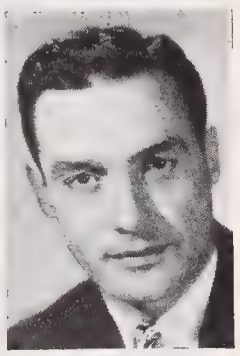
"Universal-International will continue to cater to the public taste in planning future productions and will continue to rely on the public's acceptance of its pictures," states William Goetz, production head.

William Goetz



"It is not a case of anticipated trends," Goetz declared, "but merely conforming to the type of films the public wants and supports. It seems to us that the movie audience looks to Hollywood for entertainment and our platform will be to present a well-balanced program designed to serve this purpose.

"We naturally will keep in mind pleasing both the exhibitor and his customer. If we please the patrons we know we will please the exhibitor. We will make big pictures with the biggest box office names available. Jimmy Stewart, Alan Ladd, Gregory Peck, Tyrone Power, Victor Mature, Dan Dailey, Joel McCrea, Robert Ryan, Barbara Stanwyck, Loretta Young, Ann Blyth, Maureen O'Hara and Ann Sheridan will be seen in our pictures.

"We will also utilize the new stars we have developed on our lot, namely, Tony Curtis, Jeff Chandler, Audie Murphy, Rock Hudson, Piper Laurie, Shelley Winters and Suzan Ball," Goetz said.

Ed Muhl Bolsters Studio Operation

Edward Muhl

Muhl has been with Universal since 1927, when he joined the company's costs division in the accounting department. He was made business manager, then studio general manager.

Obtaining of 135 Dubbing Permits Still Uncertain

A new French film agreement with American major companies was reported here yesterday to be at the closing point, with an announcement of details forthcoming within a few days. Eric Johnston, president of Motion Picture Association of America, and MPAA vice-president Joyce O'Hara are in Paris for the negotiations, having departed suddenly from New York last weekend for the parleys.

It was reported at the Motion Picture Export Association in New York yesterday that the "stage was set" for the culmination of the pact before the departure of Johnston and O'Hara for Paris. It was still problematical whether the American companies would achieve their goal of obtaining 135 dubbing permits, in view of the fact that the French government last summer cut the U. S. majors to a total of 90 permits.

If the American companies should

The board is slated to meet here again today. It is understood that

TNT Set to Enter Bid for Marciano Return Bout

Theatre Network Television "will be in there pitching" in order to get the projected return world heavyweight match between Rocky Marciano and Jersey Joe Walcott on theatre TV, Nat Halpern, TNT president, said here yesterday.

Halpern's statement came on the heels of the opening of preliminary talks between fight managers and the International Boxing Club looking toward a return bout. The first match, which saw Marciano wrest the crown from Walcott, drew an estimated $400,000 box-office in 50 theatres when it was telecast over a national closed circuit last September.

A representative for the IBC said it was still too early to tell whether home television or theatre television would be used for the return match. It is understood, however, that if it is theatre-televised, the price which will be sought by the IBC will be greater than the reported minimum guarantee of $105,000 for the September bout.

Discussions now underway with the managers center around the selection of a site and a date. Under considera-

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Beginning Jan. 1 the J. Arthur Rank Organization will initiate a production program backed entirely by its own resources.

The announcement is accepted here as foreshadowing the end of the National Film Finance Corp., the government agency which has assisted in the financing of British production through a group scheme under which individual producers worked on a salary basis. ## U.K. Studio Union Head Visits Moscow

LONDON, Nov. 12.—George Elvin, head of the left-wing anti-American Association of Cine and Allied Technicians' studio union here, has left for a month's visit to Moscow, with settlement of the threatened studio work stoppage due for final action here.

The trade's Joint Industrial Council is scheduled to meet here to ratify the Producers' Association offer of wage increases involving members of the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employes and Electrical Trades Union, as well as the ACT. The producers' offer came after unauthorized work stoppages at studios which threatened a shutdown because schedules could not be maintained.

Still to be decided is the producers' demand that the unions refrain from what is termed as restrictive practices, particularly those attaching to foreign location work. Inter-union differences may arise over the latter.

Elvin went to Moscow at the invitation of the Russian Trades Unions and under the auspices of the Society of Cultural Relations with the U.S.S.R. It is understood he was strongly criticized by sections of his union's membership who claimed, among other things, that a month was too long for him to be away on matters unrelated to the union's interests.

Associated With 'Reds' But Wasn't One, Says Burrows

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Abe Burrows, Broadway and Hollywood writer, today denied to the House Un-American Activities Committee that he had ever belonged to the Communist Party.

Burrows admitted, however, he used to associate with Communists, that he had attended front meetings and had entertained and made contributions to various front organizations. But he insisted that he had never paid dues to the party or held a party card. "I have a stubborn pride in that I never took the final step," he declared.

Burrows later told the Committee that "my own sloppiness of action, my own thoughtlessness gave them the right to think I was a member." Asked by Rep. Velde (R., Ill.) whether he hadn't been "naive," Burrows said he would go farther than that "and say that I was stupid."

The writer appeared at his own request, to answer testimony given to the Committee by Owen Vinson, a one-time party member, who said he had known Burrows as a party member in Hollywood in 1945 and 1946.

The committee will meet again tomorrow to take testimony from Karen Morley. Miss Morley, identified frequently in hearings as a leader in the Communist movement in Hollywood, has been under subpoena for some time, but was only recently located and served.

Coursey 20th's New Atlanta Manager

Coursey, a veteran of World War II, has been with the company since he began in the shipping department in 1936.

Fete Lester Zucker, U-I Division Head

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12.—Lester Zucker, new Universal-International Midwest division manager, was given a testimonial dinner at the Hollenden Hotel with 125 attending. Sam Gaines, attorney and close friend of Zucker's, was master-of-ceremonies.

Home office officials who were present included Ray Moon and P. T. Dana.

given "Stars and Stripes Forever." Premieres, he said, will spark the openings across the country during the Christmas period.

"My Cousin Rachel," starring Olivia de Havilland and Richard Burton, based on the Daphne Du Maurier novel, is being rushed into pre-release before the end of 1952, Lichtman said, in order to have it qualify for Academy honors. Also being advanced in release to Christmas Day, he added, is "Ruby Gentry," a Joseph Bernhard - King Vidor production, starring Jennifer Jones. "The I Don't Care Girl" stars Mitzi Gaynor, David Wayne and Oscar Levant and was produced by George Jessel.

Led by Lichtman

The sales discussions yesterday were led by Lichtman, W. C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager; Edwin W. Aaron, Western sales manager, and Arthur Silverstone, Eastern and Canadian sales manager. Also developing portions of the discussions were executive vice-president W. C. Michel and vice-president Charles Einfeld.

Lichtman will announce 20th-Fox's product slate for the first nine months of 1953 at today's meeting.

RKO Board

Arnold Grant, board chairman and chief executive of the company, has postponed his trip to the Coast until current Chicago negotiations are climaxed. Undetermined, as talks continue between Fox and the Stolkin group, are the selection of a studio head and the appointment of three directors to the board, filling the vacancies created by the resignations of Stolkin, Abraham L. Koolish, and William Gorman.

In Chicago, Fox is heading the negotiations for the purchase of 1,048,420 shares of RKO Pictures, purchased in September by the Stolkin group for $7,345,940 from Howard Hughes and Ned E. Depinet, former president of the company, who owned 35,000 shares.

The current Chicago talks would also suspend negotiations on Hughes' commitment to loan RKO $8,000,000, it is believed.

Late reports yesterday were that the negotiations between Stolkin and Fox, the latter a partner in United Artists and head of Films for Television, had reached no conclusive stage in Chicago but could be climaxed or abandoned in short order, regardless. The Stolkin group also has discussed sale of its controlling stock interest in RKO with other individuals and groups.

Merge RKO Radio Publicity Divisions

RKO Radio's foreign publicity department here will come under the jurisdiction of the domestic advertising-publicity department in the near future, it was reported yesterday. The foreign publicity setup currently is a part of the foreign department and operates independently of the domestic advertising-publicity personnel.

Rutgers Neilson heads the company's foreign publicity section, which is slated to come under the direction of Richard Condon, RKO Radio's advertising-publicity director.

Review

"April in Paris"

HERE is the rare musical film in which the score is tuneful, the production numbers are imaginative, enormously zestful, and appropriate without being over-elaborate, and the comedy is consistently, genuinely funny. It is a superlatively entertaining, gaily-mounted production in vivid color by Technicolor in which Ray Bolger, Doris Day, and Claude Dauphin dance, sing, and cavort in comic situations with wonderful ease and freshness. In addition to the exploitable stars and title, this should receive plenty of word-of-mouth advertising. It looms as one of the better box-office pictures of the year.

Jack Rose and Melville Shavelson have written a gag-loaded script that smartly spoofs such familiar targets as government bungling in administration, the amours of an ultra-romantic Frenchman, and gay Paris when it is not gay. David Butler's direction is first-rate except for one or two situations that were excessively milked for laughs. But most of the 101 minutes are deftly-paced grand fun. William Jacobs' tasteful and adroit production has cleverly made use of Parisian backgrounds and shipboard interiors.

Bolger portrays a State Department official who mistakenly invites a chorus girl, Miss Day, to the International Festival of Arts in Paris. The invite stands when press and public favor the move. Bolger is engaged to his boss' daughter, Eve Miller, a cold, domineering women. On the boat Bolger falls in love with Miss Day and they have a wedding ceremony performed but, unknown to them, it is not done by the true captain, so it is invalid.

Miss Miller is waiting when the boat docks but Bolger, fearing for his career, doesn't acknowledge his kissless bride. He and Miss Day part company but she arouses his jealousy by going around with Parisian entertainment idol Dauphin, who after going broke in New York, had worked his passage across as a ship's waiter. At the finale Bolger foregoes his diplomatic career and Miss Miller for Miss Day.

Dauphin's tongue-in-cheek performance as the amorous Frenchman who turns out to be a happily-married homebody is immensely appealing and it neatly serves to set up Bolger's dances and the songs by Miss Day. The latter two are at their best in the numbers staged and directed by LeRoy Prinz. Besides several fine versions of the title song, a top-notch job is done on "I'm Gonna Ring the Bell Tonight." Other songs in the Sammy Cahn-Vernon Duke score include "Give Me Your Lips," "It Must Be Good," "That's What Makes Paris, Paree" and "Life Is Such a Pleasure."

Running time, 101 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 1.

Rank declares his assumption of all production financial risks has been made possible by operation of the Eady plan.

He denies that any difference has arisen between NFFC and his company, asserting that his organization will continue to distribute product from producers which received NFFC aid.

Associated British Pictures Co. accepted the NFFC group financing scheme reluctantly and should it bow out of the plan along with Rank, little further justification for its continuance is seen. However, ABPC officials had no comment to make today.

However, Al Weill, manager for Marciano, expressed a preference for the Yankee Stadium here and for theatre televising of the bout, which he said should be fought in June. He claimed that "we can get between $250,000 and $300,000 for theatre television, plus a percentage of the motion pictures" under such conditions. He argued against holding the bout in Chicago and home televising it in cities other than Chicago.

NEWS in Brief . . .

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The Federal Trade Commission reports that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and the Bulova Watch Co. have signed a stipulation to stop using the words "Academy Award" or "Oscar" in the advertising of watches or any other commodity, unless certain conditions are fulfilled.

The nub of the FTC's objection apparently was that the terms were used in connection with items not actually given an award and were advertised in such a way as to leave the impression they actually had received an award from the Academy.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 12.—Plans to produce a series of six color featurettes in the Tri-Opticon third dimensional process were disclosed here by Sol Lesser, who holds all U. S. rights to the British-developed process.

Production will start the first of the year and the films will be ready for road-showing by mid-1953.

get a hike in their permit quotas, there is a possibility that they will be called upon to leave a larger amount of their earned revenues in France.

An MPEA spokesman said yesterday that whatever negotiations Johnston might conclude in France would not bind the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, which probably will hold separate parleys. Johnston would act only for MPEA members, although during the previous pact negotiations the SIMPP had its representative, Alfred Crown, on the scene. At last reports, SIMPP had made no immediate plans to send a representative to France. Crown now is with RKO Radio and it is likely that either James Mulvey, president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, or Ellis Arnall, SIMPP president, or both, will talk for the association in Paris.

Majors Will Meet Monday On Japanese Licenses

Although Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, is in Paris on negotiations for a new French film pact, it is expected that he will be back in New York in time to hold a scheduled meeting with major company executives on the allocation of Japanese import licenses on Monday. Johnston set a Nov. 17 date for the meeting at which the companies would announce their decisions as to how they would split up licenses for the second half of the fiscal year.

The 10 member companies of the Motion Picture Export Association face the problem of sharing 53 licenses and their decision as to distribution is expected at Monday's meeting. In the first half of the fiscal year, the companies were allowed 63 permits and the MPEA is pushing to have that number restored. Irving Maas, vice-president of the MPEA, is in Tokyo on negotiations for the increase.

UNIVERSAL SETS 10 FOR RELEASE IN FOUR MONTHS FROM DECEMBER THROUGH MARCH

Daff, Feldman List Schedule

Universal-International will release 10 pictures during December, January, February and March, eight in color by Technicolor, Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president, and Charles J. Feldman, general sales manager, announce.

Charles J. Feldman

February will be headed by the release of "Mississippi Gambler," in color by Technicolor, starring Tyrone Power, Piper Laurie and Julia Adams. "Girls in the Night," successor to "City Across the River," and featuring Joyce Holden, Glenda Farrell, Harvey Lembeck and Leonard Freeman, and introducing Patricia Hardy, is the second February release. It is in color by Technicolor.

"Seminole" will be released in March. It stars Rock Hudson, Barbara Hale, Anthony Quinn and Richard Carlson, and is in color by Technicolor. The second Technicolor March release will be "Gunsmoke" starring Audie Murphy, Susan Cabot and Paul Kelly.

SEE 'BRILLIANT' FUTURE FOR FILMS

MILTON R. RACKMIL, president, and N. J. Blumberg, chairman of the board of Universal Pictures Co., issued the following joint statement as the company announced its releasing plans for the coming months:

Milton R. Rackmil

N. J. Blumberg

"Universal is inspired more than ever by the thought that the future of the motion picture business can be a brilliant one. We are a company of optimism and enthusiasm.

"However, we do not mean that these attributes make us unaware of the many problems that confront this industry.

"We believe that if our industry unites for the general welfare and attacks its problems with concerted effort, nothing but success can result.

"The main objective of Universal is to design its program of pictures so that the theatres of this country can prosper with us.

"In the final analysis the major problem is to get more people into the theatres by offering the public the best in entertainment and the best in publicizing and promotion of good pictures which will provide the entertainment the public seeks."

Universal Will Back Its New Films With Top Showmanship

The pattern followed by Universal during the past year in publicizing its pictures to provide exhibitors with promotional impact at the point of sale will be extended during the coming months, David A. Lipton, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, announces.

David A. Lipton

U-I's advertising and promotional campaigns for 1953, according to Lipton, will be designed to achieve advance national penetration on pictures and personalities, as well as extend the point of sale activities at the theatre level.

"The extensive use of national magazine and Sunday supplement media to reach audiences, including Look, the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, Cosmopolitan, McCall's, Redbook, Woman's Home Companion, Seventeen, fan magazines, American Weekly, This Week and Parade, which were used by U-I during the past year, will be continued and expanded where pictures lend themselves to this type of advertising treatment," Lipton said.

"In this accelerated program, Universal-International will not overlook the trade press, which we have found to be so effective in alerting the exhibitors of the nation to the values inherent in our pictures. Likewise, we will use daily newspapers to an even greater extent than in the past to reach the general public and to get them into the theatres where our pictures are showing.

"National commercial tie-ups also will be used to a greater extent to achieve advance penetration on pictures, with special emphasis being given to advertisers who not only use the national magazines but who can provide access to network television spots."

Universal-International, according to Lipton, will continue to use both television and radio for advance penetration and point of sale selling.

"We believe in the policy of launching our pictures aggressively and backing them right down the line," Lipton declared. He said U-I will continue with promotional campaigns in connection with key city and territorial premieres, using personalities, special events and territorial saturation advertising in the newspapers and on radio. Personalities will not only be used in the keys but in the sub-keys as well.

'U' Will Meet Public Wants

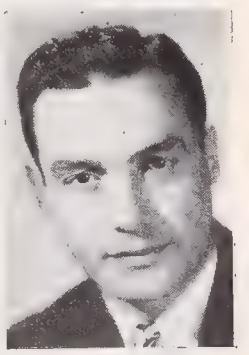
"Universal-International will continue to cater to the public taste in planning future productions and will continue to rely on the public's acceptance of its pictures," states William Goetz, production head.

William Goetz



"It is not a case of anticipated trends," Goetz declared, "but merely conforming to the type of films the public wants and supports. It seems to us that the movie audience looks to Hollywood for entertainment and our platform will be to present a well-balanced program designed to serve this purpose.

"We naturally will keep in mind pleasing both the exhibitor and his customer. If we please the patrons we know we will please the exhibitor. We will make big pictures with the biggest box office names available. Jimmy Stewart, Alan Ladd, Gregory Peck, Tyrone Power, Victor Mature, Dan Dailey, Joel McCrea, Robert Ryan, Barbara Stanwyck, Loretta Young, Ann Blyth, Maureen O'Hara and Ann Sheridan will be seen in our pictures.

"We will also utilize the new stars we have developed on our lot, namely, Tony Curtis, Jeff Chandler, Audie Murphy, Rock Hudson, Piper Laurie, Shelley Winters and Suzan Ball," Goetz said.

Ed Muhl Bolsters Studio Operation

Edward Muhl

Muhl has been with Universal since 1927, when he joined the company's costs division in the accounting department. He was made business manager, then studio general manager.

Grant, Picker Resign Top RKO Executive Posts

Corwin Is Acting Chairman; Zimmerman, Boasberg, Hastings Are Elected to Board; Re-Sale of Hughes' Stock Brought Impasse

Arnold Grant resigned yesterday as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of RKO Pictures Co. and subsidiaries, posts he has held since Oct. 2, following the purchase of Howard Hughes' controlling stock interest by the Ralph Stolkin syndicate.

Arnold Picker, next in command to Grant as executive vice-president, also resigned yesterday.

Grant's resignation left four vacancies on the RKO Pictures board of eight members. Three of the vacancies were filled with the election to the board later in the day of Charles Boasberg, general sales manager; William Zimmerman, company attorney, and Ross Hastings, assistant secretary of the company. The latter is in charge of studio operation at present.

Sherrill Corwin, studio vice-president and one of the members of the Stolkin syndicate, was named acting chairman of the board following Grant's resignation and was directed by the board to consult on the company's current situation with David Tannenbaum, West Coast attorney, who is scheduled to arrive here today by plane. Ned E. Depinet, former RKO Pictures president, and now a consultant to the company, also will be in on the conference.

UPT-ABC MERGER IS RECOMMENDED

FCC Hearing Examiner Approves Consolidation; Also Rules Para. Does Not Control DuMont

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—In a sweeping victory for the film industry, a Federal Communications Commission hearing examiner today approved the proposed United Paramount Theatres-American Broadcasting Company merger and declared that UPT and Paramount Pictures are qualified licensees for radio and television stations.

Hearing examiner Leo Resnick also found that Paramount Pictures does not control Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., opening the way for both the DuMont network and Paramount to apply for additional TV stations.

Resnick's 139-page decision, which gave a clean bill of health communications-wise to the industry and granted all things sought by the various companies, is not final. A final decision will come from the full Commission, although it is rather unlikely that the FCC will overturn Resnick's decision.

The Commission has allotted 20 days from today for requests for oral argument opposing the initial decision. Resnick's decision will doubtless satisfy all industry parties to the case, but the FCC Broadcast Bureau, which opposed the merger and declared in its proposed findings that both Paramount companies should be deprived of their licenses, may request

Says Moral Tone of Films Is Improved

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Hollywood motion pictures increased in "wholesome and moral themes" during the past year, the Catholic Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures said today.

In a 1951-52 report, Most Rev. Michael J. Ready, chairman of the committee, declared that more than 45 per cent of the pictures made in this country were classified as morally unobjectionable for general patronage, and more than 38 per cent as morally unobjectionable for adults. "No picture made by the organized industry was condemned," he said, and the single feature out of a total of 370 which was condemned during the year was an independent production.

In the field of foreign films, the report stated, 24 per cent were classified as morally unobjectionable for adults; and more than 17 per cent were condemned.

The report noted that "offensiveness" in both domestic and foreign films showed a "slow decline from the peak of 1950 when more than 20 per cent of all pictures were found to be morally offensive." Slightly more than 18 per cent of both foreign and domestic pictures during the period were classified as morally objectionable in part for all, the report noted.

Need More Spirited Ads, Says Seadler

Silas F. Seadler, advertising manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, last night addressed the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers showmanship class at the Hotel Woodstock on "The Creation and Planning of Advertising" and recommended a more spirited and informal approach to advertising as a means of bringing attention to newspapers, motion picture pages. He urged that a similar enthusiastic and off-beat approach be used in trade-paper advertising so that the exhibitor would be aware far in advance of the important coming product and be in a position to enthusiastically sell it to his patrons.

He said, "There is a sort of hush-hush that one mustn't mention to editors and publishers that the movie people spend a lot of money in the papers. It is supposed to be undignified. Maybe somebody would think that we were trying to get space by insinuating a money angle. I don't go along with that reasoning.

"It is good business to give to newspaper readers Hollywood glamour and news of films and the film world. Newspaper readers like to read about the movies. The TV interests wouldn't be so eager to get 16mm. films on their screens if they didn't realize that movies have always been and will always be the national pastime."

No-Admission House Filled, Gross Is Up

COLUMBUS, Nov. 13.—Lee J. Hofheimer and Albert L. Sugarman, owners of the Little Theatre, a neighborhood house, were "definitely pleased" today with their adoption of an admission-free policy to protest that 20 per cent Federal amusement tax. They declared last night's receipts from donations dropped into a fishbowl in the lobby by a full house audience brought in more than ticket sales from a normal night.

No amounts were disclosed but they said the popcorn and candy sales were up twice as much as usual. Patrons approved the management's new policy which avoids payment of the tax. Prior to last night the admission was 40 cents for adults and 20 cents for children.

Merger Is Recommended

argument. In granting the merger, Resnick stressed ABC's inability to compete with NBC and CBS due to lack of financial resources, and asserted that UPT would be able to strengthen ABC's competitive network position.

Although he developed at length possible adverse effects which might evolve from a merger between a theatre chain and a radio and television network, his conclusions showed clearly that he felt the net effects of the merger would only be beneficial.

'Will Promote Competition'

"In our opinion," he said, "the merger will not only fail substantially to lessen competition but will promote competition." Resnick declared that "the merger may result in some lessening of some aspects of the competition that exists" between UPT and ABC as separate companies, but maintained that any lessening would be "minor, limited and remote." On the other hand, he said, "the increased competition which the merger will foster appears certain, substantial and immediate."

Based on Resnick's decision, the merged company would have one AM, and one FM and one television station in each of five cities—Los Angeles, San Francisco, Detroit, Chicago and New York. These are all presently owned by ABC. In addition, it would own half of AM and FM stations in New Orleans, which UPT now has a 50 per cent interest in. Resnick's decision also made firm Balaban and Katz's licensing of WBKB-TV in Chicago, but under the terms of the merger agreement that station is to be sold immediately to the Columbia Broadcasting System for $6,000,000, since no company can own two TV stations in the same city under FCC rules. Resnick's decision also approved the sale to CBS.

In ruling on the fitness of UPT and Paramount Pictures to be radio and television licensees, Resnick discussed their past anti-trust violations, but declared finally that "we are impressed by the progress that has been made and we have a reasonable expectation that the anti-trust activities which the Paramount people are abandoning in the unregulated field of motion picture distribution will not be imported into the licensed field of broadcasting." He went on to say that their officers and directors had shown during their testimony "that they understood that broadcast stations are licensed to operate in the public interest," and that free competition is a basic principle of the Communications Act. "They have committed themselves on the record," he continued, "and we shall hold them to it."

In considering the anti-trust issue, Resnick's findings dealt only with the period starting Aug. 7, 1948. In a ruling issued early last summer the FCC cut out from consideration any testimony on anti-trust violations prior to that date.

Since the three year cut-off ruling on anti-trust evidence was made specifically by the Commission to expedite the progress of the merger hearing, there is no way of telling whether the Commission will follow the same rule in other industry cases it hears. Both Paramount companies were affected by the cut-off ruling, and doubtless protection under the three-year cut-off ruling will be claimed by attorneys for other industry applicants with anti-trust records —but whether or not the Commission will grant this protection can't be predicted now.

In finding Paramount Pictures a qualified licensee, Resnick approved the transfer of control of Paramount Television Productions, Inc., operator of KTLA-TV in Los Angeles, from the parent company to Paramount Pictures Corp. He also granted applications of PTI for licenses to cover construction or permits for KTLA and auxiliary stations.

Resnick's ruling that Paramount Pictures does not control DuMont Laboratories knocks out a four year old FCC proposed decision which found control. It enables DuMont to go ahead and apply for two additional television stations besides the three which it now operates. Until now DuMont's three have been lumped in FCC eyes together with KTLA and Balaban and Katz's WBKB. FCC rules prohibit any one licensee from owning more than five television stations.

The control finding also has the effect of permitting Paramount Pictures to apply for four more television stations, since it now will be charged only with KTLA under the five station rule.

Resnick found that "both on paper and in fact Dr. DuMont, as president, directs the activities of the company." He admitted that Paramount does have veto power over some corporate actions, but concluded after examining the possibilities under which the veto power could be used, that it was actually "of little practical significance in so far as control of the five-station rule are concerned."

ABC Official Sees Quick Approval by the FCC

A spokesman for the American Broadcasting Co. said here yesterday that the company was pleased over the opinion of the FCC's hearing examiner that ABC and United Paramount Theatres were qualified to merge.

"Under the circumstances," he said, "the fact that his findings are in favor of the merger and he has recommended approval of the merger to the FCC greatly fortifies our belief that the FCC will make final disposition in the public interest as speedily as possible. And under the merger, it will permit us to put into effect plans for both radio and television broadcasting which will enable us to serve the public better."

Sees RKO Receiver

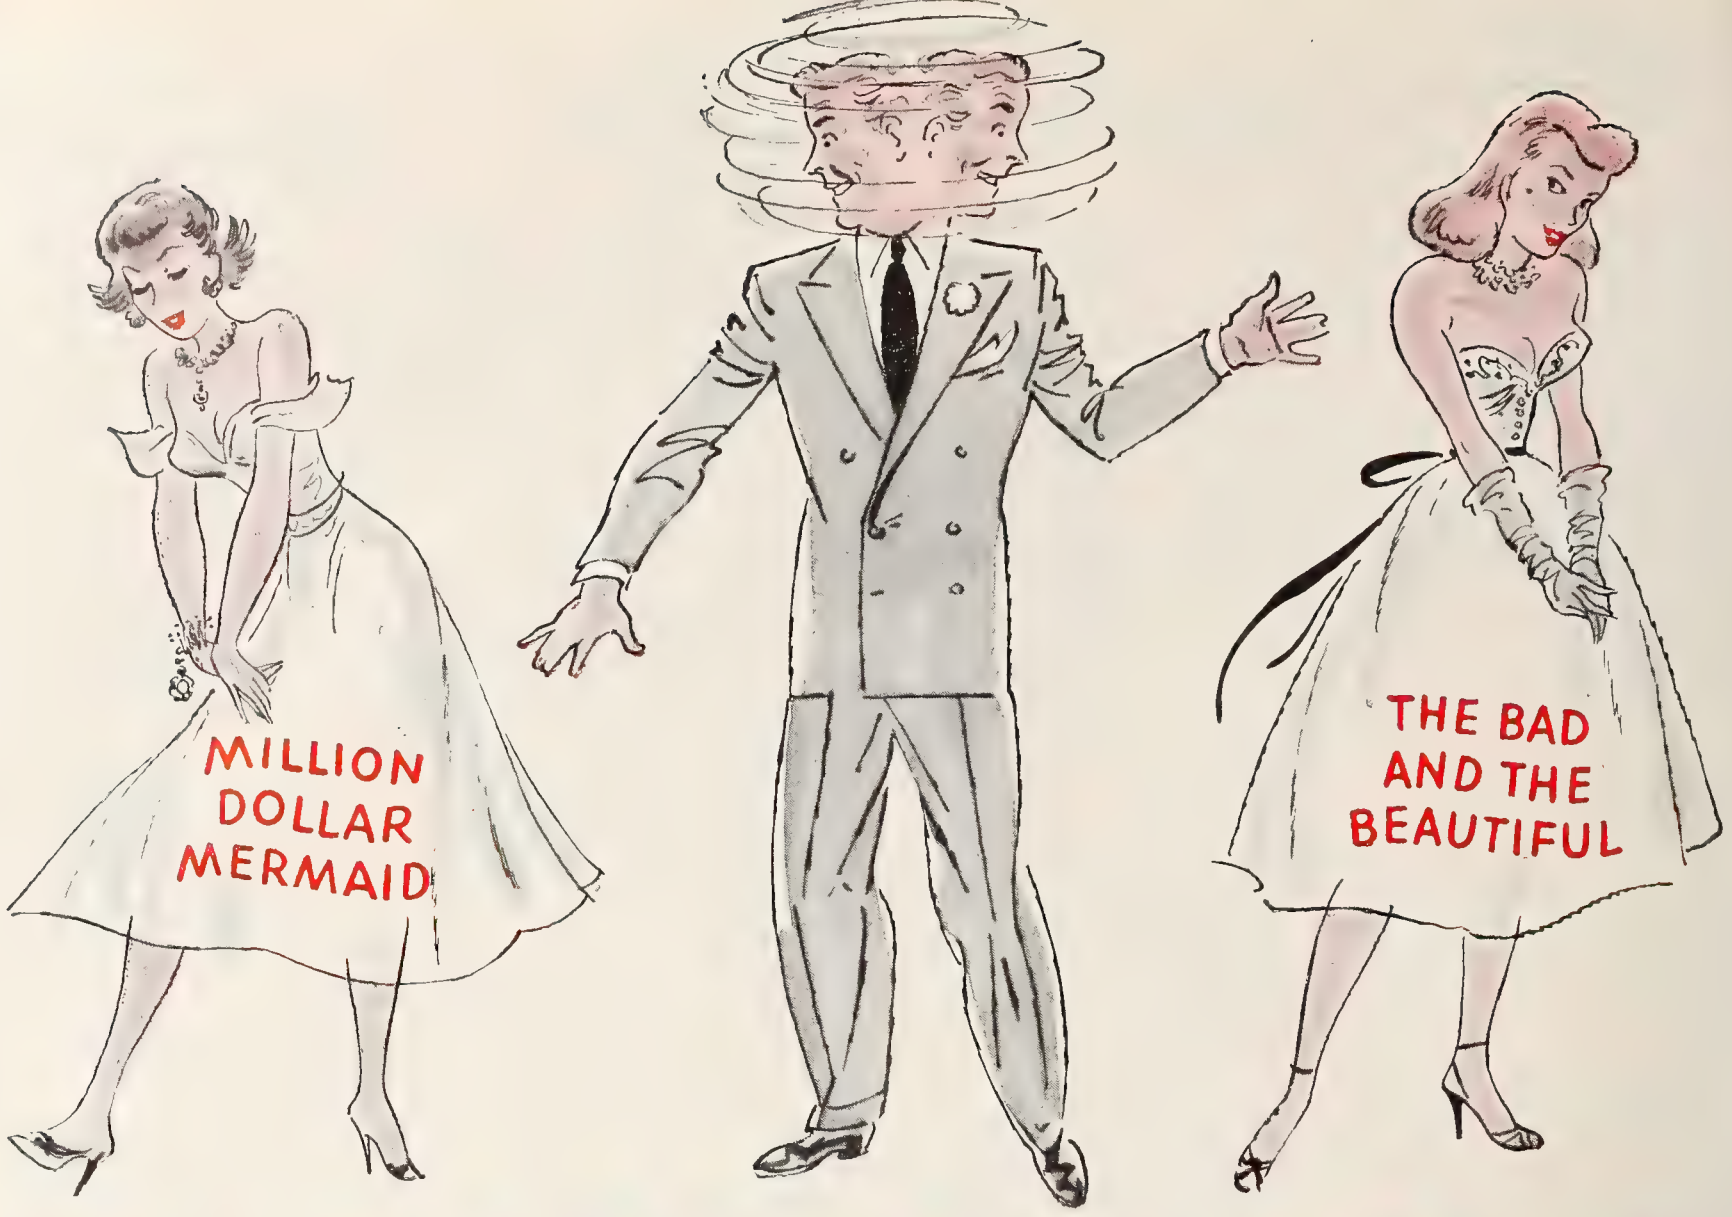
2,500 shares. It names Howard Hughes, who sold his controlling interest in the company to the Ralph Stolkin group and a former director of the company, as defendant, charging him with "gross mismanagement" and resultant losses "of many millions of dollars."



In addition, the complaint also seeks to recover for RKO the $3,000,000, which the suit said that Hughes made on the sale of his stock, charging that the profit was derived from the alleged sale of the officerships and directorships in RKO.

Receivership was sought, according to minority stockholders' counsel Kipnis, "in order to preserve and protect the business and assets of the RKO enterprise, "I desire to add," Kipnis stated, "that the immediate solvency of the companies is in no way involved." The affidavit went on to say that the only reason for naming the Chase National Bank of the City of New York as a party was that it is RKO's stock transfer agent.

He cited the following allegations in support of his request for the appointment of a receiver: the company is losing money at the rate of $100,000 per week; the board of directors is of doubtful legal power; experienced personnel are being lost; the studios are at a standstill while the company has an "unreleased inventory" of $35,000,000; anti-trust litigation endangers its corporate life; and it has "saddled upon it" unfair contract commitments by Hughes.

The complaint also referred to the unfavorable articles on the Stolkin group in the Wall Street Journal and cited the unaudited net loss of $3,712,843 for the company for the first six months of 1952.

The minority stockholders are identified as Eli B. Castleman and his wife, Marion V. Castleman of Detroit, Mich., and Louis Feuerman of this city. RKO Radio Pictures officials were unavailable for comment.

Grant and Picker Resign

Youngman and Silbert of Hollywood, also resigned yesterday as legal counsel to the company, effective immediately. The firm had been retained by the new stockholder group at a fee of $75,000 annually. Grant also had acted as attorney for the Stolkin group in its negotiations for purchase of the Howard Hughes stock in RKO Pictures, consummated in late September. Reportedly, Gordon Youngman, a partner in the law firm, also resigned from the RKO Pictures board yesterday.

Stolkin, A. L. Koolish and William Gorman, the latter a representative of Ray Ryan, one of the members of the Stolkin syndicate, resigned from the board, and Stolkin from the presidency of RKO Pictures, on Oct. 22 following the publication of articles in the Wall Street Journal revealing unfavorable business backgrounds and associations of the three syndicate members.

Gives His Reason

Grant gave as the reason for his resignation his inability to fill the board vacancies and proceed with the reorganization and reactivation of the company. He said he was opposed in his efforts to have new board members elected by Corwin and Edward J. Burke, the latter also a member of the Stolkin syndicate, and both of whom are members of the board.

The reluctance of Burke and Corwin to proceed with election of new directors was attributed to the continuing negotiations in Chicago for the sale by the Stolkin group of its 29 per cent stock interest in RKO Pictures to new owners. They took the position that in the event the company was sold, it would most likely be necessary to reconstitute the board again and, therefore, they preferred to wait upon the outcome of the negotiations.

Grant said he believed the situation to be urgent and proposed the election to the board yesterday of Robert Butler of St. Paul and Lawrence Cowen of New York, in the absence of nominations by Burke and Corwin. Grant said he was unable to obtain seconds for his nominations and, feeling his "hands were manacled" and that his continuance as "an officer, director or employee of the company would be a false assurance to stockholders, employes and others that the affairs of the corporation are moving forward with reasonable satisfaction," he could not remain in "such a misleading and futile position."

Remaining as directors apart from those elected yesterday are: Burke, Corwin and W. H. Clark, RKO Pictures treasurer.

May Ask Depinet

There was some speculation that if a sale of the Stolkin syndicate's stock is not consummated within the next day or two Depinet might be asked to resume the helm, if only for an interim period. Depinet declined to comment on the report yesterday.

Grant's resignation was effective as of yesterday and his statement issued to the press made it clear that he had also cancelled his employment contract providing for a salary of $2,000 per week. Picker's resignation also was effective immediately. He will remain with United Artists as a vice-president in charge of foreign distribution and a stockholder in the company. The U. A. board is scheduled to meet within the next few days to reinstate him, having released him at his own request only six weeks ago to accept the RKO Pictures executive vice-presidency. Since then Picker has been dividing his time between RKO Pictures and U. A., not having been scheduled to go to RKO on a full time basis until next Monday.

No News from Chicago

Meanwhile, there was no official indication from Chicago that a sale of the Stolkin group's RKO Pictures stock had been concluded. Negotiations were said to be continuing there with Matthew J. Fox, head of Films for Television, a partner in U. A. and a former vice-president and director of Universal, and also with a syndicate represented by Col. Henry Crown of the Hilton Hotel interests. Conversations also have been held by the Stolkin syndicate with other individuals and groups concerning a possible sale of the stock.

Grant's statement to the press traced the start of the present situation to the publication by the Wall Street Journal of the stories concerning the business backgrounds of Stolkin, Koolish and Ryan, which led to their resignations from RKO.

Grant's statement said: "It was obvious that the unfavorable publicity which had been attached to Messrs. Stolkin, Koolish and Gorman (the latter only as representative of Mr. Ryan) resulted in these three men being a detriment, rather than a positive contributing factor, to the future welfare of RKO. Accordingly, I demanded and received their resignations as officers and directors of RKO and its subsidiaries."

Grant related that since those resignations, on Oct. 22, he had made "every effort" to obtain well qualified men for the directorate and on Nov. 6 was prepared to nominate such men. He said that Burke then informed him that negotiations for the sale of the syndicate's stock holdings were in progress and that he, Burke, also was searching for independent directors, and requested a postponement to last Tuesday.

Grant said he acquiesced to the brief delay and when no action was taken at the Tuesday meeting he agreed to a postponement until yesterday with the understanding that action would have to be taken then. When Burke and Corwin yesterday again said they had no nominees, Grant said, he proposed Butler and Cowen. The former is a member of the board of the American National Bank, president of Walter Butler Co., construction engineers, and a former Ambassador Extraordinary to Cuba. Cowen is president of the Lionel Corp., toy train manufacturer.

"The action of the Board taken today manacles my hands. It is evidently impossible to reconstitute the Board at this time with persons of sufficient calibre to meet the corporation's problems. This in turn makes it impossible to have within the corporate structure the atmosphere of strength and integrity which is so necessary to attract and hold employees of outstanding calibre; to interest the investing community in acquiring the stock and participating in the future of your corporation; to justify banks in extending or enlarging credit to the corporation, and to obtain and maintain the faith and friendship of the industry in which we work, the theatres that buy our products, and the competitors with whom we are interdependent for friendly business intercourse.

"It is my hope that this report of the facts of the matter, which I am sending to stockholders at my own expense, and the action which I have taken, may lead to an early solution of the corporation's problems and break the current impasse. I do not doubt that there are a number of men of outstanding ability and integrity, capable of leading the corporation out of its troubles, who would consider it a privilege to undertake the challenge and opportunity if invited to do so by a soundly constituted, full and independent board of directors," Grant concluded.

Weitman to Head 'Palsy' Telethon

Robert M. Weitman, vice-president of United Paramount Theatres, yesterday was named to head the talent committee of the "Celebrity Parade for Cerebral Palsy" telethon. The 18½-hour TV show, originating over WJZ-TV (Channel 7) will be continuous from 8 P.M. Dec. 6 to 2:30 P.M. the next day.

Robert Weitman

Weitman said he was confident that all branches of show business would cooperate as willingly this year as they did for the same cause last year. It is expected that talent which would ordinarily cost at least $1,250,000 will volunteer their services to make this the "most outstanding star-studded entertainment event ever presented," Weitman said.

* Pictures featured in M. P. Daily advertising during past 6 weeks.

The Vital Spark that ignites the interest of exhibitors for specific pictures, so that it can flame into that enthusiasm which inspires real showmanship, is a soundly planned program of trade advertising. Without that, no exhibitor can be blamed for lacking in excitement over pictures which are offered to him virtually "cold".

It is obvious that the extent of a distributor's confidence in product he has available is generally indicated by either the telling—or lack of telling about it—in trade paper messages.

There never was a greater need for good product. There never was a greater interest among exhibitors to know about the product they should plan to obtain and exploit. There never was a keener readership of trade paper messages.

Requisites for successful motion picture trade paper advertising of good product are: (1) Start it soon enough; (2) Make it effectively proclaim the box-office values of the picture; (3) Publish a sufficient continuity of sales messages to impress and remind.

Soundly planned trade advertising is the basic telling that leads to successful selling. Its cost is dimes that bring dollars. It is the vital spark for the power that produces greatest results!

"The Thief of Venice"

(Robert Haggiag—20th Century-Fox)

VENICE, with its many famous landmarks, is the locale of this well-made independent production that is an actionful costume drama containing the necessary elements for a healthy box-office. The late Maria Montez is the sole star name in the cast and she turned in a zestful performance as the tempestuous, peasant girl in love with handsome Paul Christian, the leader of an underground movement to thwart the cunning, power-mad "Great Inquisitor," Massimo Serato.

The screenplay by Jesse L. Lasky, Jr. is of a familiar variety but John Brahm's cognizant direction has neatly emphasized the swordplay, and the intrigue. Serato poisons the head of the government and has admiral Camillo Pilotto killed in an ambush, thus destroying his main opposition, but Christian, the admiral's main assistant, escapes. Christian falls into the hands of slaves and becomes their leader against Serato.

Serato plans to marry Pilotto's daughter, Faye Marlowe, to gain prestige. When Miss Montez is captured by Serato's men and tortured she refuses to talk and to obtain her release, Christian kidnaps Miss Marlowe. He falls in love with her rather than Miss Montez and foils the nuptial ceremony by leading a revolt. This is successful through the bribing of Serato's guards' commander, Aldo Silvani. Christian kills Serato in a duel and chooses Miss Marlowe at the fadeout.

Robert Haggiag produced and made excellent use of the impressive Italian scenery as well as cleverly combining long shots of the principals in action with a minimum of dialogue. The result is an attractive, exciting film that maintains pace and interest throughout, that lends itself to solid exploitation. 20th-Fox has indicated it intends to use a heavy advertising campaign and the combination of Venice, lots of colorful swordplay, and Miss Montez should prove alluring to ticket buyers.

A largely Italian cast, headed by Silvani who provides some fine comic relief, includes Louis Saltamerenda, Guido Celano, Mario Tosi, Paul Stoppa and Leon Renoir.

Running time, 91 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

WALTER PASHKIN

"Blue Canadian Rockies"

(Columbia Pictures)

GENE Autry stars in this Western entry that is routine except for the inclusion of more songs than usual. Some of these are refreshingly rendered by a yodel-type singer, Carolina Cotton, who also effectively engages in some comedy antics with Pat Buttram, a standard performer in Autry films.

The story has Autry assigned by wealthy ranch owner Don Beddoe to break up an impending marriage of Beddoe's dude-ranch owning daughter, Gail Davis, to fortune hunter Ross Ford. There are fights with the adjacent lumber camp men who are angry over the loss of work because Miss Davis has built a game preserve and kept her trees intact.

Miss Davis' rule of not allowing her men to carry guns finds Autry and Buttram in situations where they can only retreat. After a mysterious shooting and the subsequent murder of a Canadian Mountie, Autry establishes that the real culprit is not Ford, but an aging caretaker, Tom London, a bitter, one-time partner of Beddoe's, who desired revenge after being bought out.

Performances, production and direction are adequate. The Autry name is a definite box-office attraction.

Armand Schaefer produced, George Archainbaud directed, and Gerald Geraghty wrote the tale.

Others in the cast are Mauritz Hugo, Gene Roth, John Merton, David Garcia, Bob Woodward and the Cass County Boys.

Running time, 58 minutes. General audience classification. November release.

"South Pacific Trail"

(Republic Pictures)

REX Allen and Estelita are the main performers of this ordinary Western that haphazardly mixes outdoor action with songs and melodrama. There is enough of the usual fisticuffs, skullduggery, shooting and hard riding to please the Western fan and additional trappings may prove attractive to others.

The screenplay by Arthur Orloff concerns the efforts of fortune-hunting Douglas Evans to marry Estelita, who is the granddaughter of wealthy rancher Nestor Paiva. Paiva's ranch foreman, Roy Barcroft, and outlaws hijack an entire train for the gold it carries. Paiva, a scheduled passenger on the train, is reported missing but actually stopped off to see Allen and his friends.

Meanwhile, Evans has joined forces with Barcroft and both try to stop Allen's investigation of the train's disappearance. Eventually, Allen convinces Estelita of Evans' true nature and in a showdown battle in a dynamite-laden mine shaft, Evans and Barcroft are killed. The rest of the gang is imprisoned, the gold is salvaged and Allen is happily employed by Paiva.

The Rhythm Riders join in vocal renditions, songs heard are: "I'll Sing A Love Song," "The Railroad Corral" and "Hide Away Your Troubles." Slim Pickens, Allen's pal, provides some comic touches. The cast also includes Joe McGuinn and Forrest Taylor. Edward J. White was associate producer and William Witney directed.

Running time, 60 minutes. General audience classification.

"Pony Soldier"

(20th Century-Fox)

A LUSTY outdoor action drama in color by Technicolor has been fashioned by producer Samuel G. Engel. Starring Tyrone Power, the film should find its most receptive audience among those who like their film fare packed with fisticuffs, Indian raids and hand-to-hand battles unto death, all done within formula lines.

Featured in "Pony Soldier" are the activities of the Canadian Royal Mounted Police. Tyrone Power is given the task of tracking down the erring Canadian Cree tribe. The Crees had gone over the border to hunt buffalo in Montana and to war against their tribal enemies, the Blackfeet and Sioux. In a rousing battle with U.S. troops, the Canadian Crees are driven back. On their way home, they capture two white hostages, a young girl, Penny Edwards, and a ranch-hand.

Humor is supplied by Thomas Gomez, who plays a half-breed Indian aiding the Canadian "mounties". Among the most vivid scenes are those in the Cree camp, where the camera takes in the colorful tribal customs of the people. Tyrone Power, after many set-backs and following numerous hair-raising fights, finally convinces the Crees to return to their reservation and free the hostages.

Joseph M. Newman directed. John C. Higgins wrote the screenplay which was based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Garnett Weston. Others in the cast include Cameron Mitchell, Robert Horton, Anthony Earl Numkena and Adeline De Walt Reynolds.

Running time, 82 minutes. General audience classification. November release.

MURRAY HOROWITZ

"Angel Street"

(Commercial Pictures)

THIS English version of the Patrick Hamilton play of the same name is an adroit, suspenseful drama that is skillfully performed by a cast headed by Anton Walbrook, Diana Wynyard and Robert Newton. The American version under the title, "Gaslight," was released in 1944 and was a success. The stars and the theme can well be exploited.

Set in the hansom-cab and gaslight days in England, almost all of the action takes place outside and inside two small houses. There is plenty of shadowy atmosphere and director Thorold Dickinson has utilized the usual pulse-beating devices while maintaining pace and interest.

The screenplay by A. R. Rawlinson and Bridget Boland has emphasized the psychological tricks played by Walbrook in an attempt to drive his wealthy wife, Miss Wynyard, insane. Frank Pettingell, a retired police inspector, remembers Walbrook as a young fellow who disappeared from the neighborhood 20 years previous when an old lady who possessed some famous rubies was murdered. The house Walbrook moves into is the same in which the old lady was murdered; her rubies were not recovered.

Newton appears but briefly as Miss Wynyard's brother who eventually comes to town to see her and helps Pettingell gather evidence on Walbrook. The latter is trapped and taken by the police at the fade-out, after Miss Wynyard accidentally uncovers the missing rubies.

Cathleen Cordell is properly saucy as the arrogant maid who catches Walbrook's eye. The cast includes Jimmy Hanley, Minnie Rayner, Marie Wright and Mary Hinton. The Darmora Ballet performs in a brief but arresting music hall sequence. John Corfield produced and there is an appropriate musical score by Richard Addinsell.

Running time, 80 minutes. General audience classification. November release.

"Outpost in Malaya"

(J. Arthur Rank—United Artists)

BANDIT-RIDDLED present day Malaya is the background of this suspenseful drama that stars Claudette Colbert and Jack Hawkins as an indomitable couple who run a rubber plantation. The plantation backgrounds, natives, and an Indian musical background make for impressive authenticity. Ken Annakin's direction has emphasized the mounting anguish of the people awaiting an attack. It opens at a rather slow pace. However, there are several exciting scenes such as a guerrilla being tracked down by the entire plantation staff, and a close-up battle between a cobra and a mongoose, as well as a thrill-packed finale when the bandits and Hawkins' men are engaged in hand-to-hand combat.

There is a romantic problem as Miss Colbert thinks Hawkins' intensive preparations are a threat to their marriage, for he has time for little else and desires her to go to England with their son, Peter Asher. Before she can leave, the bandits attack and in the gruelling pitched battle that ensues, she and Hawkins realize their love is greater than their fears. The bandits are beaten off and their marriage is on more solid ground than ever.

Miss Colbert and Hawkins turn in solid performances and are adequately supported by a British-native cast. Notable are Anthony Steel, Ram Gopal, Maria Baillie, Jeremy Spenser, Tom Macauley, and Victor Maddern. John Stafford produced. The original story and screenplay were written by Peter Proud and Guy Elmes.

This is a well-played drama set against a background that is prominent in the current news. The timeliness and the action are exploitation angles and the Colbert name has marquee power.

Running time, 88 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 21.

Opposition in Allied Board to Arbitration

Convention May Be Asked to Decide Issue; Cole's Proposal and Renewal with COMPO Favored; An 'Anything Can Happen' Meet

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The future role of Allied States in industry efforts to complete an arbitration plan was still uncertain here today as the Allied board of directors neared the end of two days of meetings in the Morrison Hotel.

Reports were that the board was about evenly divided on Allied's continued participation in the arbitration endeavor and that should a deadlock be reached the matter could be referred by the board to the general convention which opens here tomorrow morning.

Should such a development occur, it is freely predicted here that "anything could happen." A large segment of the delegates already on hand are in a mood for spirited complaint and rebellious proposals. At the root of it are their charges that film terms continue to increase in severity on every good picture while theatre attendance evidences no sustained improvement.

Unofficially, it was reported that considerable sentiment within the board favored non-participation by Allied without new provisions being added to the proposed arbitration draft which would meet more fully the current widespread trade practice complaints of Allied officers and members.

On the other hand, there is reported to be strong sentiment also for proposing minor changes in the draft and

FROM the start of the industry's campaign for repeal of the 20 per cent Federal admissions tax it has been evident that Congressmen are most readily interested, and more disposed to help, whenever they have been confronted with actual dollars and cents proof that the tax is injurious to theatre business.

Especially has this been true whenever such evidence has been presented by groups of small exhibitors in meetings with their Congressmen. Almost invariably, in such instances, pledges by the legislators to vote for repeal of the tax are quickly forthcoming. Moreover, such dollars and cents evidence of the crippling effects of the tax on the exhibitor's business is certain to play an important part in the industry's arguments before the House Ways and Means committee when hearings are held on repeal of the tax.

The fight for repeal may be won or lost on the basis of the response to the request of the National Tax Repeal Campaign Committee for this information. Any exhibitor

Dallas, Nov. 16.—"And the rains came," stated executive director of Texas COMPO, Kyle Rorex, speaking about the short feature "Prayer for Rain" which was run a week in most Texas theatres with such commendable response from civic, state, county and city officials, members of the Ministerial Alliance, and hundreds of appreciative Texans. He said "the great response in telegrams, letters, and personal testimonials to theatre managers has been greater than for any other COMPO activity."

Ed Rowley, president of Rowley United Theatres, stated at a Texas COMPO executive board meeting that "our theatres have frequently served the church, school, Red Cross and Community Chest for their many worthy causes, and it is only natural for our screens to be available for any condition such as the drought which so vitally affects the community and the entire state."

whose records show that the tax has resulted in a loss to his operation, or whose tax payments exceed the profits of such operations, should gladly forego his natural reluctance and make such figures available to the campaign committee for, in doing so, he is taking the first and most effective step in remedying an unjust situation and in bringing about relief which may be his business salvation.

Other evidence of great value to the committee in its campaign is that which demonstrates the tax has prevented exhibitors from making necessary or ordinary physical improvements and replacements in his theatre, and statements from qualified persons, such as realtors and merchants, on the depreciation of realty values and decline in shopping in the vicinity of theatres already closed.

Such information is vital to the successful prosecution of the tax repeal campaign. Exhibitors who have access to it will serve themselves and the campaign well by making it available at once to their state and Congressional District tax campaign committees.

SUBSTANTIAL evidence that financing for independent production, almost non-existent for long, is again becoming available under good auspices.

The recent arrangement between Chemical Bank & Trust Co. and United Artists, under which the latter can put together its own packages and make primary financing available for 10 such productions, is heartening evidence of the trend, as is the completion of Edward Small's new financing agreement with Bankers Trust Co., which was cited by the bank as an indication of its confidence in the management of UA, through which Small releases. The developments give independent production a big lift.

firm of Bautzer, Grant, Youngman and Silbert of Hollywood. Arnold Grant, who resigned as board chairman of the company last Thursday, will return to the law firm and is not expected to resume his post on the board of directors of Columbia Pictures, from which he resigned last September.

Meanwhile, United Artists president Arthur Krim officially confirmed that Arnold Picker, who quit his post as executive vice-president of RKO, will continue as a stockholder and vice-president of UA in charge of foreign distribution. Picker resigned just four days before he was slated to assume his RKO post on a full-time basis.

Tannenbaum Here

It was learned that David Tannenbaum, West Coast attorney, has arrived here for consultations with Corwin. As far as could be ascertained no conferences have been held between the newly-constituted board and Ned E. Depinet, former president of the company who is now a consultant.

It is understood that Harry Pimstein will continue in his post as assistant to the board chairman and a vice-president of the company.

The outcome of Chicago negotiations for the Stolkin group's RKO stock, by Matthew Fox, head of Films for Television, a partner in U.A. and a former vice-president and director of Universal, will have an important bearing on RKO's future, as will the outcome of court proceedings here next Friday. On that day, RKO attorneys will be asked to show cause why the company should not be put in receivership as requested in a minority stockholders' suit filed in New York Supreme Court. Sale of the stock could bring about an early reorganization and reactivation of the company.

Crown Group Interested

Among other groups sounding out the possibilities of buying out the Stolkin syndicate's controlling interest is one headed by Col. Henry Crown, of the Hilton Hotel interests, and others.

In the meantime, trading of RKO stock on the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday and Friday was heavy, with the stock declining a half point in the two-day period. The biggest drop occurred on Thursday, with the stock opening at 3⅞ and closing at 3½, for a net loss of ⅜. On Friday, it dropped another eighth, while the total number of shares traded that day reached 16,700.

Fred Schaefer Leaving RKO; Press Book Editor 21 Years

Fred Schaefer, press book editor for RKO Radio Pictures for the last 21 years, left the company at the weekend. Before joining RKO, Schaefer was with United Artists for 10 years and previously was with General Film Co. and Vitagraph. No successor has been named.

Fadiman Leaves RKO Radio Pictures Executive Post

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 16.—William J. Fadiman has resigned his RKO Radio executive post which he assumed in 1947. He had been M-G-M story editor in New York and here 12 years before joining RKO.

WHO STARTED THIS, ANYWAY?

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Adjudication of the rival claims of Texas and Indiana exhibitors for the 1952 Showmanship Crown will be attempted before a three-judge statutory court in the course of the Allied States convention here this week.

William C. McCraw, bargain-rate attorney from Texas, his opponents claim, will endeavor to represent showmen of that state. Abram F. Myers, who refused a proffered Texas retainer in favor of a more valuable one—a case of scotch—will try to present Indiana's case—legal, not Scotch. Myers says, however, he is open to a better offer and really thinks it would be nice to be able "to represent someone with a semblance of justice on his side—even a bare one."

Myers added that the oratory of the price-cutting "McCrawl is as empty as the Trinity River, and you know how dry that is."

Texas has requested a change of venue on the grounds that showmanship is an alien subject, entirely outside the jurisdiction of Chicago exhibitors.

Levy Blames Majors For Industry's Ills

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The major fault for current industry problems was laid in the laps of distribution at the weekend by Herman M. Levy, general counsel for the Theatre Owners of America. Speaking at a meeting of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Metropolitan District of Columbia, Levy said "it would be most difficult to find an industry more bedevilled by intra-industry litigation and more debilitated by internecine warfare than the motion picture industry."

These factors, Levy said, to a great degree, have been responsible for its vulnerability to attack from without, adding that the "pity of the situation is that while all segments have some measure or consciousness of the situation, little or nothing (with the exception of the progress to date in evolving a system of arbitration) has been done to eliminate the source of difficulty."

Levy said that some of the fault may lie with exhibition, because a declining box-office has impelled reckless and unbusinesslike statements and actions by exhibition. But Levy listed a number of reasons as to why he thought distribution should take the brunt of the blame for the situation. They were: (1) the continued unnecessary use of competitive bidding; (2) maintaining of film rentals at high levels not commensurate with the quality of particular product, nor the box-office receipts from that product; (3) the insistence on adhering to a so-called national policy concerning film rental, without regard to specific situations; (4) the policy of demanding excessive terms for what are considered by distribution to be unusual pictures, and thus indirectly compelling exhibitors to advance admission prices, (5) encouraging exhibitors to move up to prior runs and, thereupon, to employ competitive bidding.

in the amusement industry. That these messages should be carried to every segment of the business and to every worker therein, at no cost to the hospital management, and with no deduction from the funds raised by the Christmas Salute campaign emphasizes the true import of the program and is accepted on behalf of the Will Rogers Hospital with sincere thanks!"

French Pact

not call for subsidies to the French industry, as was the case in the consummation of the Italian film agreement which required a portion of earned revenue to be diverted for subsidy loans to Italian producers. It is also reported that an agreement was made for closer cooperation between American companies and the French film industry, as well as the French government.

Because of the absence of a subsidy clause in the agreement, it is believed here that the SIMPP will approve the pact, although negotiations by Johnston were only for MPEA members. James Mulvey, Eastern representative for SIMPP, said at the weekend that he believed the pact would be agreeable to the association, although he had not read the text.

Johnston, after returning to Washington Friday afternoon, was slated to come back to New York on Saturday and leave by plane for Rio de Janeiro. He was accompanied by Mrs. Johnston; his secretary, Mary Smith, and Robert J. Corkery, a member of the international department of Motion Picture Association of America. He will spend this week in Rio and leave for Buenos Aires next Sunday. He will be gone approximately three weeks on association business.

the motion picture industry" by stressing that the advertising and exploitation segment of the $100,000,000 to be invested in production and distribution during 1953, will be spent, for the greater part, in local point-of-sale merchandising.

He disclosed greater emphasis will be on intra-division campaign coordination and integration in the months to come, noting that field men can guide alert showmen to larger gross realities by carefully gauging ways whereby advantages can be derived from local exhibition conditions.

2,400 See Paramount's 'Road to Bali' Here

Approximately 2,400 theatre owners and managers, newspapermen and special guests from all branches of show business attended the special preview of Paramount's "Road to Bali," at New York's Bijou Theatre on Friday.

Allied Meet

giving the resultant plan the minimum 18 months trial, during which Allied members could resort to arbitration if they wished or refrain from doing so, and at the conclusion of the trial period decide with other participants whether or not arbitration should be continued, revised or abandoned.

If the board is unable to reach a clear-cut decision at its final meeting tonight, indications are the convention will be asked to express its wish on the subject.

There was also reported to be strong support within the board for H. A. Cole's proposal that Allied officers withdraw from administrative positions in such cooperative all-industry endeavors as the final preparation of the arbitration plan, the direction of the industry campaign for admission tax repeal and executive positions in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

Stands Better Chance

Reports have it that Cole's proposal stands an even better chance of being accepted by the board than does the industry arbitration plan, at least without conditions attached, as they probably will be to the latter if the board goes for arbitration at all.

As previously explained by Allied, Cole's proposal would not remove Allied members from participation in the tax repeal campaign, nor from membership in COMPO. It would simply terminate the services of Allied leaders in executive positions in connection with such activities. Cole is co-chairman of the tax repeal campaign; Trueman Rembusch is one of the co-administrators of COMPO and Abram F. Myers is on the arbitration drafting committee. These and others would withdraw from such official positions, while the Allied rank and file could continue in unofficial working capacities, particularly in the tax repeal campaign, as they saw fit.

In this connection, there appeared to be no reason to believe that the Allied board will not approve the organization's renewed membership in COMPO before it adjourns tonight.

Cole's proposal was made with the idea in mind that Allied officers could devote more time to prosecuting trade practice complaints irking Allied members if relieved of the all-industry assignments.

Much about those complaints no doubt will be heard on the floor of the convention in the next three days and in the film clinics, organized individually for the various classes of theatre operations and situations represented here. The clinics will open tomorrow afternoon and continue through Tuesday morning.

Charles Niles will preside over the small town clinics; Ben Marcus, large towns; John Wolfberg, large cities; Morris Finkel, key neighborhood and sub-runs; Rube Shor, drive-ins, and Irving Dollinger, circuit buyers and bidding.

Nearly 800 persons are expected to register for the convention, approximately 500 of them for the Allied meetings and 300 for the Theatre Equipment Manufacturers Association and Theatre Equipment Dealers Association conventions and trade show. The huge

In the THEATRE Equipment World . . .

. . . with RAY GALLO

BY the time this column reaches print, we'll be in the city of Mrs. O'Leary's rambunctious cow, attending the seventh annual joint conventions of the Theatre Equipment & Supply Manufacturers Association and the Theatre Equipment Dealers Association, with the big event being the TESMA Trade Show, which for the first time is also a feature of a national exhibitor convention, the concurrent meeting of Allied States.

J. Robert Hoff

Oscar Neu

The TESMA Trade Show is the sixth, the exhibits having started in 1946 with the revival of TESMA after the war (none was held last year). TESMA itself, however, is now 12 years old, having been born in Chicago when Oscar Neu, president of Neumade Products, Inc., gathered a group of manufacturers in a hotel room to organize it. He headed it continuously from that time until last year, when J. Robert Hoff —Bob to you— was voted to the top from the vice-presidency.

Ray Colvin

TEDA is older than that —in fact, TESMA was more or less a result of the formation of the dealers' association, the moving spirit of which was the late Joe E. Robin. TEDA is now a real factor in the business, with Ray Colvin its executive director for many years and still in that post.

A new type of rubber lobby matting, a variation of corrugated-perforated mat, has been introduced by the American Mat Corp., Toledo. In announcing the new mat, D. W. Moor, Jr., president, pointed out that it is topped with a triple-ridged surface identical to that of the company's premium-priced link matting. The mat, available in black or rose, is 5/16-inch thick.

An open forum will occupy the afternoon following the demonstration. On Wednesday morning convention committees will hold their meetings and will report back at an open forum for the closing session Wednesday afternoon.

Numerous social events for the ladies have been prepared and the convention will close with the traditional banquet Wednesday night.

Richey Says TEDA Can Help Industry

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The equipment field is a very definite part of the overall motion picture industry and it has its role in revitalizing interest in the theatre, H. M. Richey, exhibitor and public relations director for M-G-M, told the Theatrical Equipment Dealers Association here today. Speaking at a luncheon for members and guests of the Theatrical Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association convention, Richey said that if there can be added to theatre-going that old-time glamor and super-equipment that goes with comfort, there is nothing that can stop the public from realizing that "motion pictures are your greatest entertainment buy."

Richey said it was the equipment men who fanned the enthusiasm of the exhibitors to make theatres better. He said that for too long the part played by the equipment men in the transposition from nickelodeons to great theatres has been overlooked.

Opposition in Allied Board to Arbitration

Convention May Be Asked to Decide Issue; Cole's Proposal and Renewal with COMPO Favored; An 'Anything Can Happen' Meet

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The future role of Allied States in industry efforts to complete an arbitration plan was still uncertain here today as the Allied board of directors neared the end of two days of meetings in the Morrison Hotel.

Reports were that the board was about evenly divided on Allied's continued participation in the arbitration endeavor and that should a deadlock be reached the matter could be referred by the board to the general convention which opens here tomorrow morning.

Should such a development occur, it is freely predicted here that "anything could happen." A large segment of the delegates already on hand are in a mood for spirited complaint and rebellious proposals. At the root of it are their charges that film terms continue to increase in severity on every good picture while theatre attendance evidences no sustained improvement.

Unofficially, it was reported that considerable sentiment within the board favored non-participation by Allied without new provisions being added to the proposed arbitration draft which would meet more fully the current widespread trade practice complaints of Allied officers and members.

On the other hand, there is reported to be strong sentiment also for proposing minor changes in the draft and

FROM the start of the industry's campaign for repeal of the 20 per cent Federal admissions tax it has been evident that Congressmen are most readily interested, and more disposed to help, whenever they have been confronted with actual dollars and cents proof that the tax is injurious to theatre business.

Especially has this been true whenever such evidence has been presented by groups of small exhibitors in meetings with their Congressmen. Almost invariably, in such instances, pledges by the legislators to vote for repeal of the tax are quickly forthcoming. Moreover, such dollars and cents evidence of the crippling effects of the tax on the exhibitor's business is certain to play an important part in the industry's arguments before the House Ways and Means committee when hearings are held on repeal of the tax.

The fight for repeal may be won or lost on the basis of the response to the request of the National Tax Repeal Campaign Committee for this information. Any exhibitor

110 Permits in French Pact

A new one-year agreement, retroactive to July 1, has been concluded between the Motion Picture Export Association and the French government, and the number of import permits to be issued to U. S. companies remain at 110, the same as last year. Eric Johnston, MPEA president, and Joyce O'Hara, vice-president, returned here from Paris negotiations Friday and met immediately with the association's executive board.

Member companies of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers will be allowed 11 permits, also the same number as were permitted for the year ended July 1.

While details on the matter of remittances were not disclosed publicly, it is understood that the pact does

40¢ Minimum Sought By TNT on 'Carmen'

Theatre Network Television is seeking a 40 cents per seat guarantee against 50 per cent of the net box-office receipts in its sale to TV-equipped theatres of the Metropolitan Opera telecast of "Carmen" on Dec. 11.

Announcement of the TNT event, the first entertainment show to be made available for theatre television, was met with keen interest in exhibition circles here, but in some quarters opposition was voiced at the price sought. Nathan Halpern, TNT president, refused comment on the minimum guarantee against the percentage figure, learned from other quarters.

'And the Rains Came' with a Flood of Commendations for Film on Drought

Dallas, Nov. 16.—"And the rains came," stated executive director of Texas COMPO, Kyle Rorex, speaking about the short feature "Prayer for Rain" which was run a week in most Texas theatres with such commendable response from civic, state, county and city officials, members of the Ministerial Alliance, and hundreds of appreciative Texans. He said "the great response in telegrams, letters, and personal testimonials to theatre managers has been greater than for any other COMPO activity."

Ed Rowley, president of Rowley United Theatres, stated at a Texas COMPO executive board meeting that "our theatres have frequently served the church, school, Red Cross and Community Chest for their many worthy causes, and it is only natural for our screens to be available for any condition such as the drought which so vitally affects the community and the entire state."

whose records show that the tax has resulted in a loss to his operation, or whose tax payments exceed the profits of such operations, should gladly forego his natural reluctance and make such figures available to the campaign committee for, in doing so, he is taking the first and most effective step in remedying an unjust situation and in bringing about relief which may be his business salvation.

Other evidence of great value to the committee in its campaign is that which demonstrates the tax has prevented exhibitors from making necessary or ordinary physical improvements and replacements in his theatre, and statements from qualified persons, such as realtors and merchants, on the depreciation of realty values and decline in shopping in the vicinity of theatres already closed.

Such information is vital to the successful prosecution of the tax repeal campaign. Exhibitors who have access to it will serve themselves and the campaign well by making it available at once to their state and Congressional District tax campaign committees.

SUBSTANTIAL evidence that financing for independent production, almost non-existent for long, is again becoming available under good auspices.

The recent arrangement between Chemical Bank & Trust Co. and United Artists, under which the latter can put together its own packages and make primary financing available for 10 such productions, is heartening evidence of the trend, as is the completion of Edward Small's new financing agreement with Bankers Trust Co., which was cited by the bank as an indication of its confidence in the management of UA, through which Small releases. The developments give independent production a big lift.

firm of Bautzer, Grant, Youngman and Silbert of Hollywood. Arnold Grant, who resigned as board chairman of the company last Thursday, will return to the law firm and is not expected to resume his post on the board of directors of Columbia Pictures, from which he resigned last September.

Meanwhile, United Artists president Arthur Krim officially confirmed that Arnold Picker, who quit his post as executive vice-president of RKO, will continue as a stockholder and vice-president of UA in charge of foreign distribution. Picker resigned just four days before he was slated to assume his RKO post on a full-time basis.

Tannenbaum Here

It was learned that David Tannenbaum, West Coast attorney, has arrived here for consultations with Corwin. As far as could be ascertained no conferences have been held between the newly-constituted board and Ned E. Depinet, former president of the company who is now a consultant.

It is understood that Harry Pimstein will continue in his post as assistant to the board chairman and a vice-president of the company.

The outcome of Chicago negotiations for the Stolkin group's RKO stock, by Matthew Fox, head of Films for Television, a partner in U.A. and a former vice-president and director of Universal, will have an important bearing on RKO's future, as will the outcome of court proceedings here next Friday. On that day, RKO attorneys will be asked to show cause why the company should not be put in receivership as requested in a minority stockholders' suit filed in New York Supreme Court. Sale of the stock could bring about an early reorganization and reactivation of the company.

Crown Group Interested

Among other groups sounding out the possibilities of buying out the Stolkin syndicate's controlling interest is one headed by Col. Henry Crown, of the Hilton Hotel interests, and others.

In the meantime, trading of RKO stock on the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday and Friday was heavy, with the stock declining a half point in the two-day period. The biggest drop occurred on Thursday, with the stock opening at 3⅞ and closing at 3½, for a net loss of ⅜. On Friday, it dropped another eighth, while the total number of shares traded that day reached 16,700.

Fred Schaefer Leaving RKO; Press Book Editor 21 Years

Fred Schaefer, press book editor for RKO Radio Pictures for the last 21 years, left the company at the weekend. Before joining RKO, Schaefer was with United Artists for 10 years and previously was with General Film Co. and Vitagraph. No successor has been named.

Fadiman Leaves RKO Radio Pictures Executive Post

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 16.—William J. Fadiman has resigned his RKO Radio executive post which he assumed in 1947. He had been M-G-M story editor in New York and here 12 years before joining RKO.

WHO STARTED THIS, ANYWAY?

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Adjudication of the rival claims of Texas and Indiana exhibitors for the 1952 Showmanship Crown will be attempted before a three-judge statutory court in the course of the Allied States convention here this week.

William C. McCraw, bargain-rate attorney from Texas, his opponents claim, will endeavor to represent showmen of that state. Abram F. Myers, who refused a proffered Texas retainer in favor of a more valuable one—a case of scotch—will try to present Indiana's case—legal, not Scotch. Myers says, however, he is open to a better offer and really thinks it would be nice to be able "to represent someone with a semblance of justice on his side—even a bare one."

Myers added that the oratory of the price-cutting "McCrawl is as empty as the Trinity River, and you know how dry that is."

Texas has requested a change of venue on the grounds that showmanship is an alien subject, entirely outside the jurisdiction of Chicago exhibitors.

Levy Blames Majors For Industry's Ills

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The major fault for current industry problems was laid in the laps of distribution at the weekend by Herman M. Levy, general counsel for the Theatre Owners of America. Speaking at a meeting of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Metropolitan District of Columbia, Levy said "it would be most difficult to find an industry more bedevilled by intra-industry litigation and more debilitated by internecine warfare than the motion picture industry."

These factors, Levy said, to a great degree, have been responsible for its vulnerability to attack from without, adding that the "pity of the situation is that while all segments have some measure or consciousness of the situation, little or nothing (with the exception of the progress to date in evolving a system of arbitration) has been done to eliminate the source of difficulty."

Levy said that some of the fault may lie with exhibition, because a declining box-office has impelled reckless and unbusinesslike statements and actions by exhibition. But Levy listed a number of reasons as to why he thought distribution should take the brunt of the blame for the situation. They were: (1) the continued unnecessary use of competitive bidding; (2) maintaining of film rentals at high levels not commensurate with the quality of particular product, nor the box-office receipts from that product; (3) the insistence on adhering to a so-called national policy concerning film rental, without regard to specific situations; (4) the policy of demanding excessive terms for what are considered by distribution to be unusual pictures, and thus indirectly compelling exhibitors to advance admission prices, (5) encouraging exhibitors to move up to prior runs and, thereupon, to employ competitive bidding.

not call for subsidies to the French industry, as was the case in the consummation of the Italian film agreement which required a portion of earned revenue to be diverted for subsidy loans to Italian producers. It is also reported that an agreement was made for closer cooperation between American companies and the French film industry, as well as the French government.

Because of the absence of a subsidy clause in the agreement, it is believed here that the SIMPP will approve the pact, although negotiations by Johnston were only for MPEA members. James Mulvey, Eastern representative for SIMPP, said at the weekend that he believed the pact would be agreeable to the association, although he had not read the text.

Johnston, after returning to Washington Friday afternoon, was slated to come back to New York on Saturday and leave by plane for Rio de Janeiro. He was accompanied by Mrs. Johnston; his secretary, Mary Smith, and Robert J. Corkery, a member of the international department of Motion Picture Association of America. He will spend this week in Rio and leave for Buenos Aires next Sunday. He will be gone approximately three weeks on association business.

the motion picture industry" by stressing that the advertising and exploitation segment of the $100,000,000 to be invested in production and distribution during 1953, will be spent, for the greater part, in local point-of-sale merchandising.

He disclosed greater emphasis will be on intra-division campaign coordination and integration in the months to come, noting that field men can guide alert showmen to larger gross realities by carefully gauging ways whereby advantages can be derived from local exhibition conditions.

2,400 See Paramount's 'Road to Bali' Here

Approximately 2,400 theatre owners and managers, newspapermen and special guests from all branches of show business attended the special preview of Paramount's "Road to Bali," at New York's Bijou Theatre on Friday.

giving the resultant plan the minimum 18 months trial, during which Allied members could resort to arbitration if they wished or refrain from doing so, and at the conclusion of the trial period decide with other participants whether or not arbitration should be continued, revised or abandoned.

If the board is unable to reach a clear-cut decision at its final meeting tonight, indications are the convention will be asked to express its wish on the subject.

There was also reported to be strong support within the board for H. A. Cole's proposal that Allied officers withdraw from administrative positions in such cooperative all-industry endeavors as the final preparation of the arbitration plan, the direction of the industry campaign for admission tax repeal and executive positions in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

Stands Better Chance

Reports have it that Cole's proposal stands an even better chance of being accepted by the board than does the industry arbitration plan, at least without conditions attached, as they probably will be to the latter if the board goes for arbitration at all.

As previously explained by Allied, Cole's proposal would not remove Allied members from participation in the tax repeal campaign, nor from membership in COMPO. It would simply terminate the services of Allied leaders in executive positions in connection with such activities. Cole is co-chairman of the tax repeal campaign; Trueman Rembusch is one of the co-administrators of COMPO and Abram F. Myers is on the arbitration drafting committee. These and others would withdraw from such official positions, while the Allied rank and file could continue in unofficial working capacities, particularly in the tax repeal campaign, as they saw fit.

In this connection, there appeared to be no reason to believe that the Allied board will not approve the organization's renewed membership in COMPO before it adjourns tonight.

Cole's proposal was made with the idea in mind that Allied officers could devote more time to prosecuting trade practice complaints irking Allied members if relieved of the all-industry assignments.

Much about those complaints no doubt will be heard on the floor of the convention in the next three days and in the film clinics, organized individually for the various classes of theatre operations and situations represented here. The clinics will open tomorrow afternoon and continue through Tuesday morning.

Charles Niles will preside over the small town clinics; Ben Marcus, large towns; John Wolfberg, large cities; Morris Finkel, key neighborhood and sub-runs; Rube Shor, drive-ins, and Irving Dollinger, circuit buyers and bidding.

Nearly 800 persons are expected to register for the convention, approximately 500 of them for the Allied meetings and 300 for the Theatre Equipment Manufacturers Association and Theatre Equipment Dealers Association conventions and trade show. The huge

In the THEATRE Equipment World . . .

. . . with RAY GALLO

BY the time this column reaches print, we'll be in the city of Mrs. O'Leary's rambunctious cow, attending the seventh annual joint conventions of the Theatre Equipment & Supply Manufacturers Association and the Theatre Equipment Dealers Association, with the big event being the TESMA Trade Show, which for the first time is also a feature of a national exhibitor convention, the concurrent meeting of Allied States.

J. Robert Hoff

Oscar Neu

The TESMA Trade Show is the sixth, the exhibits having started in 1946 with the revival of TESMA after the war (none was held last year). TESMA itself, however, is now 12 years old, having been born in Chicago when Oscar Neu, president of Neumade Products, Inc., gathered a group of manufacturers in a hotel room to organize it. He headed it continuously from that time until last year, when J. Robert Hoff —Bob to you— was voted to the top from the vice-presidency.

Ray Colvin

TEDA is older than that —in fact, TESMA was more or less a result of the formation of the dealers' association, the moving spirit of which was the late Joe E. Robin. TEDA is now a real factor in the business, with Ray Colvin its executive director for many years and still in that post.

A new type of rubber lobby matting, a variation of corrugated-perforated mat, has been introduced by the American Mat Corp., Toledo. In announcing the new mat, D. W. Moor, Jr., president, pointed out that it is topped with a triple-ridged surface identical to that of the company's premium-priced link matting. The mat, available in black or rose, is 5/16-inch thick.

Richey Says TEDA Can Help Industry

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The equipment field is a very definite part of the overall motion picture industry and it has its role in revitalizing interest in the theatre, H. M. Richey, exhibitor and public relations director for M-G-M, told the Theatrical Equipment Dealers Association here today. Speaking at a luncheon for members and guests of the Theatrical Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association convention, Richey said that if there can be added to theatre-going that old-time glamor and super-equipment that goes with comfort, there is nothing that can stop the public from realizing that "motion pictures are your greatest entertainment buy."

Richey said it was the equipment men who fanned the enthusiasm of the exhibitors to make theatres better. He said that for too long the part played by the equipment men in the transposition from nickelodeons to great theatres has been overlooked.

Because there is a specific detailed plan for the disclosure of bids before the deadline date in the proposed arbitration agreement, M-G-M has decided "it would be preferable to await the final approval of the arbitration plan rather than to institute, in the meantime, an individual plan of our own." This was disclosed here yesterday by Charles M. Reagan, M-G-M general sales manager.

Myers Gives Allied Five Arbitration Alternatives

Allied General Chairman Distributes A Printed Report to Chicago Convention; Delegates' Sentiment Leans to Deferment

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The Allied States convention here has five alternatives for dealing with the proposed industry plan of arbitration, according to a report on the plan by Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel, distributed in printed form to the convention delegates today.

The alternatives:

1) Approve the distributors' draft in its present form and authorize Allied's officers to sign the compact.

2) Approve the draft in principle and instruct Allied's negotiating committee to seek the further changes suggested by this report or which the board may stipulate, with authority to the officers to act on the committee's final recommendation.

3) Reject the draft either because (a) it contains no provisions for arbitrating film rentals, or (b) it contains provisions which are not deemed to be in the exhibitors' interests.

4) Defer final action until the

Fox Says Talks For RKO Stock Are Continuing

Allied Board Takes Major Issues to Full Convention

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Further emphasizing the combustible and unpredictable nature of the Allied States convention this year, the board of directors dodged the responsibility of taking final action on major controversial issues and decided at the last of two-and-a-half days of meetings to refer such subjects to the convention.

"Road To Bali"

[Paramount Pictures]

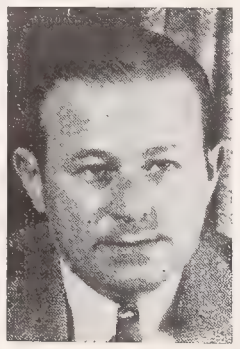
FIVE years have elapsed since the last "Road" picture with Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour was released and audiences throughout the land were rolling in the aisles over the hilarious antics. The sixth in the series is in color by Technicolor and is one of the best. It should join its predecessors, each of which netted the company over $4,000,000 and is listed among the top 100 money-making pictures of all time.



Portraying a couple of broken down vaudevillians stranded in Australia, Hope and Crosby happily accept a chance to go to Bali and dive for sunken treasure. The screenplay, by Frank Butler, Hal Kanter and William Morrow, virtually never takes itself seriously and sets up situations and props for the rapid-fire gags inimitably delivered by the stars. There are several cleverly interspersed sequences where either one or both of the principals address the audience, and surprise "visits" by such stars as Jane Russell, Humphrey Bogart and Bob Crosby.

The humor is deftly unfurled in a progressively zany pattern that after a while defies analysis or resistance and the audience is caught up in a whirlpool of laughter. There are the usual laugh-getters involving dangerous

'Plymouth Adventure' Sets Pace at New York 1st-runs

Business was spotty this week in New York first-run theatres, with "Plymouth Adventure" at Radio City Music Hall setting the pace with a pretty good $123,000 for its first week.

At the Roxy, a fairly nice $55,000 was seen for the initial week of "Bloodhounds of Broadway," while "The Turning Point" at the Globe opened to a fair $13,500. The first seven days of "The Steel Trap" at Loew's State is expected to rack up a satisfactory $12,500.

A good $61,000 is estimated for the second and final week of "Operation Secret" at the Paramount, where "Iron Mistress" will have its premiere tomorrow in conjunction with the 26th anniversary of the house. Still doing very well is "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier" at the Victoria, where $25,000 is seen for the second week.

The record-breaking "The Promoter" at the Fine Arts Theatre is expected to hit a robust $12,500 for its third week. Holding up strong is "O. Henry's Full House" at the 52nd Street Trans-Lux, where $9,300 is forecast for the fifth inning.

For the ninth stanza of "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at the Rivoli, a good $20,000 is expected. "Prisoner of Zenda" at the Capitol is due to register a satisfactory $30,000. A fair $9,000 is estimated for the fourth week of "The Lusty Men" at the Criterion.

U.S. Firms Picking Up Japanese Permits

Member companies of the Motion Picture Export Association will continue to pick up Japanese import licenses even though the number to be allotted to each distributor has not been determined. Eric Johnston, president of MPEA, was to have met with foreign department managers here yesterday on the Japanese situation, but his departure for South America Saturday caused a postponement until December.

The split-up of the licenses it not sidered of such vital importance that a decision on their distribution must be immediate. The companies will pick up licenses from time to time in order to keep their pictures in circulation in Japan.

Under an agreement reached in October, the U. S. companies will share 59 permits during the second half of the fiscal year.

Myers Gives Allied Alternatives

January meeting of the Allied board and instruct the negotiating committee in the meantime to ascertain how far the distributors will go in developing an effective conciliation or mediation plan and in meeting other points in this report or which the committee or the board may raise.

5) Defer final action until such time as the film committee of Allied shall report that conditions regarding film rentals, terms and conditions which are now giving rise to so many protests have eased to a point where confidence and good will among exhibitors has been restored.

Sentiment among convention delegates leans toward either of the last two alternatives. Action on arbitration, however, may not be taken until Wednesday, at which time it is expected whatever recommendation is made by the Allied board will be closely followed.

Myers' report on the distributors' draft, although distributed generally at the opening convention business session today, also has not yet been officially discussed by him and may not be until tomorrow's or Wednesday's meeting.

Jack Kirsch's keynote address today tipped the board's thinking on the major controversial issues to be presented to the convention, including arbitration. Kirsch reminded the convention that the plan does not include arbitration of film rentals, which Allied's convention in New York last year made a requisite of any plan acceptable to it. Of conciliation, Kirsch said it appeared only to accord an open-door policy at film exchanges which, he said, is nothing new. "Allied has been using it for years," he said.

His keynote also praised COMPO's tax repeal campaign and the COMPO financing effort of the past summer, indicating further that there is little doubt Allied's membership in COMPO will be renewed for another year. He set the stage for serious consideration of H. A. Cole's proposal that Allied officers withdraw from cooperative industry endeavor and predicted the convention will launch a campaign against exorbitant film rentals which cannot be withstood. At the same time, Kirsch noted, many are asking what has happened to Allied's old militant stand and policies.

"We haven't retreated an inch," he said. "Allied is still doing business at the same old stand."

He admonished the convention to "be bold in your thinking and action. Don't act like whipped dogs."

Kirsch's keynote address was praised to the convention by Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, who endorsed it as "setting the tenor and tempo of the convention." Ben Marcus, Allied treasurer, opened the convention. The first session got under way 50 minutes late but some of the fault lay with the hotel arrangements office which had rented the auditorium for a Chicago Monday morning quarterbacks luncheon for sports writers, who were shown films of last Saturday's Michigan State-Notre Dame football game. The auditorium had to be cleared and rearranged after the luncheon for the sports experts, which ran late.

Wilbur Snaper

On the dais for the opening session, which was well attended, were Marcus, Snaper, permanent convention chairman; Kirsch, general chairman of the convention; Jack Rose of Illinois Allied, and Stanley Kane of North Central Allied. John Daly, clerk of the city of Chicago, welcomed the delegates.

The session adjourned till tomorrow following Kirsch's keynote address. The Allied film clinics were in continuous session and will resume again tomorrow morning. The first general convention luncheon will be held tomorrow, followed by a demonstration of RCA large screen theatre television and a convention open forum. In the evening there will be a night club party for the delegates at Chez Paree.

Meanwhile, visitors to the TESMA-TEDA equipment exhibit and trade show continue heavy.

Sees Much Criticism, Little Enthusiasm in Myers' Report

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The neutral examiner of the report on the distributors' proposed industry arbitration draft prepared by Abram F. Myers for the Allied States convention here will look in vain for evidences of unqualified enthusiasm. There is, however, no lack of criticism of virtually all of the proposals in the draft or, at least, expressed disappointment in the language.

The proposals for abitration of competitive bidding complaints perhaps arouse the most regret in Myers' report.

Myers notes that exhibitor members of the drafting committee stood solidly for curbing the use of competitive bidding as much as possible. His report to the convention says that that aim was weakened "by the exceptions upon which the distributors have insisted."

By way of example he cites uncertainty as to the definition of a pre-release. He says that if distributors claim, contrary to his own views, that a pre-release means "after a pre-release first run in any city, the distributor is free to require bidding on all subsequent engagements, then this provision will afford no remedy for one of the worst of the current abuses."

Myers added that "under the distributors' wording they could, if so minded, reject all offers first submitted and then bring all the theatres in the city into competition for the picture."

'Cloak for Favoritism'

In discussing another proposal covering rejection of bids Myers says: "We tried to limit the competition to those who showed enough interest in the pictures to make an initial offer; the distributors apparently want to make the rejection of bids the occasion for enlarging the competition and, possibly, a cloak for favoritism and discrimination."

Of awards in competitive bidding cases, Myers' report says: "The clear and simple language of the Aug. 20 draft has been supplanted by gobbledegook and one important provision has been mislaid. . . ."

Myers begins the report by pointing out that the distributors' draft is not the "all-inclusive plan" contemplated by the Allied board "because it makes no provision for the arbitration of film rentals as stipulated by Allied."

Taking up the subjects of arbitration individually, the report has little criticism to make of the provisions governing clearance disputes. The second subject, runs, also gets off with only minor comment. Myers does point out that if all of the nine distributors subscribing to the arbitration plan availed themselves of the provision permitting each of them two pre-release pictures a year to be sold on special terms, there would be 18 such pictures annually. He adds, however, that at present there is no limitation on the number of such pre-release pictures.

Doesn't Go Deep

On the subject of forcing pictures, Myers says the proposal to curb the abuse "does not go to the heart of the evil. Salesmen," he says, "no longer condition the licensing of one picture on the licensing of additional product." He asserts they raise the price of the desirable pictures "to the point where an exhibitor finds he can make a more advantageous deal by taking them all. In other words, instead of direct forcing, we have forcing by price differentials."

Myers said an Allied proposal which attacked the practice "was rejected by the distributors." This was resolved, he said, by distributors writing in the words forcing "directly or by any means." Myers said he feels that forcing by price differentials is forcing "by any means" and he would expect any "fair minded arbitrators to accept that view."

He adds: "I do not need to remind you, however, that an argument is an unsatisfactory substitute for a clear-cut provision."

Contract violations in the draft and the provisions governing them escape Myers' criticism. However, in discussing damages, he indicates some dissatisfaction, particularly with the language, on the four-year limitation period, or less. Distributors, he said, have added to the provision language "which will hardly prove enlightening to the non-lawyers who will administer the system and serve as arbitrators, not to mention the poor devils whose interests will be at stake in the

Allied Considering Distribution of Fan Magazine: 'Revue'

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The Allied board today considered distribution of the new pocket-size fan magazine, "Revue," by Allied units as a revenue producer for regional organizations. Allied would place the magazines in as many theatres as possible, whether members of Allied or not, and the distributing regionals would get a percentage of the sales. Price of the magazine is 10 cents.

Final action on the proposal was postponed until the board's winter meeting in New Orleans, when it will be considered again, along with other revenue producing plans for the regional units. The magazine selling idea is not exclusively an Allied proposal but is open to other theatres as well.

Myers Relinquishing Some of His Duties

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel, said today he will endeavor to relinquish a number of the routine duties he has handled for the organization for many years in order to "take things a little easier."

Among the assignments he is giving up first is that of board and convention press liaison, a function he has performed for years. Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, has taken over that task from Myers for the Allied sessions here.

Sees Less Sentiment For Cole Proposal

Chicago, Nov. 17. — Convention sentiment here is veering away from support of H. A. Cole's proposal that Allied officers withdraw from all-industry cooperative efforts in favor of concentrating exclusively on handling exhibitors' trade practice complaints. Many feel that the Cole proposal is needless and that Allied officers can perform both functions. These are predicting the Cole proposal will be rejected.

William McCraw of Dallas and Paul Short of National Screen Service and Texas COMPO spoke against the Cole proposal at today's Allied board meeting. They had been invited to the meeting by Cole, who also is from Dallas.

Registrations Near 1,000 in Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 17. — The combined registrations of the Allied States and TESMA-TEDA conventions may reach 1,000, it was evident here today as the facilities of the Morrison Hotel were overtaxed in efforts to handle the incoming crowds.

At least 100 more applications for tickets to the Wednesday night Allied banquet than the hall can accommodate have been received.

The TESMA-TEDA trade show, most elaborate in the history of the industry, extends over two exhibition floors and is well attended. The trade exhibit will be repeated here next year at the Theatre Owners of America convention in the Conrad Hilton Hotel, and will be alternated between the conventions of the two national exhibitor organizations thereafter.

Myers' Report

proceedings."

Myers said he warned the distributors that their aim of reducing anti-trust litigation through arbitration would succeed in large measure according to their liberality in subjecting themselves to damage awards. With double damages now the likely amount that could be won by a complainant, Myers says "it remains to be seen whether aggrieved exhibitors will resort to arbitration or continue to go to court."

Least Enthusiastic Words

Perhaps his least enthusiastic words are left to the conciliation proposals. He said these were proposed when distributors rejected Allied's requests for arbitration of film rentals. Despite its "engaging language," Myers said, the conciliation plan "provides nothing more than that the distributors shall maintain an open-door policy, which some companies are doing now." He says the plan does not go as far as the old UMPI plan and that based on Allied's experience and that of its officers engaged in handling trade practice complaints to date "I have grave doubts as to whether the plan now offered will solve the problems uppermost in the exhibitors' minds, having to do with current selling policies and high film rentals."

On practices and procedure, Myers has mild criticism of the form of awards and appeals. On the matter of obtaining Justice Department and court approval of the plan Myers says that if "Allied elects to go along with this arbitration movement I would have to insist that the negotiations with the attorney general include counsel for all the participating organizations and be not limited to counsel for the film companies.

He said a provision has been added to the draft that, should the plan be abandoned at the end of its 18 months trial period, he thinks "outstanding cease and desist orders" would be ineffective 12 months after but unpaid damage awards could still be collected."

Myers also says that the selection of local exhibitor arbitrators should be left to the local and regional exhibitor associations and not chosen, as proposed, by exhibitor members of the national administrator of the plan.

Nothing in Myers' report to the convention could be interpreted as an endorsement in whole of the distributors' draft.

Montgomery Wins 1st Filmack Prize

Chicago, Nov. 17.—L. C. Montgomery of New Orleans won the drawing at the opening Allied convention session today for early arrivals. Prize was a decorative desk clock, donated by Irving Mack of Filmack, to encourage early arrivals at the business meetings. A drawing will be held daily, with only the first 50 arrivals eligible.

Allied States Convention Personality Notes . . .

CHICAGO, Nov. 17. — Three Ohioan delegates to Allied States' national convention at the Morrison Hotel here—Leo T. Jones, of Upper Sandusky, Ernest Schwartz of Cleveland, and Martin G. Smith of Toledo (who has written an article depicting his experiences as a "guinea pig" in an effort to break the power of the Ohio State Censor Board, for the Convention Year Book)—all are attending their 19th national Allied convention, maintaining their perfect records of never having missed one of these national gatherings since Allied was organized. . . . Attending his first national Allied convention is Marion F. Bodwell of Wyoming, Ill., who started in the theatre business at the age of 10 distributing handbills for the old Lyceum Theatre at Wyoming, was promoted to ticket-taker shortly thereafter, became projectionist at the age of 12, and opened his own theatre (the Paramount) at the age of nineteen. Now only 49, Bodwell is a veteran of 39 years in show business. . . .

W. H. (Bill) Hoffman, owner of the Lamar, Arthur, Ill., will have an opportunity to renew old acquaintances while he's here for the convention. He used to be a featured vocalist on Chicago radio stations KYW, WCFL, and WIBO. . . . Charlie Jones, owner of the Dawn Theatre, Elma, Iowa, who is attending his second national Allied convention, also is a journalist, having written a series of articles on small town theatres for Motion Picture Herald. . . . A member of Allied since its inception in the state of Wisconsin, C. L. Roser of Baraboo began his career in show business as an auditor for the old Ringling Brothers circus back in 1906. In 1915, Al Ringling, eldest of the Ringling brothers, built the Al Ringling Theatre in Baraboo, winter headquarters of the circus, and put Roser in charge of it. Roser recalls that they used to house the polar bears in heated brick buildings and let the camels spend their daytimes in snow-covered barnyards. . . .

A round-table discussion for exhibitors from small and medium towns will be led by E. L. Ornstein and J. P. Finneran. A. H. Borkenstein, E. L. Millee and D. Irving Long will preside at the clinic for city and subsequent-run operators. J. R. Pell, T. R. Mendelsohn and Jack Armstrong will be moderators for the drive-in group.

Trueman Rembusch, president of the Indiana Allied, announced that Wilbur Snaper, president of national Allied; Abram F. Myers, general counsel of the national organization, and Max E. Youngstein, vice-president of United Artists, already have accepted invitations to speak at the convention.

An ATOI directors' meeting will precede the convention, on the night of Dec. 1.

A party for exhibitors attending the convention will be given by Indianapolis Tent No. 10 of Variety in the Lincoln Hotel.

Pittsburgh Owners Ask Tax Abolition

Pittsburgh, Nov. 17.—Morris Finkel, chairman of the board of Allied of Western Pennsylvania, headed a group that appeared before the City Council here today requesting that the city abolish its 10 per cent amusement tax.

He declared that the tax is threatening the very existence of motion picture theatres, and that many theatres had been forced to close their doors while others have been operating on a part time basis because of the "paralyzing effect" on business. The request was referred to the Committee on Finance for discussion tomorrow.

Allied Board

obtain better film prices and terms for members, and to renew Allied's membership in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations for another year.

Heretofore the Allied board habitually has taken final action on all such policy matters and has presented them to the convention for approval. Thus, in asking the convention to make the final decision now, Allied has inaugurated a new board and convention policy. Whether or not it will be continued in the future was not certain.

In asking the convention to decide these issues, the Allied board will make a report on the results of its deliberations and probably will make recommendations, it was said.

As of today, it appeared that the board would recommend only conditional approval of arbitration, dependent upon changes and additions to the proposed industry draft designed to give small exhibitors a better break, particularly in the area of film playing conditions. It appeared today that Cole's proposal would win the board's recommendation but final action on it would be up to the convention. Renewal of membership in COMPO also appears to be favored by the board, with the convention to have the last word on that also.

The board approved a plan and recommended its adoption by the general convention under which Allied regional units will engage in an expanded interchange of film buying information, including terms, allocations and prices. The plan in effect is an elaboration of the work being done by "Caravan," but with added embellishments, such as the exchange of ideas and opinions on films.

Allied Will Hold 1953 Convention in Boston

Chicago, Nov. 17.—The Allied board today approved New England Allied's bid for the 1953 national convention. It will be held at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel, Boston; the tentative dates being Nov. 7-11.

bids has worked out well and has gained the confidence and recognition of exhibitors generally," Reagan said, "we have no objection to the disclosure of bids after the deadline date and before the award is made if this is desired by our customers."

Reagan said that M-G-M had been striving to further its policy of limiting its competitive bidding situations only where necessary to meet legal requirements and it has to some extent been successful. Continuing, he said:

Complicated Problems

"Naturally, bidding situations present many complicated problems at times not easy to solve. Where performance in a given case points to a division of product as a practical solution, we have done this where agreeable to all concerned. We have little doubt that the theatre-going public prefers to have a theatre identified with a particular producer's product rather than the confusion which results when the public does not know which theatre will play a picture, particularly our type of pictures.

"We shall continue to exert our efforts to confine competitive bidding to those situations where there is no other alternative as we are fully aware of the feelings of the rank and file of exhibitors on this subject.

"In the meantime, we are hopeful of the adoption of the proposed arbitration and conciliation plan upon which so much time and attention have been given by all parties. I sincerely hope and do believe that the conciliation system to which I shall personally devote myself, will effectively deal with many of the exhibitor-distributor problems now confronting all of us, and that it will in fact make arbitration in many cases unnecessary."

Levin Executives Meet

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—A three-day conference of divisional executives of Jack H. Levin Associates, Inc., has been scheduled for tomorrow through Thursday in the Morrison Hotel here. crocodiles, bears, and an octopus as well as a mistaken-identity wedding ceremony in spectacular headdresses. The best running gag in the film is a switch on the snake-in-a-basket-charming by flute playing, which here involves beautiful women emerging from an empty basket. Of course, the "patty-cake" routine is included but with a twist.

THE story by Frank Butler and Harry Tugend has Hope and Crosby recover the sunken treasure and escape the destructive traps of power-mad prince Murvyn Vye, a close relative of Miss Lamour's. At the finale it appears the boys are doomed to die and Miss Lamour is to be married off to an old, greedy chief but a volcano erupts and the trio escapes with the treasure.

Johnny Burke and James Van Heusen provided a highly serviceable score which is topped by a jazz number, "Chicago Style," and a lovely ballad, "To See You," and includes "Hoot Mon," "Moonflowers," "The Merry-Go-Runaround" and "The Road to Bali."

Tugend produced and liberally utilized process photography of some attractive island settings. Hal Walker's direction kept the gags and the proceedings moving at a sharp pace. Others in the cast are Peter Coe, Ralph Moody and Leon Askin as well as the usual bevy of beautiful girls.

This was viewed at a special trade preview at the Bijou Theatre in New York and a packed audience of exhibitors and press representatives responded in an extremely hearty fashion. Promotional possibilities of this were demonstrated by Paramount in an impressive exploitation display as it could be done by a typical theatre. Tie-ups were made at an insignificant cost with a local pet shop for tropical animals and birds; a frozen fruit juice company for "Bali Brew"; a costume company for sarongs and costumes; a fruit wholesaler for tropical fruits and coconuts; a record company for phonograph records and albums; a model agency for tropical beauties; a sawdust company for South Seas sand, sea shells, and tropical decorations; and lobby displays of color stills, blowups and posters from National Screen Service.

Few films come to the exhibitor with so much advance demand and properly exploited, this very funny production should be one of the year's top grossers.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

WALTER PASHKIN

Jack Kirsch Hints

touched on the suggestion lightly, but the fact that he mentioned it at all was taken as an indication that he saw possibilities in the idea, especially in regard to conciliation.

In his own words, Kirsch said, speaking of efforts to achieve results, "Possibly a more certain and detailed procedure along the lines of the abortive UMPI plan of 1942 can be worked out. That must remain for further discussion by those who have given more time to the proceedings than I have. But do not delay any affirmative action you may have in mind in blind reliance on conciliation as a solution of your film problems. There are a lot of characters among the film companies, but I have never met one who looked—or acted—like Santa Claus."

(UMPI was set up by all segments of the film industry to work out intra-industry problems in 1942. The various proposals ultimately were rejected by the Department of Justice and, subsequently, the organization was dissolved).

Kirsch's welcome address to the delegates was sounded on a high note of optimism. He expressed confidence that present difficulties would be overcome, adding that "my devotion to the business is not so great, nor am I so old, that I would not be out trying my hand at some other line of endeavor if I felt that the motion picture business is washed up and has no future." That, he said, "goes for all of you."

The upsurge in business during the summer months, Kirsch said, caused an elation that now appears to be premature, as receipts fell off after Labor Day. He admitted that television was a big factor in the slump, but he insisted there were other problems to cope with, declaring that he was convinced that TV "is not a permanent menace." The industry has withstood more serious challenges than that offered by television, but TV coupled with other existing and threatened handicaps "might indeed do the trick," he said.

Kirsch reviewed the efforts that had been made by Allied leaders and the Council of Motion Picture Organizations in seeking the repeal of the Federal admission tax, as well as their fight against the bill to exempt nonprofit amusements from the tax. He warned that a great deal is yet to be done to offset the government's suit to compel film companies to turn over their choicest films for TV exhibition. If this action should coast along to a freak decision in favor of the government, or should the companies tamely submit to a consent decree, Kirsch said it would not be an exaggeration to say that "such a calamity would spell ruin for every motion picture theatre in the United States."

Kirsch charged that the Attorney General had abused his discretion as a prosecuting officer in filing this suit and that the exhibitors were within their rights in demanding that the case be withdrawn and, if the demand is unheeded, they will be justified in carrying their complaints even to Congress.

While exhibitors have shown good faith in working with other branches on matters adversely affecting the industry, Kirsch charged that the distributors have refused to throw the exhibitors a lifesaver on matters concerning film rental, pre-releases, must percentages and other problems. He claimed that the exhibitors "were innocent enough to believe that this new era of good feeling would extend all down the line." Allied, Kirsch said, may have changed its methods a little in protecting the independent exhibitor, but it has never deviated from its loyalty. He urged that the current convention unite the exhibitors on a course of affirmative action "that our distributor friends can no longer ignore."

having been with Stolkin in Chicago. However, he said that he may go to Chicago this week for further parleys or Stolkin may come here to continue the negotiations on the purchase by Fox of the Stolkin group's 29 per cent stock interest. He added that there were so many ramifications to the projected deal that he could not make a flat statement as to the progress of the talks.

Unofficial Reports

From other sources yesterday it was reported that Fox had returned to New York from Chicago to get commitments for further necessary finances to complete the deal. Unofficial reports in Chicago were that the price of the stock loomed as a barrier to any early deal. The resignations of Arnold Grant and Arnold Picker as RKO's chief executive officers last week sent the stock down about one point at the time, although it went up a quarter of a point yesterday to 3 and ⅝, in a day that saw 10,200 shares traded.

Prospective purchasers, on the one hand, are said to be angling to take advantage of the lower quotation, whereas the Stolkin group, on the other hand, is not prepared to take any heavy loss on its investment at the moment.

Call Both Deals Cold

In Chicago, members of the Stolkin syndicate declined to divulge details of the Fox negotiations and, although indicating that the deal was cold, admitted that it was not beyond the possibility of being revived. It also was indicated that talks concerning sale of the stock to a group represented by Col. Henry Crown, of the Hilton Hotel interests, also are cold. It could not be learned whether any new group had entered the scene.

Meanwhile, the RKO board, which met here daily last week, did not convene yesterday. Sherrill Corwin, acting board chairman, was reported to have been in Chicago, as was Edward J. Burke, board member from Chicago, who attended last week's meetings.

Reports circulating yesterday to the effect that Walt Disney would withhold "Peter Pan" from RKO release until internal difficulties were overcome were scouted by company spokesmen. It was pointed out that the RKO promotional departments were working on the picture's openings. Roy Disney, president of Walt Disney Productions, when asked about the report said, "No comment."

High Court Refuses Anti-trust Appeal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Supreme Court today refused to hear an appeal by two California exhibitors against a lower court decision dismissing their anti-trust suit against 10 distributors and two other independent exhibitors.

The suit was brought by Steve and Emma M. Chorak, owners of the Puente Theatre in Puente, Cal. They charged the defendants with conspiracy to give them inferior playing time and unreasonably long clearances. The California District Court and Court of Appeals hold there was no conspiracy but that the distributors had acted independently. The Choraks appealed to the Supreme Court, but a majority of the justices today indicated they would not take the case. Only three of the nine justices—Reed, Black and Douglas—said they thought the case should be heard.

Distributor defendants in the case were RKO Radio, Columbia, Warner Brothers, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, Republic, Loew's and Monogram. Exhibitor defendants were A. L. Sanborn, owner of the El Monte theatre in El Monte, Cal., and James Edwards Jr., operator of the Valley and Tumblewood theatres in El Monte.

Indications are that the benefit premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion Theatre here Nov. 24 will net approximately $25,000 for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital. All proceeds from the premiere are to go to the Saranac Lake institution. Tickets are now on sale and a sellout is expected by midweek. Celebrities from all branches of the entertainment world, along with top civic officials, are to attend the affair.

The premiere is the first in a contemplated annual series of benefit showings of important pictures aimed to further the tuberculosis research and treatment work performed at the hospital.

The benefit will be televised by station WPIX, with Tex McCrary and Jinx interviewing celebrities who will attend the opening. The program will be aired from 8:30 to 9:00 P.M., and recordings will be made of the interviews for subsequent use by Tex and Jinx on their Coast-to-Coast morning radio show.

Fabian's Grand, Albany, N. Y., plans to carry the Dec. 11 telecast of "Carmen," it was learned here yesterday.

Meanwhile, negotiations between Theatre Network Television, the agency which has booked the first theatre TV entertainment event, and other circuits will resume tomorrow. Today, Nathan Halpern, TNT president, will be in Chicago to address the national Allied convention.

Upon his return here, Halpern is due to continue talks with various circuit executives, including those of Loew's, Warner Brothers, Shea Enterprises, RKO Theatres and United Paramount Theatres. For the Metropolitan Opera production of "Carmen," TNT is seeking 40 cents per seat as a minimum against 50 per cent of the net box-office receipts. It is understood that TNT expects to line-up from 40 to 50 theatres for the cross-country three-hour telecast. Although circuit executives are virtually unanimous in their interest, some oppose the price being sought for the event.

Deny Gamble Bid on Ownership Change

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—A Federal Communications Commission hearing examiner today denied an application by Ted Gamble to change a pending appplication for a Portland television station to take note of different ownership.

The application is by the Mt. Hood Radio and Television Co. Ralph Stolkin, Sherrill Corwin, Edward Burke and Harry Kahn recently sold their interest in the company to the employes. Gamble, a major stockholder in the firm, was asking the examiner, during a hearing on various Portland TV applications, to amend the application to take note of this change. The examiner denied the request, and Gamble will appeal to the full Commission.

DuMont Hails FCC's Resnick Findings

DuMont Laboratories hailed the recommendations of Federal Communications Commission examiner Leo Resnick, which found that Paramount Pictures does not control Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc.

Resnick's findings, declared Dr. Allen B. DuMont, president, "is a long step towards better television service throughout the nation. It removes all questions as to the stability of our licenses in New York, Washington and Pittsburgh, and will make it possible for us to acquire additional stations."

Turn Down TV Set Tax

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—Massachusetts legislators today turned down a suggestion to tax all television sets $1.50 or $2.00 annually. Senator Ralph C. Mahar, chairman of a legislative commission studying the possibility of establishing a television channel in Massachusetts for educational purposes, ruled out a suggestion that individual television sets be taxed to provide money for a state owned station.

MGM Bid Plan To Await Okay Of Arbitration

Reagan Says Firm Will Limit Bidding Situations

Because there is a specific detailed plan for the disclosure of bids before the deadline date in the proposed arbitration agreement, M-G-M has decided "it would be preferable to await the final approval of the arbitration plan rather than to institute, in the meantime, an individual plan of our own." This was disclosed here yesterday by Charles M. Reagan, M-G-M general sales manager.

Calls Mass. Safety Rules 'Arbitrary'

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—Regulations of the Commissioner of Public Safety of Massachusetts requiring two licensed motion picture operators in attendance in booths was called "unreasonable and arbitrary" in a 32-page report, filed by attorney Arthur L. Brown of Boston, sitting as a master in the Suffolk Superior Court of this city.

This finding was made as to both safety and nitrate film. The report also challenged the provision that the operator shall not leave the operating side of the projector while it is in motion and that when only one licensed operator is in attendance it shall be necessary to "black out" during the process of changing over.

Fox Says Talks For RKO Stock Are Continuing

Despite reports from Chicago to the effect that Matthew Fox's negotiations for the purchase of the Ralph Stolkin syndicate's interest in RKO Pictures had become cold, Fox said in New York yesterday that discussions on the project were continuing. Fox, head of Films-for-Television and a partner in United Artists, said that it might be several days before he would know the final outcome of the parleys, "one way or the other."

Fox said that he had not conferred with the RKO board, all his talks

Allied General Chairman Distributes A Printed Report to Chicago Convention; Delegates' Sentiment Leans to Deferment

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The Allied States convention here has five alternatives for dealing with the proposed industry plan of arbitration, according to a report on the plan by Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel, distributed in printed form to the convention delegates today.

The alternatives:

1) Approve the distributors' draft in its present form and authorize Allied's officers to sign the compact.

2) Approve the draft in principle and instruct Allied's negotiating committee to seek the further changes suggested by this report or which the board may stipulate, with authority to the officers to act on the committee's final recommendation.

3) Reject the draft either because (a) it contains no provisions for arbitrating film rentals, or (b) it contains provisions which are not deemed to be in the exhibitors' interests.

Allied Board Takes Major Issues to Full Convention

CHICAGO, Nov. 17. — Further emphasizing the combustible and unpredictable nature of the Allied States convention this year, the board of directors dodged the responsibility of taking final action on major controversial issues and decided at the last of two-and-a-half days of meetings to refer such subjects to the convention.

"Road To Bali"

[Paramount Pictures]

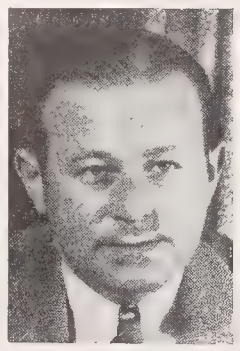
FIVE years have elapsed since the last "Road" picture with Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour was released and audiences throughout the land were rolling in the aisles over the hilarious antics. The sixth in the series is in color by Technicolor and is one of the best. It should join its predecessors, each of which netted the company over $4,000,000 and is listed among the top 100 money-making pictures of all time.



Portraying a couple of broken down vaudevillians stranded in Australia, Hope and Crosby happily accept a chance to go to Bali and dive for sunken treasure. The screenplay, by Frank Butler, Hal Kanter and William Morrow, virtually never takes itself seriously and sets up situations and props for the rapid-fire gags inimitably delivered by the stars. There are several cleverly interspersed sequences where either one or both of the principals address the audience, and surprise "visits" by such stars as Jane Russell, Humphrey Bogart and Bob Crosby.

The humor is deftly unfurled in a progressively zany pattern that after a while defies analysis or resistance and the audience is caught up in a whirlpool of laughter. There are the usual laugh-getters involving dangerous

'Plymouth Adventure' Sets Pace at New York 1st-runs

Business was spotty this week in New York first-run theatres, with "Plymouth Adventure" at Radio City Music Hall setting the pace with a pretty good $123,000 for its first week.

At the Roxy, a fairly nice $55,000 was seen for the initial week of "Bloodhounds of Broadway," while "The Turning Point" at the Globe opened to a fair $13,500. The first seven days of "The Steel Trap" at Loew's State is expected to rack up a satisfactory $12,500.

A good $61,000 is estimated for the second and final week of "Operation Secret" at the Paramount, where "Iron Mistress" will have its premiere tomorrow in conjunction with the 26th anniversary of the house. Still doing very well is "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier" at the Victoria, where $25,000 is seen for the second week.

The record-breaking "The Promoter" at the Fine Arts Theatre is expected to hit a robust $12,500 for its third week. Holding up strong is "O. Henry's Full House" at the 52nd Street Trans-Lux, where $9,300 is forecast for the fifth inning.

For the ninth stanza of "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at the Rivoli, a good $20,000 is expected. "Prisoner of Zenda" at the Capitol is due to register a satisfactory $30,000. A fair $9,000 is estimated for the fourth week of "The Lusty Men" at the Criterion.

"Limelight" at the Astor and the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux is doing well, with $24,000 estimated for the Astor and $10,500 for the Trans-Lux. The picture is in its fourth week at both houses. A steady $9,000 for the fourth week of "The Fourposter" at the Sutton is forecast.

"The World in His Arms" at the Mayfair is expected to hit a moderate $12,500 for its fifth week. The Mayfair's next attraction will be "The Thief of Venice," which opens Nov. 27.

"Under the Red Sea" will have its premiere Tuesday at the Beekman Theatre. "Angel Street" opened to a fair $6,100 at the Normandie.

U.S. Firms Picking Up Japanese Permits

Member companies of the Motion Picture Export Association will continue to pick up Japanese import licenses even though the number to be allotted to each distributor has not been determined. Eric Johnston, president of MPEA, was to have met with foreign department managers here yesterday on the Japanese situation, but his departure for South America Saturday caused a postponement until December.

The split-up of the licenses it not sidered of such vital importance that a decision on their distribution must be immediate. The companies will pick up licenses from time to time in order to keep their pictures in circulation in Japan.

Under an agreement reached in October, the U. S. companies will share 59 permits during the second half of the fiscal year.

Myers Gives Allied Alternatives

January meeting of the Allied board and instruct the negotiating committee in the meantime to ascertain how far the distributors will go in developing an effective conciliation or mediation plan and in meeting other points in this report or which the committee or the board may raise.

5) Defer final action until such time as the film committee of Allied shall report that conditions regarding film rentals, terms and conditions which are now giving rise to so many protests have eased to a point where confidence and good will among exhibitors has been restored.

Sentiment among convention delegates leans toward either of the last two alternatives. Action on arbitration, however, may not be taken until Wednesday, at which time it is expected whatever recommendation is made by the Allied board will be closely followed.

Myers' report on the distributors' draft, although distributed generally at the opening convention business session today, also has not yet been officially discussed by him and may not be until tomorrow's or Wednesday's meeting.

Jack Kirsch's keynote address today tipped the board's thinking on the major controversial issues to be presented to the convention, including arbitration. Kirsch reminded the convention that the plan does not include arbitration of film rentals, which Allied's convention in New York last year made a requisite of any plan acceptable to it. Of conciliation, Kirsch said it appeared only to accord an open-door policy at film exchanges which, he said, is nothing new. "Allied has been using it for years," he said.

His keynote also praised COMPO's tax repeal campaign and the COMPO financing effort of the past summer, indicating further that there is little doubt Allied's membership in COMPO will be renewed for another year. He set the stage for serious consideration of H. A. Cole's proposal that Allied officers withdraw from cooperative industry endeavor and predicted the convention will launch a campaign against exorbitant film rentals which cannot be withstood. At the same time, Kirsch noted, many are asking what has happened to Allied's old militant stand and policies.

He admonished the convention to "be bold in your thinking and action. Don't act like whipped dogs."

Kirsch's keynote address was praised to the convention by Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, who endorsed it as "setting the tenor and tempo of the convention." Ben Marcus, Allied treasurer, opened the convention. The first session got under way 50 minutes late but some of the fault lay with the hotel arrangements office which had rented the auditorium for a Chicago Monday morning quarterbacks luncheon for sports writers, who were shown films of last Saturday's Michigan State-Notre Dame football game. The auditorium had to be cleared and rearranged after the luncheon for the sports experts, which ran late.

Wilbur Snaper

On the dais for the opening session, which was well attended, were Marcus, Snaper, permanent convention chairman; Kirsch, general chairman of the convention; Jack Rose of Illinois Allied, and Stanley Kane of North Central Allied. John Daly, clerk of the city of Chicago, welcomed the delegates.

The session adjourned till tomorrow following Kirsch's keynote address. The Allied film clinics were in continuous session and will resume again tomorrow morning. The first general convention luncheon will be held tomorrow, followed by a demonstration of RCA large screen theatre television and a convention open forum. In the evening there will be a night club party for the delegates at Chez Paree.

Meanwhile, visitors to the TESMA-TEDA equipment exhibit and trade show continue heavy.

Sees Much Criticism, Little Enthusiasm in Myers' Report

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The neutral examiner of the report on the distributors' proposed industry arbitration draft prepared by Abram F. Myers for the Allied States convention here will look in vain for evidences of unqualified enthusiasm. There is, however, no lack of criticism of virtually all of the proposals in the draft or, at least, expressed disappointment in the language.

The proposals for abitration of competitive bidding complaints perhaps arouse the most regret in Myers' report.

Myers notes that exhibitor members of the drafting committee stood solidly for curbing the use of competitive bidding as much as possible. His report to the convention says that that aim was weakened "by the exceptions upon which the distributors have insisted."

By way of example he cites uncertainty as to the definition of a pre-release. He says that if distributors claim, contrary to his own views, that a pre-release means "after a pre-release first run in any city, the distributor is free to require bidding on all subsequent engagements, then this provision will afford no remedy for one of the worst of the current abuses."

Myers added that "under the distributors' wording they could, if so minded, reject all offers first submitted and then bring all the theatres in the city into competition for the picture."

'Cloak for Favoritism'

In discussing another proposal covering rejection of bids Myers says: "We tried to limit the competition to those who showed enough interest in the pictures to make an initial offer; the distributors apparently want to make the rejection of bids the occasion for enlarging the competition and, possibly, a cloak for favoritism and discrimination."

Of awards in competitive bidding cases, Myers' report says: "The clear and simple language of the Aug. 20 draft has been supplanted by gobbledegook and one important provision has been mislaid. . . ."

Myers begins the report by pointing out that the distributors' draft is not the "all-inclusive plan" contemplated by the Allied board "because it makes no provision for the arbitration of film rentals as stipulated by Allied."

Taking up the subjects of arbitration individually, the report has little criticism to make of the provisions governing clearance disputes. The second subject, runs, also gets off with only minor comment. Myers does point out that if all of the nine distributors subscribing to the arbitration plan availed themselves of the provision permitting each of them two pre-release pictures a year to be sold on special terms, there would be 18 such pictures annually. He adds, however, that at present there is no limitation on the number of such pre-release pictures.

Doesn't Go Deep

On the subject of forcing pictures, Myers says the proposal to curb the abuse "does not go to the heart of the evil. Salesmen," he says, "no longer condition the licensing of one picture on the licensing of additional product." He asserts they raise the price of the desirable pictures "to the point where an exhibitor finds he can make a more advantageous deal by taking them all. In other words, instead of direct forcing, we have forcing by price differentials."

Myers said an Allied proposal which attacked the practice "was rejected by the distributors." This was resolved, he said, by distributors writing in the words forcing "directly or by any means." Myers said he feels that forcing by price differentials is forcing "by any means" and he would expect any "fair minded arbitrators to accept that view."

He adds: "I do not need to remind you, however, that an argument is an unsatisfactory substitute for a clear-cut provision."

Contract violations in the draft and the provisions governing them escape Myers' criticism. However, in discussing damages, he indicates some dissatisfaction, particularly with the language, on the four-year limitation period, or less. Distributors, he said, have added to the provision language "which will hardly prove enlightening to the non-lawyers who will administer the system and serve as arbitrators, not to mention the poor devils whose interests will be at stake in the

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The Allied board today considered distribution of the new pocket-size fan magazine, "Revue," by Allied units as a revenue producer for regional organizations. Allied would place the magazines in as many theatres as possible, whether members of Allied or not, and the distributing regionals would get a percentage of the sales. Price of the magazine is 10 cents.

Final action on the proposal was postponed until the board's winter meeting in New Orleans, when it will be considered again, along with other revenue producing plans for the regional units. The magazine selling idea is not exclusively an Allied proposal but is open to other theatres as well.

Myers Relinquishing Some of His Duties

Chicago, Nov. 17. — Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel, said today he will endeavor to relinquish a number of the routine duties he has handled for the organization for many years in order to "take things a little easier."

Among the assignments he is giving up first is that of board and convention press liaison, a function he has performed for years. Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, has taken over that task from Myers for the Allied sessions here.

Sees Less Sentiment For Cole Proposal

Chicago, Nov. 17. — Convention sentiment here is veering away from support of H. A. Cole's proposal that Allied officers withdraw from all-industry cooperative efforts in favor of concentrating exclusively on handling exhibitors' trade practice complaints. Many feel that the Cole proposal is needless and that Allied officers can perform both functions. These are predicting the Cole proposal will be rejected.

William McCraw of Dallas and Paul Short of National Screen Service and Texas COMPO spoke against the Cole proposal at today's Allied board meeting. They had been invited to the meeting by Cole, who also is from Dallas.

Registrations Near 1,000 in Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 17. — The combined registrations of the Allied States and TESMA-TEDA conventions may reach 1,000, it was evident here today as the facilities of the Morrison Hotel were overtaxed in efforts to handle the incoming crowds.

At least 100 more applications for tickets to the Wednesday night Allied banquet than the hall can accommodate have been received.

The TESMA-TEDA trade show, most elaborate in the history of the industry, extends over two exhibition floors and is well attended. The trade exhibit will be repeated here next year at the Theatre Owners of America convention in the Conrad Hilton Hotel, and will be alternated between the conventions of the two national exhibitor organizations thereafter.

Myers' Report

Myers said he warned the distributors that their aim of reducing anti-trust litigation through arbitration would succeed in large measure according to their liberality in subjecting themselves to damage awards. With double damages now the likely amount that could be won by a complainant, Myers says "it remains to be seen whether aggrieved exhibitors will resort to arbitration or continue to go to court."

Least Enthusiastic Words

Perhaps his least enthusiastic words are left to the conciliation proposals. He said these were proposed when distributors rejected Allied's requests for arbitration of film rentals. Despite its "engaging language," Myers said, the conciliation plan "provides nothing more than that the distributors shall maintain an open-door policy, which some companies are doing now." He says the plan does not go as far as the old UMPI plan and that based on Allied's experience and that of its officers engaged in handling trade practice complaints to date "I have grave doubts as to whether the plan now offered will solve the problems uppermost in the exhibitors' minds, having to do with current selling policies and high film rentals."

On practices and procedure, Myers has mild criticism of the form of awards and appeals. On the matter of obtaining Justice Department and court approval of the plan Myers says that if "Allied elects to go along with this arbitration movement I would have to insist that the negotiations with the attorney general include counsel for all the participating organizations and be not limited to counsel for the film companies.

He said a provision has been added to the draft that, should the plan be abandoned at the end of its 18 months trial period, he thinks "outstanding cease and desist orders" would be ineffective 12 months after but unpaid damage awards could still be collected."

Myers also says that the selection of local exhibitor arbitrators should be left to the local and regional exhibitor associations and not chosen, as proposed, by exhibitor members of the national administrator of the plan.

Nothing in Myers' report to the convention could be interpreted as an endorsement in whole of the distributors' draft.

Montgomery Wins 1st Filmack Prize

Chicago, Nov. 17.— L. C. Montgomery of New Orleans won the drawing at the opening Allied convention session today for early arrivals. Prize was a decorative desk clock, donated by Irving Mack of Filmack, to encourage early arrivals at the business meetings. A drawing will be held daily, with only the first 50 arrivals eligible.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17. — Three Ohioan delegates to Allied States' national convention at the Morrison Hotel here—Leo T. Jones, of Upper Sandusky, Ernest Schwartz of Cleveland, and Martin G. Smith of Toledo (who has written an article depicting his experiences as a "guinea pig" in an effort to break the power of the Ohio State Censor Board, for the Convention Year Book)—all are attending their 19th national Allied convention, maintaining their perfect records of never having missed one of these national gatherings since Allied was organized. . . . Attending his first national Allied convention is Marion F. Bodwell of Wyoming, Ill., who started in the theatre business at the age of 10 distributing handbills for the old Lyceum Theatre at Wyoming, was promoted to ticket-taker shortly thereafter, became projectionist at the age of 12, and opened his own theatre (the Paramount) at the age of nineteen. Now only 49, Bodwell is a veteran of 39 years in show business. . . .

A round-table discussion for exhibitors from small and medium towns will be led by E. L. Ornstein and J. P. Finneran. A. H. Borkenstein, E. L. Millee and D. Irving Long will preside at the clinic for city and subsequent-run operators. J. R. Pell, T. R. Mendelsohn and Jack Armstrong will be moderators for the drive-in group.

An ATOI directors' meeting will precede the convention, on the night of Dec. 1.

A party for exhibitors attending the convention will be given by Indianapolis Tent No. 10 of Variety in the Lincoln Hotel.

Pittsburgh Owners Ask Tax Abolition

Pittsburgh, Nov. 17.— Morris Finkel, chairman of the board of Allied of Western Pennsylvania, headed a group that appeared before the City Council here today requesting that the city abolish its 10 per cent amusement tax.

He declared that the tax is threatening the very existence of motion picture theatres, and that many theatres had been forced to close their doors while others have been operating on a part time basis because of the "paralyzing effect" on business. The request was referred to the Committee on Finance for discussion tomorrow.

Allied Board

obtain better film prices and terms for members, and to renew Allied's membership in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations for another year.

Heretofore the Allied board habitually has taken final action on all such policy matters and has presented them to the convention for approval. Thus, in asking the convention to make the final decision now, Allied has inaugurated a new board and convention policy. Whether or not it will be continued in the future was not certain.

In asking the convention to decide these issues, the Allied board will make a report on the results of its deliberations and probably will make recommendations, it was said.

As of today, it appeared that the board would recommend only conditional approval of arbitration, dependent upon changes and additions to the proposed industry draft designed to give small exhibitors a better break, particularly in the area of film playing conditions. It appeared today that Cole's proposal would win the board's recommendation but final action on it would be up to the convention. Renewal of membership in COMPO also appears to be favored by the board, with the convention to have the last word on that also.

The board approved a plan and recommended its adoption by the general convention under which Allied regional units will engage in an expanded interchange of film buying information, including terms, allocations and prices. The plan in effect is an elaboration of the work being done by "Caravan," but with added embellishments, such as the exchange of ideas and opinions on films.

Allied Will Hold 1953 Convention in Boston

Chicago, Nov. 17.—The Allied board today approved New England Allied's bid for the 1953 national convention. It will be held at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel, Boston; the tentative dates being Nov. 7-11.

bids has worked out well and has gained the confidence and recognition of exhibitors generally," Reagan said, "we have no objection to the disclosure of bids after the deadline date and before the award is made if this is desired by our customers."

Reagan said that M-G-M had been striving to further its policy of limiting its competitive bidding situations only where necessary to meet legal requirements and it has to some extent been successful. Continuing, he said:

Complicated Problems

"Naturally, bidding situations present many complicated problems at times not easy to solve. Where performance in a given case points to a division of product as a practical solution, we have done this where agreeable to all concerned. We have little doubt that the theatre-going public prefers to have a theatre identified with a particular producer's product rather than the confusion which results when the public does not know which theatre will play a picture, particularly our type of pictures.

"We shall continue to exert our efforts to confine competitive bidding to those situations where there is no other alternative as we are fully aware of the feelings of the rank and file of exhibitors on this subject.

"In the meantime, we are hopeful of the adoption of the proposed arbitration and conciliation plan upon which so much time and attention have been given by all parties. I sincerely hope and do believe that the conciliation system to which I shall personally devote myself, will effectively deal with many of the exhibitor-distributor problems now confronting all of us, and that it will in fact make arbitration in many cases unnecessary."

crocodiles, bears, and an octopus as well as a mistaken-identity wedding ceremony in spectacular headdresses. The best running gag in the film is a switch on the snake-in-a-basket-charming by flute playing, which here involves beautiful women emerging from an empty basket. Of course, the "patty-cake" routine is included but with a twist.

THE story by Frank Butler and Harry Tugend has Hope and Crosby recover the sunken treasure and escape the destructive traps of power-mad prince Murvyn Vye, a close relative of Miss Lamour's. At the finale it appears the boys are doomed to die and Miss Lamour is to be married off to an old, greedy chief but a volcano erupts and the trio escapes with the treasure.

Johnny Burke and James Van Heusen provided a highly serviceable score which is topped by a jazz number, "Chicago Style," and a lovely ballad, "To See You," and includes "Hoot Mon," "Moonflowers," "The Merry-Go-Runaround" and "The Road to Bali."

Tugend produced and liberally utilized process photography of some attractive island settings. Hal Walker's direction kept the gags and the proceedings moving at a sharp pace. Others in the cast are Peter Coe, Ralph Moody and Leon Askin as well as the usual bevy of beautiful girls.

This was viewed at a special trade preview at the Bijou Theatre in New York and a packed audience of exhibitors and press representatives responded in an extremely hearty fashion. Promotional possibilities of this were demonstrated by Paramount in an impressive exploitation display as it could be done by a typical theatre. Tie-ups were made at an insignificant cost with a local pet shop for tropical animals and birds; a frozen fruit juice company for "Bali Brew"; a costume company for sarongs and costumes; a fruit wholesaler for tropical fruits and coconuts; a record company for phonograph records and albums; a model agency for tropical beauties; a sawdust company for South Seas sand, sea shells, and tropical decorations; and lobby displays of color stills, blowups and posters from National Screen Service.

Few films come to the exhibitor with so much advance demand and properly exploited, this very funny production should be one of the year's top grossers.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

WALTER PASHKIN

Jack Kirsch Hints

touched on the suggestion lightly, but the fact that he mentioned it at all was taken as an indication that he saw possibilities in the idea, especially in regard to conciliation.

In his own words, Kirsch said, speaking of efforts to achieve results, "Possibly a more certain and detailed procedure along the lines of the abortive UMPI plan of 1942 can be worked out. That must remain for further discussion by those who have given more time to the proceedings than I have. But do not delay any affirmative action you may have in mind in blind reliance on conciliation as a solution of your film problems. There are a lot of characters among the film companies, but I have never met one who looked—or acted—like Santa Claus."

(UMPI was set up by all segments of the film industry to work out intra-industry problems in 1942. The various proposals ultimately were rejected by the Department of Justice and, subsequently, the organization was dissolved).

Kirsch's welcome address to the delegates was sounded on a high note of optimism. He expressed confidence that present difficulties would be overcome, adding that "my devotion to the business is not so great, nor am I so old, that I would not be out trying my hand at some other line of endeavor if I felt that the motion picture business is washed up and has no future." That, he said, "goes for all of you."

The upsurge in business during the summer months, Kirsch said, caused an elation that now appears to be premature, as receipts fell off after Labor Day. He admitted that television was a big factor in the slump, but he insisted there were other problems to cope with, declaring that he was convinced that TV "is not a permanent menace." The industry has withstood more serious challenges than that offered by television, but TV coupled with other existing and threatened handicaps "might indeed do the trick," he said.

Kirsch reviewed the efforts that had been made by Allied leaders and the Council of Motion Picture Organizations in seeking the repeal of the Federal admission tax, as well as their fight against the bill to exempt nonprofit amusements from the tax. He warned that a great deal is yet to be done to offset the government's suit to compel film companies to turn over their choicest films for TV exhibition. If this action should coast along to a freak decision in favor of the government, or should the companies tamely submit to a consent decree, Kirsch said it would not be an exaggeration to say that "such a calamity would spell ruin for every motion picture theatre in the United States."

Kirsch charged that the Attorney General had abused his discretion as a prosecuting officer in filing this suit and that the exhibitors were within their rights in demanding that the case be withdrawn and, if the demand is unheeded, they will be justified in carrying their complaints even to Congress.

While exhibitors have shown good faith in working with other branches on matters adversely affecting the industry, Kirsch charged that the distributors have refused to throw the exhibitors a lifesaver on matters concerning film rental, pre-releases, must percentages and other problems. He claimed that the exhibitors "were innocent enough to believe that this new era of good feeling would extend all down the line." Allied, Kirsch said, may have changed its methods a little in protecting the independent exhibitor, but it has never deviated from its loyalty. He urged that the current convention unite the exhibitors on a course of affirmative action "that our distributor friends can no longer ignore."

having been with Stolkin in Chicago. However, he said that he may go to Chicago this week for further parleys or Stolkin may come here to continue the negotiations on the purchase by Fox of the Stolkin group's 29 per cent stock interest. He added that there were so many ramifications to the projected deal that he could not make a flat statement as to the progress of the talks.

Unofficial Reports

From other sources yesterday it was reported that Fox had returned to New York from Chicago to get commitments for further necessary finances to complete the deal. Unofficial reports in Chicago were that the price of the stock loomed as a barrier to any early deal. The resignations of Arnold Grant and Arnold Picker as RKO's chief executive officers last week sent the stock down about one point at the time, although it went up a quarter of a point yesterday to 3 and 5/8, in a day that saw 10,200 shares traded.

Prospective purchasers, on the one hand, are said to be angling to take advantage of the lower quotation, whereas the Stolkin group, on the other hand, is not prepared to take any heavy loss on its investment at the moment.

Call Both Deals Cold

In Chicago, members of the Stolkin syndicate declined to divulge details of the Fox negotiations and, although indicating that the deal was cold, admitted that it was not beyond the possibility of being revived. It also was indicated that talks concerning sale of the stock to a group represented by Col. Henry Crown, of the Hilton Hotel interests, also are cold. It could not be learned whether any new group had entered the scene.

Meanwhile, the RKO board, which met here daily last week, did not convene yesterday. Sherrill Corwin, acting board chairman, was reported to have been in Chicago, as was Edward J. Burke, board member from Chicago, who attended last week's meetings.

Reports circulating yesterday to the effect that Walt Disney would withhold "Peter Pan" from RKO release until internal difficulties were overcome were scouted by company spokesmen. It was pointed out that the RKO promotional departments were working on the picture's openings. Roy Disney, president of Walt Disney Productions, when asked about the report said, "No comment."

High Court Refuses Anti-trust Appeal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Supreme Court today refused to hear an appeal by two California exhibitors against a lower court decision dismissing their anti-trust suit against 10 distributors and two other independent exhibitors.

The suit was brought by Steve and Emma M. Chorak, owners of the Puente Theatre in Puente, Cal. They charged the defendants with conspiracy to give them inferior playing time and unreasonably long clearances. The California District Court and Court of Appeals hold there was no conspiracy but that the distributors had acted independently. The Choraks appealed to the Supreme Court, but a majority of the justices today indicated they would not take the case. Only three of the nine justices—Reed, Black and Douglas—said they thought the case should be heard.

Distributor defendants in the case were RKO Radio, Columbia, Warner Brothers, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, Republic, Loew's and Monogram. Exhibitor defendants were A. L. Sanborn, owner of the El Monte theatre in El Monte, Cal., and James Edwards Jr., operator of the Valley and Tumblewood theatres in El Monte.

"Andersen" to Net $25,000 for Hospital

Indications are that the benefit premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion Theatre here Nov. 24 will net approximately $25,000 for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital. All proceeds from the premiere are to go to the Saranac Lake institution. Tickets are now on sale and a sellout is expected by midweek. Celebrities from all branches of the entertainment world, along with top civic officials, are to attend the affair.

The premiere is the first in a contemplated annual series of benefit showings of important pictures aimed to further the tuberculosis research and treatment work performed at the hospital.

The benefit will be televised by station WPIX, with Tex McCrary and Jinx interviewing celebrities who will attend the opening. The program will be aired from 8:30 to 9:00 P.M., and recordings will be made of the interviews for subsequent use by Tex and Jinx on their Coast-to-Coast morning radio show.

Set 'Carmen' for Fabian's Grand

Fabian's Grand, Albany, N. Y., plans to carry the Dec. 11 telecast of "Carmen," it was learned here yesterday.

Meanwhile, negotiations between Theatre Network Television, the agency which has booked the first theatre TV entertainment event, and other circuits will resume tomorrow. Today, Nathan Halpern, TNT president, will be in Chicago to address the national Allied convention.

Upon his return here, Halpern is due to continue talks with various circuit executives, including those of Loew's, Warner Brothers, Shea Enterprises, RKO Theatres and United Paramount Theatres. For the Metropolitan Opera production of "Carmen," TNT is seeking 40 cents per seat as a minimum against 50 per cent of the net box-office receipts. It is understood that TNT expects to line-up from 40 to 50 theatres for the cross-country three-hour telecast. Although circuit executives are virtually unanimous in their interest, some oppose the price being sought for the event.

Deny Gamble Bid on Ownership Change

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—A Federal Communications Commission hearing examiner today denied an application by Ted Gamble to change a pending appplication for a Portland television station to take note of different ownership.

The application is by the Mt. Hood Radio and Television Co. Ralph Stolkin, Sherrill Corwin, Edward Burke and Harry Kahn recently sold their interest in the company to the employes. Gamble, a major stockholder in the firm, was asking the examiner, during a hearing on various Portland TV applications, to amend the application to take note of this change. The examiner denied the request, and Gamble will appeal to the full Commission.

It removes all questions as to the stability of our licenses in New York, Washington and Pittsburgh, and will make it possible for us to acquire additional stations."

Allied Votes to Renew COMPO Membership

Rembusch Gives Board's Report; Minority Report by Yamins Touches Off Near Revolt; See End of Arbitration Efforts

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—A near revolt of the Allied States membership against the majority report of the board of directors approving Allied's continued membership in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations for another year flared at the first open forum of the convention here today, revealing the temper of the convention and leading to predictions that Allied's participation in efforts to set up an industry arbitration plan will be terminated by the convention when the subject comes up tomorrow.

Nathan Yamins

The one-year renewal of Allied's COMPO membership was carried only after bitter debate from the floor following a minority board report read by Nathan Yamins of Massachusetts which would have limited Allied's continuation in COMPO only for the duration of the fight for admission tax repeal.

Yamins scored distribution trade practices in making the minority report and said its purpose was to

Probe's Continuance to Rest on New Committee

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. — The Senate Small Business Committee in the new Congress will have to make a new and fresh determination whether to continue its investigation of the motion picture industry, informed observers believe.

It was also learned that the chances now favor Sen. Thye (R., Minn.) to head the group in the next Congress. Sen. Tobey (R., N.H.) and Sen. Saltonstall (R., Mass.) both outrank Thye on the Republican side of the committee, but observers believe that both will decline the Small Business Committee post to devote themselves to jobs as chairmen of other higher-ranking committees. Tobey is in line to head the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, while Saltonstall will probably head the Armed Services Committee.

The investigation of distributor trade practices, started earlier in the

Allied Approaches Issue Of Arbitration Critically

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—With the Allied States convention here not yet having taken action on the proposed industry arbitration plan, the atmosphere is in sharp contrast to the open-arm welcome and flat proclamations at the Theatre Owners of America convention in Washington last September that "arbitration is here."

Apart from all other evidences of the critical attitude with which Allied is approaching the distributors' arbitration draft, there is this excerpt from a message in the convention journal by Abram F. Myers, Allied board chairman and general counsel:

"As this piece is being written the prospects for the early establishment of an arbitration system are dismal, to say the least. The distributors are working behind closed doors on a new draft which will be unveiled in their good time. Based on our experience to date it is not expected that this draft will be wholly acceptable to exhibitors and so there will be counter-proposals and the thing may go on indefinitely, unless Allied concludes that the effort no longer justifies the necessary expenditures of time and money.

"Perhaps the only justification for mentioning arbitration is to point out that here again Allied was able to contribute the services of able, experienced men to what in the early stages was believed to be a bona fide effort to benefit the entire industry. That the negotiations degenerated into just another film deal was not their fault."

Still Withhold Draft Of Arbitration Plan

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Despite the detailed, point-by-point analysis of the distributors' draft of the proposed industry arbitration plan given to the Allied convention here by Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel, the draft will not be released here for publication. Distributors have declined again to authorize its release.

Unsuccessful efforts to obtain authorization for its release were also made by the Theatre Owners of America at its September convention in Washington.

Review Group Cites Goldwyn

An award honoring Samuel Goldwyn for his production of "Hans Christian Andersen" was presented to the producer here yesterday by the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs and the Motion Picture Councils of Greater New York at a joint luncheon in the Plaza Hotel. Mrs. Charlotte Baruth, president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, said that in the long list of "distinguished" pictures produced by Goldwyn, none surpassed "Andersen" as outstanding family entertainment. In a brief address to the luncheon guests, Goldwyn said his decision to make the picture 16 years ago stemmed from his conviction that the "great Danish story-teller represents a wonderful and simple philosophy of life."

Goldwyn said he had decided to give at least one free performance in each city throughout the world for under-privileged children seeing it.

Report Stolkin At Coast Meets

Ralph Stolkin, head of the syndicate which bought out Howard Hughes' controlling interest in RKO Radio Pictures, was reported here yesterday to have left Chicago for the Coast for conferences with Sherrill Corwin, acting board chairman of RKO Radio.

Meanwhile, Matthew Fox, head of Films for Television and a partner in United Artists, who heads a group negotiating for the purchase of the Stolkin syndicate interests, said there are no new developments in the negotiations. He spiked reports that Louis R. Lurie, Coast real estate operator who once sought to purchase control of Warner Brothers, was a member of the Fox syndicate. Fox said that he did not know when he would confer again with Stolkin, either here or in Chicago.

Presumably, while on the Coast, Corwin and Stolkin will confer on the various offers received for the purchase of their 29 per cent interest in RKO and perhaps slate a meeting with Hughes.

An unconfirmed Coast report has the Stolkin group seeking a modification of their purchase agreement with Hughes, in order to eliminate certain requirements blocking the deal by which Fox would acquire RKO control.

"Stars and Stripes Forever"

(20th Century-Fox)

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA's marches and band music have been and remain enormously popular and this highly exploitable film tribute to him in color by Technicolor contains a resoundingly played score of his compositions. Clifton Webb delivers a brisk performance in whiskers-and-white-gloves as Sousa but the story, based on Sousa's "Marching Along," is familiar and incidental to the music.

It is the type of film which exhibitors can readily exploit, for the appeal of the music, the military setting, and the name of the world-famous composer-conductor is considerable. If properly backed, this should register strong returns.

Colorful and rousing renditions of the following are included: "Semper Fidelus," "The Stars and Stripes Forever," "Washington Post March," "Hail to the Chief," "El Capitan," "Light Cavalry Overture," "Presidential Polinaise," "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Also heard are "The Bowery," "Springtime in New York," "Father's Got Him," "Sweet Marie," "I'm Afraid" and a satiric vocalization of "Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto."

Debra Paget is sparkling and attractive in some boisterous production numbers as an oldtime burlesque house chorus girl and singer. Robert Wagner portrays Miss Paget's fiance, a favorite with Webb from their days at the Marine Corps barracks in Washington, when Wagner invented a tuba-like instrument named the Sousaphone. Ruth Hussey is properly sweet and wise as Webb's wife and the romantic adviser of Miss Paget and Wagner.

The Lamar Trotti screenplay, from a story by Ernest Vajda, follows the success of the Sousa band. There are numerous scenes of humor and warm sentiment as Wagner marries Miss Paget and they grow closer to Webb and his wife. Wagner loses a leg in the Spanish-American War but returns to his loving wife and plays the Sousaphone at a Webb Brooklyn Navy Yard Concert at the finale.

Trotti produced economically yet utilized colorful settings. Henry Koster directed ably. This is an attractive entertainment package containing the necessary elements for good business almost everywhere.

Running time, 89 minutes. General audience classification. For December release.

IRO Wins Guarantee Suit vs. Holiday Here

A judgment in favor of International Releasing Organization has been handed down here in IRO's suit against I. Z. Amusement, Inc., lessee of the Holiday Theatre, New York, on charges that the defendant failed to pay the agreed minimum guarantee for playing "Kisenga, Man of Africa" at the Holiday last March, according to IRO.

Sol Edwards, IRO president, said the case was important inasmuch as I. Z. Amusement had tried to attack the effect of the standard licensing agreement. It was intimated by the defendant that the standard contract was not valid, Edwards said. IRO has the U. S. distribution rights to 27 J. Arthur Rank pictures.

Efforts to reach the Holiday management were unsuccessful.

RUTH HARBERT has written an interesting story depicting how some movie stars celebrate Christmas Eve. This tale of Yultide appears in Good Housekeeping's December issue and is essentially a story about children since most of the stars named in the article have children. Miss Harbert takes the reader into the homes of Esther Williams, Robert Ryan, Jeanne Crain, William Holden, Brenda Marshall and young stars Janet Leigh and Tony Curtis. To illustrate the article pictures are used of Esther Williams, who is almost crowded out of the scene by her two sons and their pet puppy, and Robert Ryan and his wife, Jessica, whose living room is "knee-deep" with children.

Allied Renews Compo Membership

make sure that no one would misconstrue Allied's continued membership in COMPO as a sign of weakness or indifference to the trade practice complaints of Allied members.

The board's majority report was read by Trueman Rembusch, one of the triumvirate which heads COMPO. The one-year renewal, he said, would be subject to the same conditions as in the past, which would give the board authority to terminate it earlier for cause.

Trueman Rembusch

The report cited COMPO's contributions and activities beneficial to exhibitors, including the tax repeal campaign, the Hollywood round tables on production topics and the star tours. "If there were no COMPO today," Rembusch said, "we would have to organize one just to conduct the tax fight."

Sig Goldberg of Wisconsin Allied touched off the fireworks with an excoriation of distribution practices, particularly advanced admission pictures. He asserted he didn't think, nor did the Wisconsin delegation, that COMPO "has worked out." "It would be dead as a dodo today," he said, "if it were not for the admission tax fight. We can carry on that fight without renewing Allied's membership in COMPO."

Goldberg then moved that Allied withdraw from COMPO at once, and the motion was seconded by Ted Mann of Minneapolis.

Rembusch cautioned that the motion, if adopted, would do "untold damage to the tax campaign and would make the work of your Col. Cole greatly more complicated." H. A. Cole of Texas Allied is co-chairman of the tax campaign.

Finally Wins

The argument waxed back and forth with ultimately more weight being thrown against the motion than for it. Charles Blatt of Western Pennsylvania Allied reminded the convention that COMPO is not responsible for trade practice abuses or sales policies of any kind. Ben Cubby of Iowa-Nebraska Allied said approval of the motion would be a sign of Allied weakness, evidence that in reversing its board of directors it was divided internally. Phil Isley of Texas Allied, Ben Marcus of Wisconsin Allied and Jack Kirsch of Illinois Allied and general convention chairman, all argued against the resolution.

"There is $300,000,000 in tax savings at stake," Kirsch shouted. "If you overlook that you're daffy."

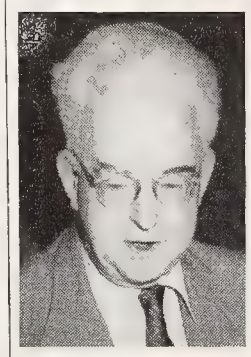
The revolt on the floor simmered to a murmur and Mann withdrew his second of the motion, after which Goldberg withdrew the motion itself.



There was no mistaking the temper of the convention, however, and leaders of key delegations freely predicted that Allied is definitely ready to withdraw from the industry arbitration movement completely—not merely content with reserving its decision pending further efforts to obtain arbitration provisions more to its liking.

The convention next turned to reports of the film clinics, which have been in continuous closed sessions here since Sunday. William Carroll of Indiana Allied reported 12 complaints which had developed in virtually all of the six separate clinics, representing individual types of theatres and situations.

These most frequent complaints, he said, were: advanced admission prices, "bottlenecking" of pictures, clearances, the "silent treatment" of exhibitors by salesmen, competitive bidding abuses, trailers, accessories, film costs, print shortages, film buying methods and tie-in sales. Carroll said that discussion at the clinics showed that virtually every company on occasion endeavors either to force advanced admissions by demand or by terms; that "illegal, arbitrary clearances exist between theatres not in substantial competition; that salesmen frequently do not call on some exhibitors for extended periods of time; that bidding is used by distributors largely to further their own ends; that trailers are excessively priced; that accessories are inadequate; that film costs are continuing to increase and that the print shortages are so bad "they put playdates on the auction block."

Thrown Open to Floor

The report was thrown open to discussion from the floor which was not concluded by adjournment time.

H. A. Cole

The session was opened at 3 P.M. by Wilbur Snaper, Allied president and permanent convention chairman. It led off with reports by Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the industry tax repeal campaign on progress of the fight. Cole said that to date 195 Congressmen have been pledged as favoring repeal of the tax and 60 others are on record as favoring a reduction. Cole said he was not satisfied with progress; that a 218 majority would be unsafe, since legislators change their minds. He urged regional chairmen to do their jobs better to insure success.

Cole said the campaign plan is to introduce a tax repeal measure on the first day of the new session of Congress in January. He asked all exhibitors for the vital information on the damage the tax is doing to their business, to present to Congressmen when hearings are held on the repeal measure.

McGee amplified on Cole's remarks, urging exhibitors to stick together in the fight and insure its success.

Snaper said "if we win this tax repeal fight we go from 'red' to 'blacks.'"

Film Clinics Play To SRO Attendance

Chicago, Nov. 18.—The six Allied Film Clinics which have been in almost continuous session here since Sunday are unusually well attended, indicating the genuine interest in film buying and booking problems among the independent exhibitors in attendance.

The clinics are specialized according to theatre situations, so that exhibitors with similar problems are congregated together. All six of the individual theatre clinic groups have attracted crowds which taxed the capacities of their meeting rooms. The session, except for the drive-in clinics, have been closed to the press.

3) Appealing to appropriate Congressional committees, such as the Senate Small Business Committee for relief.

In line with the resolution, Allied is requesting its members to submit all evidence of individual cases of alleged abuses to it for use in the three avenues of action to be taken.

Most of the "abuses" complained of by Allied center on high film prices and terms requiring advanced admissions.

The Allied board also gave partial approval to the proposal offered some time ago by H. A. Cole of Dallas, asking that Allied officers be relieved of their assignments in all-industry, cooperative endeavors in order to concentrate upon trade practice fights.

The directors decided "that for the time being, and until the distributors shall reform their destructive policies and practices, Allied leaders should confine their participation in cooperative undertakings to those projects which promise direct, immediate and substantial benefit to exhibitors, so that they may be free to devote their available time and energy to measures for the protection of Allied members."

"To this end," the resolution continues, "the directors will re-examine all such cooperative undertakings in which Allied leaders are now engaged, and will carefully screen all such projects that may be hereafter promoted, to determine whether they meet this test."

Will Be Screened Later

Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, explained that the projects will be screened by the board individually at a later date. It was unofficially indicated that Allied representation on the industry arbitration drafting committee probably will be terminated but that authorization will be given to Allied officials to continue on the industry tax repeal campaign and, probably, in COMPO, although the latter was somewhat uncertain.

Submission of the resolution to the convention today touched off a spirited discussion on the convention floor, almost wholly in support of it. Among those individually endorsing it from the floor were A. C. Myrick of Iowa-Nebraska Allied, M. K. McDaniel, Texas Allied; J. B. Steadman, Ohio Allied; George Vallos, Illinois Allied; Siebert Wirley of Texas, and others. Each recited particular instances of alleged examples of trade practice abuses, including advanced admission requirements, encountered in their own operations.

Harvey A Visitor

Rotus Harvey, former president of Western Theatre Owners, a visitor at the Allied convention, said that W.T.O. also will meet with the Senate Small Business Committee and will gather evidence, too, to present in support of pricing and other trade practice complaints. Harvey charged, also, that the practice of extended engagements is bringing about a serious artificial product shortage in his territory.

Ben Berger

Ben Berger of Minneapolis contended that most companies are concentrating their resources on the making of "B" pictures, which leads to the high film price complaints. He said 75 per cent of the theatres would be out of business if it were not for concessions sales. "There is a creeping paralysis in the business," he said. "We must act to prevent our patrons from being deprived because of price from seeing the good pictures." Berger said North Central Allied is planning to retaliate in every way it can against the conditions complained of. He said he would urge NCA to petition the Minnesota State Legislature to establish the distribution and exhibition of films as a public utility, subject to fair rate schedules.

Ben Marcus, moderator of the small city film clinic; Ted Mendelsohn of Minneapolis and John Wolfberg of Denver all attacked high film prices and advanced admission pictures. Mendelsohn suggested that all such pictures be by-passed by exhibitors.

Charles Niles of Iowa-Nebraska Allied offered the resolution in support of the board's policy statement and included a request to exhibitors to make their personal negotiating experiences available for use by Allied.

Rodgers Due Today At Allied Meet

Chicago, Nov. 18. — W. F. Rodgers, chairman of the distributors arbitration committee, is expected here tomorrow, probably to make a last-ditch battle to rescue the industry arbitration plan from what appears tonight to be an almost certain veto by the Allied States convvention.

Allied Meet Sees Large Screen TV Demonstration

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—A demonstration of large screen television in the Allied States convention auditorium here today held an audience of 400 exhibitors in wrapt attention for 45 minutes.

The demonstration was provided by RCA on a 12 x 15-foot screen. The program originated in NBC's local television studio, WNBQ, about two miles from the convention hotel. It consisted of a panel composed of Jack O'Brien of RCA, Nathan Halpern of Theatre Network Television, Trueman Rembusch, Nathan Yamins, A. R. Blocher, John Wolfberg and Leon Back of Allied. Questions were posed for Halpern to answer.

Among other things, Halpern said that by the end of this year theatre installations of large screen TV will pass the 100 mark. There are about 90 now. He assured exhibitors that there would be no acceptable standard of color TV for theatres within the next several years, discounting concern about obsolescence of equipment bought today. He estimated it would take about five years on the average to liquidate the cost of equipment.

Halpern said 50 theatres showing large screen TV of the Walcott-Marciano heavyweight championship fight grossed $400,000, or an average of slightly over $8,000 apiece. The average net profit was about $5,000 for large theatres and $1,000 to $2,000 for small ones. He said the total seating capacity of the theatres was about 120,000.

Halpern also reported on the status of the FCC hearings on applications for exclusive theatre TV channels and cited the programs, previously announced, for future theatre telecasts.

'5000 Fingers' Float In Macy Parade

Columbia Pictures' national campaign for "The 5000 Fingers of Dr. T." will be kicked off Thanksgiving Day with a float in the annual Macy parade here, which will be seen over the Coast-to-Coast network of CBS-TV.

Macy officials announced that the "5000 Fingers" float will be the first ever devoted to a Hollywood feature in the 20-year history of the parade.

Jarrico Suit Opens

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—Counsel for writer Paul Jarrico and RKO Radio Pictures have agreed, at the opening of the former's $350,000 suit against company, to allow Superior Judge Orlando H. Rhodes to try the case without a jury. The suit arises from cupied today's session. The suit arises Howard Hughes' firing of Jarrico when the writer refused to answer the Un-American Activities Committee's Committee's questions.

Refuse McConnell Bid

CHICAGO, Nov. 18. — Attorney Thomas C. McConnell's request for interest on supplemental attorneys' fees granted him to cover his activities during the period from the original Towne decision to the time the appeal was denied has been turned down by the Seventh District Court of Appeals.

Switow Asks Allied Rogers Drive Aid

Chicago, Nov. 18. — Sam Switow, national exhibitor chairman of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, urged the Allied States convention delegates here today to support the hospital's annual Christmas Salute and to place the public coin collection containers in their theatres.

Switow said it is hoped that 200,000 signature may be obtained for the Christmas Salute this year, with accompanying donations of $150,000. He said 3,600 coin containers are in theatres now.

Charge Rank Theatre With Quota Default

BALTIMORE, Nov. 18.—In view of Trade has issued a summons against the Rank Organization's Haymarket Gaumont Theatre for an alleged default in the 25 per cent supporting program quota.

The action came as a surprise, the general feeling in the trade being that the supporting program quota is ineffective. To date, there have been only seven quota prosecutions for the past year's alleged defaulters. All of them were independent exhibitors in "closed" situations, the theory apparently being that absence of competition should permit an exhibitor to book enough British features on favorable terms.

United Artists Opens Branch in Albany

BUFFALO, Nov. 18.—A United Artists sub-branch has been opened here under the management of Buffalo branch manager Mannie A. Brown, and will be added to the territory supervised by Moe Dudleson.

Michael Frashela has joined the local UA sales staff, covering Rochester and Syracuse. Selwyn Ginsler is covering Buffalo.

Korda Film for India

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Sir Alexander Korda will make "Taj Mahal" in India with color as one of his "important productions" for next year. His London Films has had considerable success here with the Indian-made "Aan."

ITOO Board to Meet

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 18.—A meeting of the board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio will be held here Dec. 2.

Allied Banquet to Honor Greer Garson

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Greer Garson will be guest of honor at the Allied States convention banquet here tomorrow night. Ronald Reagan will be toastmaster and entertainment will be provided by Morton Downey. The banquet will mark the close of the convention.

During the first nine months of 1952, movie advertisers invested a total of some $428,000 in Look – a good deal more than they spent in any other magazine. In fact, in this nine-month period, Look carried almost twice as many pages of movie advertising as any other major magazine.

One reason is that Look does the greatest job of pre-selling movies. Every issue carries exciting articles on Hollywood productions and personalities, and much-quoted reviews of new productions. And, once each year, the coveted Look Motion Picture Achievement Awards focus national attention on the outstanding accomplishments of the industry.

But an even more compelling reason is this: Look reaches an audience of 20,650,000 movie-minded Americans – at the lowest cost per thousand in the major magazine field.

20th Field Talks on Product Promotions

Twentieth Century-Fox division managers will hold strategy meetings with branch heads during the next two weeks to activate merchandising and advertising plans that were set at the two-day home office meeting last week.

Division managers who returned to their offices at the weekend will start visiting exchange centers this week to discuss immediate plans for Thanksgiving releases, "Pony Soldier" and "Bloodhounds of Broadway." Plans for campaigns will also be made for Christmas and New Year's releases, "Stars and Stripes Forever," "My Cousin Rachel," "Ruby Gentry" and "The I Don't Care Girl," as well as the continued handling of Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Snows of Kilimanjaro."

year, is still continuing, officials said. Committee investigator William D. Amis is again on the West Coast, and, while he is there primarily on other committee business, he is expected to devote at least some time to talking to California exhibitors.

But the investigation will still be only in its early stages when the year ends, and the new committee therefore will have to make its own decision as to whether to drop the probe or develop it still further. "We don't have nearly enough information for a report with any sort of conclusions," says one committee staff member, "but we will have plenty of information to put before the committee in January to permit them to make a very sound determination as to whether to continue the investigation or drop it."

When the committee originally voted the investigation last Spring, it did not have any information of its own on the subject, but merely complaints from the Pacific Coast theatre owners and other exhibitors. At that time, committee members indicated they had okayed the investigation more because there was no committee opposition to it rather than because of any strong positive feeling for it.

"The Bad and the Beautiful"

THIS big and skillful telling of an intimate story about Hollywood employs a large and extremely capable cast topped by no less than seven players whose names rate marquee billing, to wit: Lana Turner, Kirk Douglas, Dick Powell, Walter Pidgeon, Barry Sullivan, Gloria Grahame and Gilbert Roland. These actors, and a great many others whose lesser works match theirs in quality, turn in sparkling performances in a production that is known hereabouts as "an actor's picture," if there ever was one. So far as name power and player performance can be said to guarantee the success of an attraction, this one manifestly is guaranteed, and maybe that is far enough.

The story about Hollywood that this picture tells has nothing in common with the homey, folksy little story which the COMPO tourists go about the country telling the paying public for the purpose of offsetting the injurious effects of unfavorable newspaper handling of Hollywood news. Whereas the COMPO troupers tell of a Hollywood that is really just like any other small town in the country, with its hardworking citizens running the usual averages as to divorces, marriages, child-bearing and church attendance, "The Bad and the Beautiful" tells of a Hollywood as ruthless, unbridled and barren of ethics as its most fervent detractors have pictured it. The film presents this kind of Hollywood so expertly and convincingly as to set the COMPO educational efforts back to where they started. It is, intentionally or not, a vivid expression of the viewpoint held by the no means minor segment of Hollywood opinion which has contended all along that the homey, folksy Hollywood story of the COMPO tourists has cost a lot of ticket sales by its de-glamorizing influence. This is one of the mootest of the moot questions around Hollywood, and is likely to stay that way.

Generically, "The Bad and the Beautiful" groups with "A Star Is Born," "Sunset Boulevard" and "All About Eve," and this certainly is not box-office company to be scorned. It is as big as any of the trio, as nameful, as expert, speaking roundly, and more outspoken, uninhibited and elemental than any of them. Subjectively it is closest to "Sunset Boulevard," which is not to say similar, and structurally it is closest to "All About Eve" in that it runs out three story lines, inter-related, managing to keep each important independently without cost to the over-all narrative. Charles Schnee rates rare praise for an extraordinary job on the script.

Douglas plays the son of a hated Hollywood producer whose funeral (attended only by extras paid to appear as mourners) keys the picture. Douglas, who hated his father but learned from him the secrets of success-at-any-price, determines to make Hollywood bow down to the family name again, and the picture records the double-crosses, steals, schemes, deceits and frauds by which he does so. Miss Turner, as an actress, Powell as a writer and Sullivan as a director portray the principal victims of his raging ambition, although there are others, and Pidgeon enacts a producer who (and this is the structural point on which the story hinges) attempts, with seeming success, to persuade them that by the acts with which Douglas ruined their respective lives he made each of them so famous and rich, that they should come now to his economic rescue by making for him a picture that could put him on his feet. This cynical representation is probably the most damaging single aspersion ever cast upon the ladies and gentlemen of the motion picture producing profession.

Direction by Vincente Minnelli undoubtedly is accountable in large measure for some of the splendid individual instances of superb performance, as well as for the over-all excellence.

Producer John Houseman has a highly professional and clearly a thoughtful achievement to his credit here.

Running time, 118 minutes. Adult audience classification. For January release.

End SWG Strike vs. TV Film Producers

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—The Screen Writers Guild and the Authors League of America have ended their 14-week strike against the Alliance of Television Film Producers, which makes 85 per cent of the television films produced on the Coast, with the producers winning an important concession on royalties and granting the two other original demands of the writers involving the reservation of rights by the author and the leasing of stories Many details of the contract remain to be worked out, it was said, but there was agreement in principle.

Eastern SAG Votes to Authorize Strike Action

The Eastern membership of the Screen Actors Guild, seeking to "curb unlimited and repetitious televising of filmed advertisements," has unanimously voted to authorize strike action against producers of TV film commercials and the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Walter Pidgeon, newly elected SAG president, presented the strike proposal to the membership, which may bring the first work-stoppage in the Guild's 19-year history.

Discuss Promotion Of 'Theatre Week'

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—Plans are to be discussed concerning the promotion next year of "National Theatre Week" by Lester Cowan with leaders of both the motion picture industry and the stage, it was announced as Cowan left here for New York to film scenes featuring stage players for the Cinema Productions' feature, "Main Street to Broadway."

Stage and screen players will work together in the promotion which is to be in their common interest. "Main Street" is an exhibitor-financed attraction to be released by M-G-M. Cowan has stated the release should coincide with "National Theatre Week."

Kodak 36-Week Net Is $28,585,716

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Eastman Kodak announced that net earnings for the three-quarter year period ending Sept. 7 were $28,585,716 or $1.71 a share, as compared with $32,350,194 or $2.13 a share a year ago.

Seventeen cents of the per share decrease is attributed to the 10 per cent stock dividend in January. Sales for the 36-week period were $388,859,261 against $384,243,040 for the same period last year.

Company directors today voted a wage dividend of an estimated $22,200,000 for more than 51,000 Kodak personnel in the U. S., with payment to be made on March 6, 1953, at the rate of $27.50 per each $1,000 earned at Kodak during the five years, 1948-1952.

Salt Lake City Bans "Everybody's Girl"

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 18.—In an unprecedented action, the police anti-vice squad has ordered the banning of the picture, "Everybody's Girl," from showing at the State Theatre here. While Salt Lake City has no censors for motion pictures, the picture was one of a very few to be banned by police within the memory of local showmen.

The film had played only one day in the downtown house when Capt. E. J. Steinfeldt, head of the anti-vice bureau, ordered the ban. He described the picture as "unfit for public viewing" and said it "fails to meet the qualifications by which motion pictures may be shown in Salt Lake City."

Cohen to RKO Radio As A Copywriter

Charles Cohen has joined RKO Radio's advertising department here as a copywriter, it was announced by Richard Condon, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation.

He remained there until 1945, when he was named advertising manager for Berkely Industries in New Jersey. He returned to the industry in 1948 at Universal-International, and two years later joined 20th Century-Fox.

Ehrlich, Boehnel In New RKO Posts

Joe Ehrlich has been added to RKO Radio's publicity department to handle publicity and promotion of short subjects. Bob Boehnel, who has been dividing his time between short subject publicity and general newspaper contacts, will devote his full time to newspapers.

Ehrlich formerly was with 20th Century-Fox, where he handled syndicates and wire services.

Allied Votes to Renew COMPO Membership

Rembusch Gives Board's Report; Minority Report by Yamins Touches Off Near Revolt; See End of Arbitration Efforts

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—A near revolt of the Allied States membership against the majority report of the board of directors approving Allied's continued membership in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations for another year flared at the first open forum of the convention here today, revealing the temper of the convention and leading to predictions that Allied's participation in efforts to set up an industry arbitration plan will be terminated by the convention when the subject comes up tomorrow.

Nathan Yamins

The one-year renewal of Allied's COMPO membership was carried only after bitter debate from the floor following a minority board report read by Nathan Yamins of Massachusetts which would have limited Allied's continuation in COMPO only for the duration of the fight for admission tax repeal.

Yamins scored distribution trade practices in making the minority report and said its purpose was to

Small Business Group Future Hangs in Doubt

Probe's Continuance to Rest on New Committee

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. — The Senate Small Business Committee in the new Congress will have to make a new and fresh determination whether to continue its investigation of the motion picture industry, informed observers believe.

It was also learned that the chances now favor Sen. Thye (R., Minn.) to head the group in the next Congress. Sen. Tobey (R., N.H.) and Sen. Saltonstall (R., Mass.) both outrank Thye on the Republican side of the committee, but observers believe that both will decline the Small Business Committee post to devote themselves to jobs as chairmen of other higher-ranking committees. Tobey is in line to head the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, while Saltonstall will probably head the Armed Services Committee.

The investigation of distributor trade practices, started earlier in the Hurok, whose career story is being brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox in "Tonight We Sing," managed the first American tour of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra.

Allied Approaches Issue Of Arbitration Critically

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—With the Allied States convention here not yet having taken action on the proposed industry arbitration plan, the atmosphere is in sharp contrast to the open-arm welcome and flat proclamations at the Theatre Owners of America convention in Washington last September that "arbitration is here."

Apart from all other evidences of the critical attitude with which Allied is approaching the distributors' arbitration draft, there is this excerpt from a message in the convention journal by Abram F. Myers, Allied board chairman and general counsel:

"As this piece is being written the prospects for the early establishment of an arbitration system are dismal, to say the least. The distributors are working behind closed doors on a new draft which will be unveiled in their good time. Based on our experience to date it is not expected that this draft will be wholly acceptable to exhibitors and so there will be counter-proposals and the thing may go on indefinitely, unless Allied concludes that the effort no longer justifies the necessary expenditures of time and money.

"Perhaps the only justification for mentioning arbitration is to point out that here again Allied was able to contribute the services of able, experienced men to what in the early stages was believed to be a bona fide effort to benefit the entire industry. That the negotiations degenerated into just another film deal was not their fault."

Still Withhold Draft Of Arbitration Plan

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Despite the detailed, point-by-point analysis of the distributors' draft of the proposed industry arbitration plan given to the Allied convention here by Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel, the draft will not be released here for publication. Distributors have declined again to authorize its release.

Unsuccessful efforts to obtain authorization for its release were also made by the Theatre Owners of America at its September convention in Washington.

Review Group Cites Goldwyn

An award honoring Samuel Goldwyn for his production of "Hans Christian Andersen" was presented to the producer here yesterday by the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs and the Motion Picture Councils of Greater New York at a joint luncheon in the Plaza Hotel. More than 150 representatives of the national and local organizations which preview and rate films for an aggregate membership of 40,000,000 women attended the event.

Mrs. Charlotte Baruth, president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, said that in the long list of "distinguished" pictures produced by Goldwyn, none surpassed "Andersen" as outstanding family entertainment. In a brief address to the luncheon guests, Goldwyn said his decision to make the picture 16 years ago stemmed from his conviction that the "great Danish story-teller represents a wonderful and simple philosophy of life."

Goldwyn said he had decided to give at least one free performance in each city throughout the world for under-privileged children seeing it.

W. B. Midwest Zone Meet in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 18.—Warner Brothers Midwest zone held its kick-off showmanship drive meeting here at the Schroeder Hotel. Mayor Ziedler opened the conclave by applauding the exhibitors for their assists in their civic promotions.

The high light of the drive is an exploitation contest conceived by Al Kvool with prizes of $3000 in cash. Exchange managers from Paramount, Universal, 20th Century-Fox, M-G-M and Warner Brothers told of the pictures selected and prize offers.

Col. Stockholder Files Trust Suit

A minority stockholders suit against Columbia Pictures and its officers and directors, seeking to enjoin the company from engaging in alleged anti-trust trade practices, has been filed in New York Supreme Court.

The suit was brought by William B. Weinberger of New York, whose attorney is Samuel H. Levinkind, also of this city, Levinkind claimed that his client owns more than 100 shares and is in no way connected with exhibition.

The complaint is due to be answered by Columbia on Tuesday. The suit charges Columbia with engaging in a course of action in violation of Federal and state anti-trust laws in connection with the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures.

Report Stolkin At Coast Meets

Ralph Stolkin, head of the syndicate which bought out Howard Hughes' controlling interest in RKO Radio Pictures, was reported here yesterday to have left Chicago for the Coast for conferences with Sherrill Corwin, acting board chairman of RKO Radio.

Meanwhile, Matthew Fox, head of Films for Television and a partner in United Artists, who heads a group negotiating for the purchase of the Stolkin syndicate interests, said there are no new developments in the negotiations. He spiked reports that Louis R. Lurie, Coast real estate operator who once sought to purchase control of Warner Brothers, was a member of the Fox syndicate. Fox said that he did not know when he would confer again with Stolkin, either here or in Chicago.

Presumably, while on the Coast, Corwin and Stolkin will confer on the various offers received for the purchase of their 29 per cent interest in RKO and perhaps slate a meeting with Hughes.

An unconfirmed Coast report has the Stolkin group seeking a modification of their purchase agreement with Hughes, in order to eliminate certain requirements blocking the deal by which Fox would acquire RKO control.

"Stars and Stripes Forever"

(20th Century-Fox)

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA's marches and band music have been and remain enormously popular and this highly exploitable film tribute to him in color by Technicolor contains a resoundingly played score of his compositions. Clifton Webb delivers a brisk performance in whiskers-and-white-gloves as Sousa but the story, based on Sousa's "Marching Along," is familiar and incidental to the music.

It is the type of film which exhibitors can readily exploit, for the appeal of the music, the military setting, and the name of the world-famous composer-conductor is considerable. If properly backed, this should register strong returns.

Colorful and rousing renditions of the following are included: "Semper Fidelus," "The Stars and Stripes Forever," "Washington Post March," "Hail to the Chief," "El Capitan," "Light Cavalry Overture," "Presidential Polinaise," "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Also heard are "The Bowery," "Springtime in New York," "Father's Got Him," "Sweet Marie," "I'm Afraid" and a satiric vocalization of "Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto."

Debra Paget is sparkling and attractive in some boisterous production numbers as an oldtime burlesque house chorus girl and singer. Robert Wagner portrays Miss Paget's fiance, a favorite with Webb from their days at the Marine Corps barracks in Washington, when Wagner invented a tuba-like instrument named the Sousaphone. Ruth Hussey is properly sweet and wise as Webb's wife and the romantic adviser of Miss Paget and Wagner.

The Lamar Trotti screenplay, from a story by Ernest Vajda, follows the success of the Sousa band. There are numerous scenes of humor and warm sentiment as Wagner marries Miss Paget and they grow closer to Webb and his wife. Wagner loses a leg in the Spanish-American War but returns to his loving wife and plays the Sousaphone at a Webb Brooklyn Navy Yard Concert at the finale.

Trotti produced economically yet utilized colorful settings. Henry Koster directed ably. This is an attractive entertainment package containing the necessary elements for good business almost everywhere.

Running time, 89 minutes. General audience classification. For December release.

IRO Wins Guarantee Suit vs. Holiday Here

A judgment in favor of International Releasing Organization has been handed down here in IRO's suit against I. Z. Amusement, Inc., lessee of the Holiday Theatre, New York, on charges that the defendant failed to pay the agreed minimum guarantee for playing "Kisenga, Man of Africa" at the Holiday last March, according to IRO.

Sol Edwards, IRO president, said the case was important inasmuch as I. Z. Amusement had tried to attack the effect of the standard licensing agreement. It was intimated by the defendant that the standard contract was not valid, Edwards said. IRO has the U. S. distribution rights to 27 J. Arthur Rank pictures.

Efforts to reach the Holiday management were unsuccessful.

RUTH HARBERT has written an interesting story depicting how some movie stars celebrate Christmas Eve. This tale of Yultide appears in Good Housekeeping's December issue and is essentially a story about children since most of the stars named in the article have children. Miss Harbert takes the reader into the homes of Esther Williams, Robert Ryan, Jeanne Crain, William Holden, Brenda Marshall and young stars Janet Leigh and Tony Curtis. To illustrate the article pictures are used of Esther Williams, who is almost crowded out of the scene by her two sons and their pet puppy, and Robert Ryan and his wife, Jessica, whose living room is "knee-deep" with children.

Allied Renews Compo Membership

make sure that no one would misconstrue Allied's continued membership in COMPO as a sign of weakness or indifference to the trade practice complaints of Allied members.

The board's majority report was read by Trueman Rembusch, one of the triumvirate which heads COMPO. The one-year renewal, he said, would be subject to the same conditions as in the past, which would give the board authority to terminate it earlier for cause.

Trueman Rembusch

The report cited COMPO's contributions and activities beneficial to exhibitors, including the tax repeal campaign, the Hollywood round tables on production topics and the star tours. "If there were no COMPO today," Rembusch said, "we would have to organize one just to conduct the tax fight."

Sig Goldberg of Wisconsin Allied touched off the fireworks with an excoriation of distribution practices, particularly advanced admission pictures. He asserted he didn't think, nor did the Wisconsin delegation, that COMPO "has worked out." "It would be dead as a dodo today," he said, "if it were not for the admission tax fight. We can carry on that fight without renewing Allied's membership in COMPO."

Goldberg then moved that Allied withdraw from COMPO at once, and the motion was seconded by Ted Mann of Minneapolis.

Rembusch cautioned that the motion, if adopted, would do "untold damage to the tax campaign and would make the work of your Col. Cole greatly more complicated." H. A. Cole of Texas Allied is co-chairman of the tax campaign.

Finally Wins

The argument waxed back and forth with ultimately more weight being thrown against the motion than for it. Charles Blatt of Western Pennsylvania Allied reminded the convention that COMPO is not responsible for trade practice abuses or sales policies of any kind. Ben Cubby of Iowa-Nebraska Allied said approval of the motion would be a sign of Allied weakness, evidence that in reversing its board of directors it was divided internally. Phil Isley of Texas Allied, Ben Marcus of Wisconsin Allied and Jack Kirsch of Illinois Allied and general convention chairman, all argued against the resolution.

"There is $300,000,000 in tax savings at stake," Kirsch shouted. "If you overlook that you're daffy."

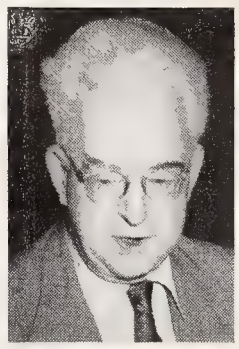
The revolt on the floor simmered to a murmur and Mann withdrew his second of the motion, after which Goldberg withdrew the motion itself.



There was no mistaking the temper of the convention, however, and leaders of key delegations freely predicted that Allied is definitely ready to withdraw from the industry arbitration movement completely—not merely content with reserving its decision pending further efforts to obtain arbitration provisions more to its liking.

The convention next turned to reports of the film clinics, which have been in continuous closed sessions here since Sunday. William Carroll of Indiana Allied reported 12 complaints which had developed in virtually all of the six separate clinics, representing individual types of theatres and situations.

These most frequent complaints, he said, were: advanced admission prices, "bottlenecking" of pictures, clearances, the "silent treatment" of exhibitors by salesmen, competitive bidding abuses, trailers, accessories, film costs, print shortages, film buying methods and tie-in sales. Carroll said that discussion at the clinics showed that virtually every company on occasion endeavors either to force advanced admissions by demand or by terms; that "illegal, arbitrary clearances exist between theatres not in substantial competition; that salesmen frequently do not call on some exhibitors for extended periods of time; that bidding is used by distributors largely to further their own ends; that trailers are excessively priced; that accessories are inadequate; that film costs are continuing to increase and that the print shortages are so bad "they put playdates on the auction block."

Thrown Open to Floor

The report was thrown open to discussion from the floor which was not concluded by adjournment time.

H. A. Cole

The session was opened at 3 P.M. by Wilbur Snaper, Allied president and permanent convention chairman. It led off with reports by Cole and Pat McGee, co-chairmen of the industry tax repeal campaign on progress of the fight. Cole said that to date 195 Congressmen have been pledged as favoring repeal of the tax and 60 others are on record as favoring a reduction. Cole said he was not satisfied with progress; that a 218 majority would be unsafe, since legislators change their minds. He urged regional chairmen to do their jobs better to insure success.

Cole said the campaign plan is to introduce a tax repeal measure on the first day of the new session of Congress in January. He asked all exhibitors for the vital information on the damage the tax is doing to their business, to present to Congressmen when hearings are held on the repeal measure.

McGee amplified on Cole's remarks, urging exhibitors to stick together in the fight and insure its success.

Snaper said "if we win this tax repeal fight we go from 'red' to 'blacks.'"

Film Clinics Play To SRO Attendance

Chicago, Nov. 18.—The six Allied Film Clinics which have been in almost continuous session here since Sunday are unusually well attended, indicating the genuine interest in film buying and booking problems among the independent exhibitors in attendance.

The clinics are specialized according to theatre situations, so that exhibitors with similar problems are congregated together. All six of the individual theatre clinic groups have attracted crowds which taxed the capacities of their meeting rooms. The session, except for the drive-in clinics, have been closed to the press.

Reelect Adler, Davee To TESMA Board

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—The following have been elected to three-year terms on the board of directors of the Theatre Equipment Supply Manufacturers Association at the annual convention here: Ben H. Adler, Adler Silhouette Letter Co., and Larry W. Davee, Century Projector Corp., both reelected, and Donald Hyndman, Eastman Kodak Co., and Tom La Vezzi, La Vezzi Machine Works, both new members.

Reelected to the Theatre Equipment Dealers Association board for three-year terms were Joseph Cefrie, Boston, and Eldon Peek, Oklahoma Theatre Supply Co., Denver. New directors elected for three-year terms are: Solon Burns, Modern Theatre Supply Co., Seattle, and Homer Teigmeier of B. F. Shearer Co., San Francisco. Tom Shearer of the latter company continues as TEDA board chairman.

TESMA-TEDA confirmed the dates Oct. 31-Nov. 4 for next year's joint convention with the Theatre Owners of America at the Conrad Hilton Hotel here.

A new TESMA trade mark was adopted embodying the slogan: "That the Show May Go On," embodying the basic creed of TESMA members.

Harry Strong, president of the Strong Electric Co., was presented with a placque by TESMA in appreciation of his many years of service to the organization.

Seating Has Flavor Of Political Meets

Chicago, Nov. 18.—The Allied States convention auditorium here has seating arrangements similar to those employed by national political conventions. State delegations are seated together under state banners. The same seating arrangement will prevail at the closing banquet tomorrow night.

Largest state delegation is claimed by Wisconsin with over 100 delegates. Large delegations also are here from Ohio, Michigan and other nearby Midwestern states. The home delegation, Illinois, also is very well represented.

Pricing Abuses

administrative agencies for action.

3) Appealing to appropriate Congressional committees, such as the Senate Small Business Committee for relief.

In line with the resolution, Allied is requesting its members to submit all evidence of individual cases of alleged abuses to it for use in the three avenues of action to be taken.

Most of the "abuses" complained of by Allied center on high film prices and terms requiring advanced admissions.

The Allied board also gave partial approval to the proposal offered some time ago by H. A. Cole of Dallas, asking that Allied officers be relieved of their assignments in all-industry, cooperative endeavors in order to concentrate upon trade practice fights.

The directors decided "that for the time being, and until the distributors shall reform their destructive policies and practices, Allied leaders should confine their participation in cooperative undertakings to those projects which promise direct, immediate and substantial benefit to exhibitors, so that they may be free to devote their available time and energy to measures for the protection of Allied members."

"To this end," the resolution continues, "the directors will re-examine all such cooperative undertakings in which Allied leaders are now engaged, and will carefully screen all such projects that may be hereafter promoted, to determine whether they meet this test."

Will Be Screened Later

Wilbur Snaper, Allied president, explained that the projects will be screened by the board individually at a later date. It was unofficially indicated that Allied representation on the industry arbitration drafting committee probably will be terminated but that authorization will be given to Allied officials to continue on the industry tax repeal campaign and, probably, in COMPO, although the latter was somewhat uncertain.

Submission of the resolution to the convention today touched off a spirited discussion on the convention floor, almost wholly in support of it. Among those individually endorsing it from the floor were A. C. Myrick of Iowa-Nebraska Allied, M. K. McDaniel, Texas Allied; J. B. Steadman, Ohio Allied; George Vallos, Illinois Allied; Siebert Wirley of Texas, and others. Each recited particular instances of alleged examples of trade practice abuses, including advanced admission requirements, encountered in their own operations.

Harvey A Visitor

Rotus Harvey, former president of Western Theatre Owners, a visitor at the Allied convention, said that W.T.O. also will meet with the Senate Small Business Committee and will gather evidence, too, to present in support of pricing and other trade practice complaints. Harvey charged, also, that the practice of extended engagements is bringing about a serious artificial product shortage in his territory.

Ben Berger

Ben Berger of Minneapolis contended that most companies are concentrating their resources on the making of "B" pictures, which leads to the high film price complaints. He said 75 per cent of the theatres would be out of business if it were not for concessions sales. "There is a creeping paralysis in the business," he said. "We must act to prevent our patrons from being deprived because of price from seeing the good pictures." Berger said North Central Allied is planning to retaliate in every way it can against the conditions complained of. He said he would urge NCA to petition the Minnesota State Legislature to establish the distribution and exhibition of films as a public utility, subject to fair rate schedules.

Ben Marcus, moderator of the small city film clinic; Ted Mendelsohn of Minneapolis and John Wolfberg of Denver all attacked high film prices and advanced admission pictures. Mendelsohn suggested that all such pictures be by-passed by exhibitors.

Charles Niles of Iowa-Nebraska Allied offered the resolution in support of the board's policy statement and included a request to exhibitors to make their personal negotiating experiences available for use by Allied.

Rodgers Due Today At Allied Meet

Chicago, Nov. 18. — W. F. Rodgers, chairman of the distributors arbitration committee, is expected here tomorrow, probably to make a last-ditch battle to rescue the industry arbitration plan from what appears tonight to be an almost certain veto by the Allied States convvention.

Allied Meet Sees Large Screen TV Demonstration

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—A demonstration of large screen television in the Allied States convention auditorium here today held an audience of 400 exhibitors in wrapt attention for 45 minutes.

The demonstration was provided by RCA on a 12 x 15-foot screen. The program originated in NBC's local television studio, WNBQ, about two miles from the convention hotel. It consisted of a panel composed of Jack O'Brien of RCA, Nathan Halpern of Theatre Network Television, Trueman Rembusch, Nathan Yamins, A. R. Blocher, John Wolfberg and Leon Back of Allied. Questions were posed for Halpern to answer.

Among other things, Halpern said that by the end of this year theatre installations of large screen TV will pass the 100 mark. There are about 90 now. He assured exhibitors that there would be no acceptable standard of color TV for theatres within the next several years, discounting concern about obsolescence of equipment bought today. He estimated it would take about five years on the average to liquidate the cost of equipment.

Halpern said 50 theatres showing large screen TV of the Walcott-Marciano heavyweight championship fight grossed $400,000, or an average of slightly over $8,000 apiece. The average net profit was about $5,000 for large theatres and $1,000 to $2,000 for small ones. He said the total seating capacity of the theatres was about 120,000.

Halpern also reported on the status of the FCC hearings on applications for exclusive theatre TV channels and cited the programs, previously announced, for future theatre telecasts.

'5000 Fingers' Float In Macy Parade

Columbia Pictures' national campaign for "The 5000 Fingers of Dr. T." will be kicked off Thanksgiving Day with a float in the annual Macy parade here, which will be seen over the Coast-to-Coast network of CBS-TV.

Macy officials announced that the "5000 Fingers" float will be the first ever devoted to a Hollywood feature in the 20-year history of the parade.

Jarrico Suit Opens

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—Counsel for writer Paul Jarrico and RKO Radio Pictures have agreed, at the opening of the former's $350,000 suit against company, to allow Superior Judge Orlando H. ### Switow Asks Allied Rogers Drive Aid

Switow said it is hoped that 200,000 signature may be obtained for the Christmas Salute this year, with accompanying donations of $150,000. He said 3,600 coin containers are in theatres now.

Charge Rank Theatre With Quota Default

BALTIMORE, Nov. 18.—In view of Trade has issued a summons against the Rank Organization's Haymarket Gaumont Theatre for an alleged default in the 25 per cent supporting program quota.

The action came as a surprise, the general feeling in the trade being that the supporting program quota is ineffective. To date, there have been only seven quota prosecutions for the past year's alleged defaulters. All of them were independent exhibitors in "closed" situations, the theory apparently being that absence of competition should permit an exhibitor to book enough British features on favorable terms.

During the first nine months of 1952, movie advertisers invested a total of some $428,000 in Look—a good deal more than they spent in any other magazine. In fact, in this nine-month period, Look carried almost twice as many pages of movie advertising as any other major magazine.

One reason is that Look does the greatest job of pre-selling movies. Every issue carries exciting articles on Hollywood productions and personalities, and much-quoted reviews of new productions. And, once each year, the coveted Look Motion Picture Achievement Awards focus national attention on the outstanding accomplishments of the industry.

But an even more compelling reason is this: Look reaches an audience of 20,650,000 movie-minded Americans—at the lowest cost per thousand in the major magazine field.

20th Field Talks on Product Promotions

Twentieth Century-Fox division managers will hold strategy meetings with branch heads during the next two weeks to activate merchandising and advertising plans that were set at the two-day home office meeting last week.

Division managers who returned to their offices at the weekend will start visiting exchange centers this week to discuss immediate plans for Thanksgiving releases, "Pony Soldier" and "Bloodhounds of Broadway." Plans for campaigns will also be made for Christmas and New Year's releases, "Stars and Stripes Forever," "My Cousin Rachel," "Ruby Gentry" and "The I Don't Care Girl," as well as the continued handling of Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Snows of Kilimanjaro."

year, is still continuing, officials said. Committee investigator William D. Amis is again on the West Coast, and, while he is there primarily on other committee business, he is expected to devote at least some time to talking to California exhibitors.

But the investigation will still be only in its early stages when the year ends, and the new committee therefore will have to make its own decision as to whether to drop the probe or develop it still further. "We don't have nearly enough information for a report with any sort of conclusions," says one committee staff member, "but we will have plenty of information to put before the committee in January to permit them to make a very sound determination as to whether to continue the investigation or drop it."

When the committee originally voted the investigation last Spring, it did not have any information of its own on the subject, but merely complaints from the Pacific Coast theatre owners and other exhibitors. At that time, committee members indicated they had okayed the investigation more because there was no committee opposition to it rather than because of any strong positive feeling for it.

"The Bad and the Beautiful"

THIS big and skillful telling of an intimate story about Hollywood employs a large and extremely capable cast topped by no less than seven players whose names rate marquee billing, to wit: Lana Turner, Kirk Douglas, Dick Powell, Walter Pidgeon, Barry Sullivan, Gloria Grahame and Gilbert Roland. These actors, and a great many others whose lesser works match theirs in quality, turn in sparkling performances in a production that is known hereabouts as "an actor's picture," if there ever was one. So far as name power and player performance can be said to guarantee the success of an attraction, this one manifestly is guaranteed, and maybe that is far enough.

The story about Hollywood that this picture tells has nothing in common with the homey, folksy little story which the COMPO tourists go about the country telling the paying public for the purpose of offsetting the injurious effects of unfavorable newspaper handling of Hollywood news. Whereas the COMPO troupers tell of a Hollywood that is really just like any other small town in the country, with its hardworking citizens running the usual averages as to divorces, marriages, child-bearing and church attendance, "The Bad and the Beautiful" tells of a Hollywood as ruthless, unbridled and barren of ethics as its most fervent detractors have pictured it. The film presents this kind of Hollywood so expertly and convincingly as to set the COMPO educational efforts back to where they started. It is, intentionally or not, a vivid expression of the viewpoint held by the no means minor segment of Hollywood opinion which has contended all along that the homey, folksy Hollywood story of the COMPO tourists has cost a lot of ticket sales by its de-glamorizing influence. This is one of the mootest of the moot questions around Hollywood, and is likely to stay that way.

Generically, "The Bad and the Beautiful" groups with "A Star Is Born," "Sunset Boulevard" and "All About Eve," and this certainly is not box-office company to be scorned. It is as big as any of the trio, as nameful, as expert, speaking roundly, and more outspoken, uninhibited and elemental than any of them. Subjectively it is closest to "Sunset Boulevard," which is not to say similar, and structurally it is closest to "All About Eve" in that it runs out three story lines, inter-related, managing to keep each important independently without cost to the over-all narrative. Charles Schnee rates rare praise for an extraordinary job on the script.

Douglas plays the son of a hated Hollywood producer whose funeral (attended only by extras paid to appear as mourners) keys the picture. Douglas, who hated his father but learned from him the secrets of success-at-any-price, determines to make Hollywood bow down to the family name again, and the picture records the double-crosses, steals, schemes, deceits and frauds by which he does so. Miss Turner, as an actress, Powell as a writer and Sullivan as a director portray the principal victims of his raging ambition, although there are others, and Pidgeon enacts a producer who (and this is the structural point on which the story hinges) attempts, with seeming success, to persuade them that by the acts with which Douglas ruined their respective lives he made each of them so famous and rich, that they should come now to his economic rescue by making for him a picture that could put him on his feet. This cynical representation is probably the most damaging single aspersion ever cast upon the ladies and gentlemen of the motion picture producing profession.

Direction by Vincente Minnelli undoubtedly is accountable in large measure for some of the splendid individual instances of superb performance, as well as for the over-all excellence.

Producer John Houseman has a highly professional and clearly a thoughtful achievement to his credit here.

Running time, 118 minutes. Adult audience classification. For January release.

End SWG Strike vs. TV Film Producers

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—The Screen Writers Guild and the Authors League of America have ended their 14-week strike against the Alliance of Television Film Producers, which makes 85 per cent of the television films produced on the Coast, with the producers winning an important concession on royalties and granting the two other original demands of the writers involving the reservation of rights by the author and the leasing of stories Many details of the contract remain to be worked out, it was said, but there was agreement in principle.

Eastern SAG Votes to Authorize Strike Action

The Eastern membership of the Screen Actors Guild, seeking to "curb unlimited and repetitious televising of filmed advertisements," has unanimously voted to authorize strike action against producers of TV film commercials and the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Walter Pidgeon, newly elected SAG president, presented the strike proposal to the membership, which may bring the first work-stoppage in the Guild's 19-year history.

Discuss Promotion Of 'Theatre Week'

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—Plans are to be discussed concerning the promotion next year of "National Theatre Week" by Lester Cowan with leaders of both the motion picture industry and the stage, it was announced as Cowan left here for New York to film scenes featuring stage players for the Cinema Productions' feature, "Main Street to Broadway."

Stage and screen players will work together in the promotion which is to be in their common interest. "Main Street" is an exhibitor-financed attraction to be released by M-G-M. Cowan has stated the release should coincide with "National Theatre Week."

Kodak 36-Week Net Is $28,585,716

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Eastman Kodak announced that net earnings for the three-quarter year period ending Sept. 7 were $28,585,716 or $1.71 a share, as compared with $32,350,194 or $2.13 a share a year ago.

Seventeen cents of the per share decrease is attributed to the 10 per cent stock dividend in January. Sales for the 36-week period were $388,859,261 against $384,243,040 for the same period last year.

Company directors today voted a wage dividend of an estimated $22,200,000 for more than 51,000 Kodak personnel in the U. S., with payment to be made on March 6, 1953, at the rate of $27.50 per each $1,000 earned at Kodak during the five years, 1948-1952.

Salt Lake City Bans "Everybody's Girl"

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 18.—In an unprecedented action, the police anti-vice squad has ordered the banning of the picture, "Everybody's Girl," from showing at the State Theatre here. While Salt Lake City has no censors for motion pictures, the picture was one of a very few to be banned by police within the memory of local showmen.

The film had played only one day in the downtown house when Capt. E. J. Steinfeldt, head of the anti-vice bureau, ordered the ban. He described the picture as "unfit for public viewing" and said it "fails to meet the qualifications by which motion pictures may be shown in Salt Lake City."

He remained there until 1945, when he was named advertising manager for Berkely Industries in New Jersey. Ehrlich formerly was with 20th Century-Fox, where he handled syndicates and wire services.

Convention's Closing Session Approves Myers' Board of Directors Report; Action of Board, Convention Unanimous

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The Allied States convention at its closing session here today unanimously approved the board of directors' recommendation rejecting the distributors' draft of the proposed industry arbitration plan.

The action followed a report to the convention by Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel, which listed the plus and minus factors of the distributors' draft and concluded with the board's recommendation that the plan be rejected, on the grounds that "it did not promise direct, immediate and substantial benefit to exhibitors; it contains no provision for arbitrating film rentals, and it contains provisions which are not deemed to be in the exhibitors' interest."

Abram Myers

Myers told the convention that "neither the board as a whole nor any individual is opposed to arbitration. They yield to

High Film Prices, Hiked Admissions Draw Allied Fire

700 See 2nd Annual SPG Award Go to Louis Mayer

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 19.—With more than 700 members of the production branch of the industry attending its second annual Milestone Dinner at the Biltmore Hotel here, Screen Producers Guild tonight paid its highest honor to Louis B. Mayer. SPG president Sol C. Siegel, introducing the honor guest, said Mayer is more to be credited than anybody else with creating the "job of the producer as it is known today."

In his address accepting the award Mayer said, in part, "I saw silent film grow from a few hundred feet to multiple reel feature length—silent film replaced by sound—and now I am to be part of something I consider tremendously thrilling in screen entertainment—Cinerama." After reciting present Cinerama achievements, he went on, "Cinerama has a ceiling—not in quality or imagination—but in where and how it can be used. No one knows for sure, but my guess is that no more than 200 theatres will have Cinerama within the next two or three years. It is for selected theatres, for selective stories, for selective audiences."

Touches on Television

Touching on television, Mayer said, "Radio came along and we worried for quite a while. But we found it didn't hurt very much. Now we have TV and we blame it for most of our troubles. It hurts, of course. So do night baseball, automobile rides, Canasta and other things that claim leisure time and dollars of the public. Television will remain only a part of the distractions employed by the public for its diversions."

George Jessell was master of ceremonies of the dinner, while Buddy Adler was chairman, and Arthur Freed produced the show featuring Bob Hope, Jack Benny, George Burns, Ethel Merman, Lena Horne and others.

Republic Opening To Honor Guard

The stars of the picture, John Derek, Eileen Christy, John Barrymore, Jr., Mona Freeman, Gene Evans and Ward Bond, joined by Forrest Tucker and Vic Damone, will also take part in the proceedings.

GoldensonReelected United Palsy Head

Leonard H. Goldenson, president of United Paramount Theatres, has been reelected to his fourth consecutive term as president of United Cerebral Palsy, of which he is a founder.

Several other industry leaders were named national officers for the coming year. Earl J. Hudson, president of United Detroit Theatres, was reelected vice-president and also elected to a new post as chairman of the board for the United Cerebral Palsy-Chestnut Hill Center in Philadelphia. Hudson has long been active in the palsy movement and is also president of United Cerebral Palsy in Michigan.

Five New Posts

Two of five new posts as regional vice-presidents also went to theatremen. Henry G. Plitt, of Paramount Gulf Theatres, New Orleans, was chosen regional vice-president for the South, and Jerry Zigmond of Los Angeles, West Coast manager of United Paramount Theatres, and former president of United Cerebral Palsy of California, was elected regional vice-president for the Pacific Coast.

Robert H. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer of United Paramount Theatres, was reelected assistant treasurer.

Addressing 400 delegates from all parts of the nation at United Cerebral Palsy's recent third annual convention here, Goldenson praised the motion picture industry for outstanding cooperation ever since the movement started.

Contributions during the past year totaled a record-breaking $4,062,143, or nearly double last year's $2,133,000, Goldenson reported.

Quebec May Censor TV

OTTAWA, Canada, Nov. 19. — The Province of Quebec has proposed placing television programs under the control of the Quebec Board of Film Censors, with a measure providing for penalties for infractions similar to those in effect on motion pictures shown in theatres. Uncensored TV film transmission would be punishable by a $500 fine or a three-month jail term.

DuMont Dividend

A regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share was declared here by the board of directors of Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., on its outstanding shares of five per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock. It will be payable on Jan. 1, to preferred stockholders of record on Dec. 15.

5 UPT Affiliates, Reade House To Carry 'Carmen' TV

Five TV-equipped houses affiliated with United Paramount Theatres have set definite plans to carry the Dec. 11 telecast of "Carmen," it was disclosed here yesterday.

At the same time, Walter Reade Theatres reported that the "Carmen" telecast has been booked into the circuit's St. James Theatre at Asbury Park, N. J.

The five UPT-affiliate theatres planning to telecast the Theatre Network Television event of the Metropolitan Opera production are: Paramount, Des Moines; Center, Buffalo; Utah, Salt Lake City; Orpheum, Omaha; and the Paramount at Lynn, Mass. Other UPT affiliates are currently weighing the TNT offer, including Minnesota Amusement's Radio City at Minneapolis.

Although UPT price scales for the event have not been set locally, various UPT affiliates are contemplating a seat range from $1.80 to $3.60, with the average popular price, including tax, being $2.40. It is argued that the public should not be confronted with a price which is too high in the first test of the drawing power of an entertainment show on theatre television. The terms sought by TNT are a 40 cents per seat guarantee against 50 per cent of the net box-office receipts, whichever is higher.

SupremeCourtHears Gamble-AFM Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The U. S. Supreme Court today heard an argument on, and then took under advisement, an appeal as to whether the American Federation of Musicians can make theatre owners pay for local musicians even when the exhibitors do not want them.

The case involves unfair labor charges brought against the union by Gamble Enterprises' Palace Theatre in Akron. The NLRB ruled the AFM had not violated the Taft-Hartley Law in its demands on the Palace, but the U. S. Circuit Court at Cincinnati ruled that the union was guilty of a Taft-Hartley violation. The union appealed to the high court.

The justices are considering the musicians' case in conjunction with a similar case involving newspaper typographers.

Show 'Andersen' at Bellevue Saturday

The showing will launch Goldwyn's recently announced plan to screen the film free of charge for special audiences of children throughout the world who normally might be deprived of seeing it.

"Face To Face"

(Huntington Hartford-RKO Pictures)

DUO-DRAMA is the classification of this fine feature that contains two outstanding screen adaptations of long short stories by Joseph Conrad and Stephen Crane. They are, respectively, "The Secret Sharer" and "The Bride Comes to Yellow Creek." It is an excellent pairing for the rollicking humor of the Western is highly welcome after the tension and excitement of the sea drama. In certain situations exhibitors may be able to book these separately and although it is a natural for art houses, the film is geared for and merits general release.

James Mason stars in the Conrad story as a captain on board his first ship in the tropics and delivers a perceptive, sensitive performance. The adaptation by Aeneas MacKenzie is a faithful one and John Brahm's direction has emphasized the suspense and action while maintaining symbolic overtones. The story involves Mason's sheltering and aiding the escape of a mate from another ship, Michael Pate, who saved his ship in a storm but accidentally killed a fear-crazed sailor. Mason runs his ship dangerously close to an island but succeeds in getting Pate away and proving his ability to command.

The Crane story is an incisive satire on the disappearing wild-west atmosphere of a frontier town that has outgrown gunplay but is terrorized by its beloved only old time, gun-toting, whiskey-guzzling resident in the absence of its sheriff who has left town. Minor Watson is superb as the unregenerate character, who sadly walks away and throws down his guns upon realizing the returned unarmed sheriff, Robert Preston, has brought back a bride. Preston is a perfect foil for Watson and Olive Carey is equally good as the saloon keeper. Bretaigne Windust's direction is flawless. James Agee wrote the adaptation. Agee also appears in the cast which includes Marjorie Steele and Dan Seymour. Huntington Hartford produced expertly. The associate producers were George Tobin and Norman A. Manning.

Running time, 92 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 14.

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

THE long and arduous development of men and airplanes for the dropping of the atomic bomb on Japan serves as the theme of this compelling drama in which Robert Taylor stars as the man responsible for the major part of the operation. It is a smooth-running film that after a slow opening developes a good deal of tension and contains some fine flying and bombing footage which can be exploited widely.

Melvin Frank and Norman Panama produced and directed and collaborated with author Beirne Lay, Jr., on the screenplay. The result is the taut telling in strong dramatic terms of the conflict of Taylor to achieve perfection in an airplane and maintain security on the ground without revealing anything to his friends or family.

Eleanor Parker portrays the wife with a competent sweetness and James Whitmore turns in a rock-ribbed performance as the exceedingly thorough security officer. It is Whitmore who warns Taylor not to bring his wife out to the air base and at first Taylor heeds him but later on she arrives. Their happiness is soon diminished by Taylor's unceasing rigidity about discipline and the tension makes him irritable. Miss Parker and Taylor quarrel at the moment of his biggest decision, whether his men are ready to drop the bomb.

Taylor listens to Whitmore's advice to have her leave the base and then decides to drop the bomb from a fighter-less B-29 at a very high altitude. It is after the successful dropping of the bomb and Taylor's return that Miss Parker realizes his great mission and reunites with him.

This is a well-made picture that has stars and action and a story that can be exploited for ample box-office returns.

Larry Keating heads an able supporting cast that includes Robert Burton, Christie Olsen, Larry Gates, Marilyn Erskine, Stephen Dunne, John McKee, Hayden Rorke, Larry Dobkin, Jack Raine Barbara Ruick and Jim Backus.

Running time, 122 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

"They all have their eyes on Hollywood," the director stated, "and they all feel that during the past decade the screen has emerged as a much more significant and valid art form than it was at one time."

Allied Rejects Arbitration Draft

none in their devotion to that concept. But they are convinced that the ideals of arbitration will not be promoted by the present plan or any plan which the distributors in their present frame or mind are willing to agree to."

The board's action, like that of the convention, was unanimous.

In reporting to the convention, Myers listed eight provisions in the distributors' draft which, he said, if put into effect, would be of "substantial benefit" to exhibitors. They were:

1) One-way arbitration. Exhibitors may initiate the complaints, as contrasted with the old Film Board of Trade concept that distributors could bring the complaints against exhibitors.

2) Clearance. The provisions of the draft on this subject "are about as good as can be devised," Myers said.

3) Runs. The provisions here have both plus and minus factors but the former are sufficient to include it among the favorable ones, particularly in that they give competing exhibitors equal opportunity to find out which is entitled to pictures on a particular run without resorting to competitive bidding.

4) Competitive bidding. These provisions offer at least a partial remedy for some of the hardships and abuses exhibitors have encountered, Myers said. He cited the fact that distributors would not institute bidding except on the written request of competing exhibitors for pictures which the distributor is proposing to license to another, and also that bids would be revealed to the bidders who desire to see them.

5) Forcing pictures. Myers said he hesitated to include this among the plus factors because its provisions do not go to the heart of the matter which, he said, is forcing by price differentials. However, he said, it cannot fairly be called a minus.

6) Contract violations. He said few exhibitors with whom he has discussed the provision felt it would be of benefit to them, explaining that he placed it on the plus side because "it contains nothing detrimental to exhibitors."

7) Conciliation. While this promises an open-door policy by distributors, which some already have, Myers said Allied experience has been that little can be accomplished by this means. He termed the conciliation proposal "futile," "innocuous" and "scarcely an innovation," but nevertheless listed it as a plus because it insures complaining exhibitors an interview with responsible sales officials.

8) Damages. Awarded in exhibitors favor, they warrant listing the provision on the plus side.

Provisions of the distributors' draft which Myers placed on the minus side were:

1) Film rentals. Because Allied had asked that these be included in the proposals and distributors "flatly refused." "We must face the fact," Myers said, "that the distributors will not yield to the arbitrators any part of their control over prices and it is hopeless to pursue the subject further."

2) Pre-releases. Curbs the number of "specials" that distributors can designate as such, but still permits a maximum of 18 such per year, on the basis of two for each of the nine companies which would be signatories of the plan. Myers also pointed out that in getting government and court approval of arbitration, with this provision in it, "distributors would receive left-handed judicial sanction for such pictures as they have been and are being sold, and the board was dead set against that," wishing to be free to oppose the "deluge of pre-releases." Myers, however, pointed out that such pictures also would be exempted from the competitive bidding restrictions and that they force the increasing of admissions.

3) Competitive bidding. Myers said this, too, would get the cloak of approval by the court if arbitration were approved. He also said it would permit distributors to enlarge bidding, rather than restrict it.

4) Limitation on awards. In this connection, Myers said Allied was prepared to help distributors realize their aim of reducing the heavy volume of anti-trust litigation in the industry and thought it could be helped by liberality in the matter of financial damages eligible in arbitration. However, he said, the distributors have played their cards too close to their vests on this subject and he feels exhibitors with anti-trust complaints may now find they can do better in court.

Arbitration Efforts Dead, Is Feeling at Allied Meet

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Whether or not Allied States' action today in rejecting the distributors' arbitration draft will write "finis" for the time being, at least, to industry efforts to establish an arbitraion system was not entirely clear, although most observers here held that impression.

Those who differed suggested that an effort might be made to set up arbitration without Allied and make its facilities available to all exhibitors who wished to make use of it. In line with this, there was some speculation that a meeting of interested parties might be called in the near future to discuss the possibilities.

However, even those who felt that the end is not yet for arbitration, were quick to concede that it would be vastly less effective without Allied's participation, and that Allied's defection would undoubtedly lessen the chances of the plan being given the approval of the Department of Justice and the Federal Court.

William F. Rodgers, distributors' chairman for arbitration, who was in Chicago today, declined to comment on Allied's action. Rodgers said he might have something to say later, but would not say it during his stay here. When asked if he thought Allied had killed arbitration's chances today, Rodgers said: "It has for me," indicating he would have no active part in any further efforts to establish an arbitration system which might be made.

Rodgers and Charles M. Reagan, M-G-M vice-president in charge of distribution, attended the Allied convention banquet last night, at which Greer Garson was a guest of honor. At his request, Rodgers did not sit at the banquet dais.

Arbitration Plight Blamed on Majors

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Numerous Allied States and some distribution officials here express the belief that the industry would have arbitration today had distributors not insisted upon changing the Aug. 20 draft, which had been prepared by Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel.

They pointed out that the draft had been agreed upon and that the cooling off period ensued only after distributors insisted upon the further changes. Their viewpoint, obviously, places the responsibility for the seeming death of the plan at this time squarely upon the distributors.

ITOA Arbitration

and all problems that may arise."

Brandt said that a trial period of 18 months, under a properly functioning arbitration system, should bring decided improvement to all branches of the industry and help create an atmosphere of mutual understanding.

Necessary to Work Together

"There has never been a time," he said, "when it was more necessary for the industry to work together. This is nonetheless true despite the fact that theatre owners all over the country have many things to gripe about, notably the competitive bidding situation, the increasing number of pre-releases and advanced admission pictures, print shortages and high film prices. However, it is foolhardy to take the one medium—arbitration—which can ultimately eradicate the internal dissensions from the industry and destroy it before it is given an opportunity to prove itself. No exhibitor can be worse off than he is now."

his resolution was the result of a spontaneous, grass roots movement and, unlike the board resolution of the previous day, did not come from "the top."

Calls For Aid

Besides endorsing Allied's policy of reducing the efforts of its officers in the way of cooperative all-industry endeavors to a minimum, and concentrating instead on the trade practice battle, Vlachos's resolution called for the active aid of every Allied member in furnishing affidavits and other information and evidence of irregular practices by distributors to Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel.

Myers is authorized to make use of the material supplied in either litigation, appeals to law-making bodies or to Federal agencies such as the Senate Small Business Committee.

The resolution was supported by H. A. Cole of Dallas, who said that from now on he will turn down anything proposed to him that does not benefit exhibitors directly and will be 1,000 per cent for anything "that will make trouble for the distributors."

John Wolfberg

John Wolfberg of Denver pledged his support to the resolution and said he would turn over everything in his possesion to Myers for whatever use Myers might see fit to make of it. Wolfberg urged all other Allied members to do the same. Ted Mann of Minneapolis joined in that pledge and also asked all Allied members to do likewise. Trueman Rembusch of Franklin, Ind., hit at the distributors arbitration draft, pointing out that Indiana Allied previously had found it wanting in not dealing with such problems as print shortages. "I don't think the distributors are sincere in their approach to arbitration," he said.

his role as guinea pig in the industry legal test of the constitutionality of Ohio's newsreel censorship law.

Rembusch Reports

Rembusch reported to the convention on the new ASCAP license fee for its music used on non-theatrical film, usually for intermissions and prior to show starts at drive-ins. If ASCAP music is used, Rembusch told the convention, a license must be obtained and the fee paid. However, he pointed out, there is a large library of as yet untaxed music available from BMI, in the public domain and from SEEAC.

Snaper described Cinerama to the convention, providing a generally laudatory account of its showmanly qualities and ability to attract the public, but with occasional facetious or exaggerated references to its high cost for equipment and installation.

In describing to the convention the working of Allied's proposed new expanded "Caravan" service, William Carroll of Indiana Allied said a salesman could make a call at 10 A.M. on a St. Louis exhibitor and before the day was out every Allied member in the country could be informed of the propositions made. He said details of the system for gathering and disseminating such information would be ready for distribution to "Caravan" members in about five weeks and the success of the plan depended upon how well individual members cooperated.

American Eagle Suit Up in Feb.

The $6,000,000 law suit, charging breach of trust, filed by American Eagle Pictures against Jack Broder three years ago, is slated to go to trial in Los Angeles in February. Sam Howard, co-plaintiff with Leo McCarthy, gave depositions in Los Angeles last weekend. Howard and McCarthy, partners in American Eagle, brought the action when 340 Universal and United Artists pictures were diverted from American Eagle to Broder after the films allegedly had been committed to Howard and McCarthy for reissue purposes.

The block of 40 UA films and 300 Universal productions had been acquired by Jacques Grinieff who had a deal pending for their delivery to American Eagle. According to the complaint, Broder, who ultimately formed Realart Pictures, closed a deal for the product on his own after Howard had discussed with Broder the possibility of the latter joining the enterprise with Howard and McCarthy.

Move for Repeal of Richmond, Va., Tax

RICHMOND, Nov. 19.—An ordinance to repeal this city's five per cent tax on motion picture theatre admissions will be introduced in the City Council, probably on Nov. 24, at the request of the Richmond Theatre Owners Association.

Seymour Hoffman of the association pointed out that the tax unfairly favors drive-in theatres outside the city limits, at the expense of regular theatres. The present tax was enacted in 1946.

ARBITRATION ONLY FIELD HIT BY APPROVAL OF COLE BID

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The proposal of H. A. Cole of Dallas, made several weeks ago, that Allied officers terminate their posts in connection with all-industry endeavors in order to concentrate exclusively on trade practice battles, was accepted by the Allied board and convention here only insofar as Allied's further participation in efforts to set up an industry arbitration system is concerned.

Cole's proposal could have included his own removal from the post of co-chairman of the industry's tax repeal campaign and the termination of Trueman Rembusch's tenure as Allied's representative on the triumvirate which administers the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

The board directed that Cole and Rembusch continue in those posts and the convention approved.

Myers announced the board's decision to the convention. He said: "When I first read Col. Cole's now famous letter I began to wonder just which cooperative undertakings would or could be abandoned in order to release Allied manpower for work of greater benefit to the members. I knew we could not withdraw the Colonel from the tax campaign. . . . I did not see how we could completely withdraw from COMPO at this time without pulling the rug from under the Colonel, so I concluded that Trueman Rembusch's hobby was safe—for the time being.

"Then a horrible light began to dawn. It was my baby, little arby (arbitration) on whom Wilbur Snaper, Nate Yamins and I had lavished so much tender care, that was going to be thrown to the wolves: and it was even so. Arbitration was expendable. It did not meet the best of the board's statement of policy. It did not promise direct, immediate and substantial benefit to the exhibitors," Myers concluded.

4 More Join MGM Field Press Staff

M-G-M has added four more press representatives to bring its total field staff to 27. Assignment of the new additions, John L. John, Thomas Letcher, Alan Wiedner, and Jack Weiner was announced by Howard Dietz, vice-president and director of advertising-publicity.

Six divisional press representatives, appointed last March, will continue to handle special advance publicity and promotions. Operation of the field force is under the supervision of Dan Terrell, exploitation director.

As a result of the added manpower, several exchange assignments have been realigned to provide fuller coverage in each territory. A new field assignment has been made for the Seattle and Portland exchanges, which will be handled by Wiedner. A second new assignment will include New Orleans and Memphis and will be covered by Weiner. Letcher has been assigned to the Minneapolis exchange, and John to Indianapolis.

Canadian results have Montreal in first place, led by manager Harry Cohen, while Winnipeg, under Meyer Nackimson, was second.

District standings were topped by Canada, headed by Carl Peppercorn. The Southeastern district under Dave Prince was second, and Ben Cammack's Southwestern district ran third.

The 27-week drive began on Dec. 21, 1951 and ran to last June 26.

'Aussie' Divorcement Held to Be Unlikely

Efforts by an independent exhibitor group in Australia to effect a theatre divorcement law in the Commonwealth are not likely to be successful, in the opinion of Clay V. Hake, Paramount's managing director for Australia and New Zealand, who is here for home office conferences. Hake pointed out that if the Australian Parliament should rule that distributors must give up their theatres, then it would have to break up alleged monopolies of the steel, oil, brewing and other industries of the country.

Hake said that monopolies of this kind represent the basic economy of the country and that it would seem unlikely that the film industry would be singled out for a split-up. M-G-M has 11 theatres in Australia, with Paramount owning one and 20th Century-Fox holding an interest in approximately 180 houses.

Theatre business is holding up strong in both Australia and New Zealand, Hake said, although there has been a drop from the peak years, as in all other industries. The only picture of local origin was in production when he left Sydney three weeks ago. This was "Jedda," produced by Charles Sharvell, who made "40,000 Horsemen" several years ago. The picture is being made entirely with Australian capital, although American financing was offered.

Hake will return to Australia next week.

"Flat Top"

(Allied Artists) Hollywood, Nov. 19

A POWERFUL and brisk production in color by Cinecolor that vividly deals with the various aspects of life in the Naval Air Corps has been fashioned by executive producer Walter Mirisch with a maximum of authenticity. Sterling Hayden and Richard Carlson head a fine cast which turns in uniformily sound performances, under the steady direction of Lesley Selander. It is a solid, stimulating picture that is mighty good entertainment and appears to be a real money-maker.

The story provided by Steve Fisher adheres to the facts of this division of Naval Service and avoids melodramatic distortions and over-bearing coincidence. There is no bathos in the even development of the story about the value of discipline and the inviolability of orders aboard an aircraft carrier that served with the Third Fleet in the Philippines in the last war.

Hayden portrays an air group commander and Carlson the leader of replacement pilots who join the ship in 1943. Carlson is appointed executive officer under Hayden and conflicts with the latter's authority several times over minor infractions of the rules committed by group pilots. It is Carlson who seeks leniency but Hayden insists on discipline. In the heat of battle Carlson and his men realize Hayden's methods were necessary and correct and come to respect him for maintaining discipline.

The U. S. carrier Princeton and members of its crew were used in the production and authentic Naval battle footage is included in the film. Others in the cast are Bill Phipps, John Bromfield, Keith Larsen, Todd Karns, Dave Willock, Walter Coy and Phyllis Coates.

This is a fast-moving, actionful, highly credible film that contains the proper elements for box-office success.

Running time, 85 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 11.

Convention's Closing Session Approves Myers' Board of Directors Report; Action of Board, Convention Unanimous

By SHERWIN KANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The Allied States convention at its closing session here today unanimously approved the board of directors' recommendation rejecting the distributors' draft of the proposed industry arbitration plan.

The action followed a report to the convention by Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel, which listed the plus and minus factors of the distributors' draft and concluded with the board's recommendation that the plan be rejected, on the grounds that "it did not promise direct, immediate and substantial benefit to exhibitors; it contains no provision for arbitrating film rentals, and it contains provisions which are not deemed to be in the exhibitors' interest."

Abram Myers

Myers told the convention that "neither the board as a whole nor any individual is opposed to arbitration. They yield to

700 See 2nd Annual SPG Award Go to Louis Mayer

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 19.—With more than 700 members of the production branch of the industry attending its second annual Milestone Dinner at the Biltmore Hotel here, Screen Producers Guild tonight paid its highest honor to Louis B. Mayer. SPG president Sol C. Siegel, introducing the honor guest, said Mayer is more to be credited than anybody else with creating the "job of the producer as it is known today."

In his address accepting the award Mayer said, in part, "I saw silent film grow from a few hundred feet to multiple reel feature length—silent film replaced by sound—and now I am to be part of something I consider tremendously thrilling in screen entertainment—Cinerama." After reciting present Cinerama achievements, he went on, "Cinerama has a ceiling—not in quality or imagination—but in where and how it can be used. No one knows for sure, but my guess is that no more than 200 theatres will have Cinerama within the next two or three years. It is for selected theatres, for selective stories, for selective audiences."

Touches on Television

Touching on television, Mayer said, "Radio came along and we worried for quite a while. But we found it didn't hurt very much. Now we have TV and we blame it for most of our troubles. It hurts, of course. So do night baseball, automobile rides, Canasta and other things that claim leisure time and dollars of the public. Television will remain only a part of the distractions employed by the public for its diversions."

George Jessell was master of ceremonies of the dinner, while Buddy Adler was chairman, and Arthur Freed produced the show featuring Bob Hope, Jack Benny, George Burns, Ethel Merman, Lena Horne and others.

GoldensonReelected United Palsy Head

Leonard H. Goldenson, president of United Paramount Theatres, has been reelected to his fourth consecutive term as president of United Cerebral Palsy, of which he is a founder.

Several other industry leaders were named national officers for the coming year. Earl J. Hudson has long been active in the palsy movement and is also president of United Cerebral Palsy in Michigan.

Five New Posts

Two of five new posts as regional vice-presidents also went to theatremen. Henry G. Plitt, of Paramount Gulf Theatres, New Orleans, was chosen regional vice-president for the South, and Jerry Zigmond of Los Angeles, West Coast manager of United Paramount Theatres, and former president of United Cerebral Palsy of California, was elected regional vice-president for the Pacific Coast.

Robert H. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer of United Paramount Theatres, was reelected assistant treasurer.

Addressing 400 delegates from all parts of the nation at United Cerebral Palsy's recent third annual convention here, Goldenson praised the motion picture industry for outstanding cooperation ever since the movement started.

Contributions during the past year totaled a record-breaking $4,062,143, or nearly double last year's $2,133,000, Goldenson reported.

Tribute also was paid by Goldenson to Bob Hope, life chairman of UCP; his co-chairmen, Jack Benny, Milton Berle, Bing Crosby, Arlene Francis, Arthur Godfrey, Jerry Lewis, Jinx Falkenburg McCrary, Dean Martin, Jane Pickens, Kate Smith, John Cameron Swayze, and the many volunteers in the entertainment field who assisted.

OTTAWA, Canada, Nov. 19. — The Province of Quebec has proposed placing television programs under the control of the Quebec Board of Film Censors, with a measure providing for penalties for infractions similar to those in effect on motion pictures shown in theatres. ## 5 UPT Affiliates, Reade House To Carry 'Carmen' TV

Five TV-equipped houses affiliated with United Paramount Theatres have set definite plans to carry the Dec. 11 telecast of "Carmen," it was disclosed here yesterday.

At the same time, Walter Reade Theatres reported that the "Carmen" telecast has been booked into the circuit's St. James Theatre at Asbury Park, N. J.

The five UPT-affiliate theatres planning to telecast the Theatre Network Television event of the Metropolitan Opera production are: Paramount, Des Moines; Center, Buffalo; Utah, Salt Lake City; Orpheum, Omaha; and the Paramount at Lynn, Mass. Other UPT affiliates are currently weighing the TNT offer, including Minnesota Amusement's Radio City at Minneapolis.

Although UPT price scales for the event have not been set locally, various UPT affiliates are contemplating a seat range from $1.80 to $3.60, with the average popular price, including tax, being $2.40. It is argued that the public should not be confronted with a price which is too high in the first test of the drawing power of an entertainment show on theatre television. The terms sought by TNT are a 40 cents per seat guarantee against 50 per cent of the net box-office receipts, whichever is higher.

SupremeCourtHears Gamble-AFM Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The U. S. Supreme Court today heard an argument on, and then took under advisement, an appeal as to whether the American Federation of Musicians can make theatre owners pay for local musicians even when the exhibitors do not want them.

The case involves unfair labor charges brought against the union by Gamble Enterprises' Palace Theatre in Akron. The NLRB ruled the AFM had not violated the Taft-Hartley Law in its demands on the Palace, but the U. S. Circuit Court at Cincinnati ruled that the union was guilty of a Taft-Hartley violation. The union appealed to the high court.

The justices are considering the musicians' case in conjunction with a similar case involving newspaper typographers.

"Face To Face"

(Huntington Hartford-RKO Pictures)

DUO-DRAMA is the classification of this fine feature that contains two outstanding screen adaptations of long short stories by Joseph Conrad and Stephen Crane. They are, respectively, "The Secret Sharer" and "The Bride Comes to Yellow Creek." It is an excellent pairing for the rollicking humor of the Western is highly welcome after the tension and excitement of the sea drama. In certain situations exhibitors may be able to book these separately and although it is a natural for art houses, the film is geared for and merits general release.

James Mason stars in the Conrad story as a captain on board his first ship in the tropics and delivers a perceptive, sensitive performance. The adaptation by Aeneas MacKenzie is a faithful one and John Brahm's direction has emphasized the suspense and action while maintaining symbolic overtones. The story involves Mason's sheltering and aiding the escape of a mate from another ship, Michael Pate, who saved his ship in a storm but accidentally killed a fear-crazed sailor. Mason runs his ship dangerously close to an island but succeeds in getting Pate away and proving his ability to command.

The Crane story is an incisive satire on the disappearing wild-west atmosphere of a frontier town that has outgrown gunplay but is terrorized by its beloved only old time, gun-toting, whiskey-guzzling resident in the absence of its sheriff who has left town. Minor Watson is superb as the unregenerate character, who sadly walks away and throws down his guns upon realizing the returned unarmed sheriff, Robert Preston, has brought back a bride. Preston is a perfect foil for Watson and Olive Carey is equally good as the saloon keeper. Bretaigne Windust's direction is flawless. James Agee wrote the adaptation. Agee also appears in the cast which includes Marjorie Steele and Dan Seymour. Huntington Hartford produced expertly. The associate producers were George Tobin and Norman A. Manning.

Running time, 92 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 14.

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

THE long and arduous development of men and airplanes for the dropping of the atomic bomb on Japan serves as the theme of this compelling drama in which Robert Taylor stars as the man responsible for the major part of the operation. It is a smooth-running film that after a slow opening developes a good deal of tension and contains some fine flying and bombing footage which can be exploited widely.

Melvin Frank and Norman Panama produced and directed and collaborated with author Beirne Lay, Jr., on the screenplay. The result is the taut telling in strong dramatic terms of the conflict of Taylor to achieve perfection in an airplane and maintain security on the ground without revealing anything to his friends or family.

Eleanor Parker portrays the wife with a competent sweetness and James Whitmore turns in a rock-ribbed performance as the exceedingly thorough security officer. It is Whitmore who warns Taylor not to bring his wife out to the air base and at first Taylor heeds him but later on she arrives. Their happiness is soon diminished by Taylor's unceasing rigidity about discipline and the tension makes him irritable. Miss Parker and Taylor quarrel at the moment of his biggest decision, whether his men are ready to drop the bomb.

Taylor listens to Whitmore's advice to have her leave the base and then decides to drop the bomb from a fighter-less B-29 at a very high altitude. It is after the successful dropping of the bomb and Taylor's return that Miss Parker realizes his great mission and reunites with him.

This is a well-made picture that has stars and action and a story that can be exploited for ample box-office returns.

Larry Keating heads an able supporting cast that includes Robert Burton, Christie Olsen, Larry Gates, Marilyn Erskine, Stephen Dunne, John McKee, Hayden Rorke, Larry Dobkin, Jack Raine Barbara Ruick and Jim Backus.

Running time, 122 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

"They all have their eyes on Hollywood," the director stated, "and they all feel that during the past decade the screen has emerged as a much more significant and valid art form than it was at one time."

Allied Rejects Arbitration Draft

none in their devotion to that concept. But they are convinced that the ideals of arbitration will not be promoted by the present plan or any plan which the distributors in their present frame or mind are willing to agree to."

The board's action, like that of the convention, was unanimous.

In reporting to the convention, Myers listed eight provisions in the distributors' draft which, he said, if put into effect, would be of "substantial benefit" to exhibitors. They were:

1) One-way arbitration. Exhibitors may initiate the complaints, as contrasted with the old Film Board of Trade concept that distributors could bring the complaints against exhibitors.

2) Clearance. The provisions of the draft on this subject "are about as good as can be devised," Myers said.

3) Runs. The provisions here have both plus and minus factors but the former are sufficient to include it among the favorable ones, particularly in that they give competing exhibitors equal opportunity to find out which is entitled to pictures on a particular run without resorting to competitive bidding.

4) Competitive bidding. These provisions offer at least a partial remedy for some of the hardships and abuses exhibitors have encountered, Myers said. He cited the fact that distributors would not institute bidding except on the written request of competing exhibitors for pictures which the distributor is proposing to license to another, and also that bids would be revealed to the bidders who desire to see them.

5) Forcing pictures. Myers said he hesitated to include this among the plus factors because its provisions do not go to the heart of the matter which, he said, is forcing by price differentials. However, he said, it cannot fairly be called a minus.

6) Contract violations. He said few exhibitors with whom he has discussed the provision felt it would be of benefit to them, explaining that he placed it on the plus side because "it contains nothing detrimental to exhibitors."

7) Conciliation. While this promises an open-door policy by distributors, which some already have, Myers said Allied experience has been that little can be accomplished by this means. He termed the conciliation proposal "futile," "innocuous" and "scarcely an innovation," but nevertheless listed it as a plus because it insures complaining exhibitors an interview with responsible sales officials.

8) Damages. Awarded in exhibitors favor, they warrant listing the provision on the plus side.

Provisions of the distributors' draft which Myers placed on the minus side were:

1) Film rentals. Because Allied had asked that these be included in the proposals and distributors "flatly refused." "We must face the fact," Myers said, "that the distributors will not yield to the arbitrators any part of their control over prices and it is hopeless to pursue the subject further."

2) Pre-releases. Curbs the number of "specials" that distributors can designate as such, but still permits a maximum of 18 such per year, on the basis of two for each of the nine companies which would be signatories of the plan. Myers also pointed out that in getting government and court approval of arbitration, with this provision in it, "distributors would receive left-handed judicial sanction for such pictures as they have been and are being sold, and the board was dead set against that," wishing to be free to oppose the "deluge of pre-releases." Myers, however, pointed out that such pictures also would be exempted from the competitive bidding restrictions and that they force the increasing of admissions.

3) Competitive bidding. Myers said this, too, would get the cloak of approval by the court if arbitration were approved. He also said it would permit distributors to enlarge bidding, rather than restrict it.

4) Limitation on awards. In this connection, Myers said Allied was prepared to help distributors realize their aim of reducing the heavy volume of anti-trust litigation in the industry and thought it could be helped by liberality in the matter of financial damages eligible in arbitration. However, he said, the distributors have played their cards too close to their vests on this subject and he feels exhibitors with anti-trust complaints may now find they can do better in court.

Arbitration Efforts Dead, Is Feeling at Allied Meet

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Whether or not Allied States' action today in rejecting the distributors' arbitration draft will write "finis" for the time being, at least, to industry efforts to establish an arbitraion system was not entirely clear, although most observers here held that impression.

Those who differed suggested that an effort might be made to set up arbitration without Allied and make its facilities available to all exhibitors who wished to make use of it. In line with this, there was some speculation that a meeting of interested parties might be called in the near future to discuss the possibilities.

However, even those who felt that the end is not yet for arbitration, were quick to concede that it would be vastly less effective without Allied's participation, and that Allied's defection would undoubtedly lessen the chances of the plan being given the approval of the Department of Justice and the Federal Court.

William F. Rodgers, distributors' chairman for arbitration, who was in Chicago today, declined to comment on Allied's action. Rodgers said he might have something to say later, but would not say it during his stay here. When asked if he thought Allied had killed arbitration's chances today, Rodgers said: "It has for me," indicating he would have no active part in any further efforts to establish an arbitration system which might be made.

Rodgers and Charles M. Reagan, M-G-M vice-president in charge of distribution, attended the Allied convention banquet last night, at which Greer Garson was a guest of honor. At his request, Rodgers did not sit at the banquet dais.

Arbitration Plight Blamed on Majors

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Numerous Allied States and some distribution officials here express the belief that the industry would have arbitration today had distributors not insisted upon changing the Aug. 20 draft, which had been prepared by Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel.

They pointed out that the draft had been agreed upon and that the cooling off period ensued only after distributors insisted upon the further changes. Their viewpoint, obviously, places the responsibility for the seeming death of the plan at this time squarely upon the distributors.

ITOA Arbitration

and all problems that may arise."

Brandt said that a trial period of 18 months, under a properly functioning arbitration system, should bring decided improvement to all branches of the industry and help create an atmosphere of mutual understanding.

Necessary to Work Together

"There has never been a time," he said, "when it was more necessary for the industry to work together. This is nonetheless true despite the fact that theatre owners all over the country have many things to gripe about, notably the competitive bidding situation, the increasing number of pre-releases and advanced admission pictures, print shortages and high film prices. However, it is foolhardy to take the one medium—arbitration—which can ultimately eradicate the internal dissensions from the industry and destroy it before it is given an opportunity to prove itself. No exhibitor can be worse off than he is now."

New WB Incorporation

his resolution was the result of a spontaneous, grass roots movement and, unlike the board resolution of the previous day, did not come from "the top."

Calls For Aid

Besides endorsing Allied's policy of reducing the efforts of its officers in the way of cooperative all-industry endeavors to a minimum, and concentrating instead on the trade practice battle, Vlachos's resolution called for the active aid of every Allied member in furnishing affidavits and other information and evidence of irregular practices by distributors to Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel.

Myers is authorized to make use of the material supplied in either litigation, appeals to law-making bodies or to Federal agencies such as the Senate Small Business Committee.

The resolution was supported by H. A. Cole of Dallas, who said that from now on he will turn down anything proposed to him that does not benefit exhibitors directly and will be 1,000 per cent for anything "that will make trouble for the distributors."

John Wolfberg

John Wolfberg of Denver pledged his support to the resolution and said he would turn over everything in his possesion to Myers for whatever use Myers might see fit to make of it. Wolfberg urged all other Allied members to do the same. Ted Mann of Minneapolis joined in that pledge and also asked all Allied members to do likewise. Trueman Rembusch of Franklin, Ind., hit at the distributors arbitration draft, pointing out that Indiana Allied previously had found it wanting in not dealing with such problems as print shortages. "I don't think the distributors are sincere in their approach to arbitration," he said.

his role as guinea pig in the industry legal test of the constitutionality of Ohio's newsreel censorship law.

Rembusch Reports

Rembusch reported to the convention on the new ASCAP license fee for its music used on non-theatrical film, usually for intermissions and prior to show starts at drive-ins. If ASCAP music is used, Rembusch told the convention, a license must be obtained and the fee paid. However, he pointed out, there is a large library of as yet untaxed music available from BMI, in the public domain and from SEEAC.

Snaper described Cinerama to the convention, providing a generally laudatory account of its showmanly qualities and ability to attract the public, but with occasional facetious or exaggerated references to its high cost for equipment and installation.

In describing to the convention the working of Allied's proposed new expanded "Caravan" service, William Carroll of Indiana Allied said a salesman could make a call at 10 A.M. on a St. Louis exhibitor and before the day was out every Allied member in the country could be informed of the propositions made. He said details of the system for gathering and disseminating such information would be ready for distribution to "Caravan" members in about five weeks and the success of the plan depended upon how well individual members cooperated.

American Eagle Suit Up in Feb.

The $6,000,000 law suit, charging breach of trust, filed by American Eagle Pictures against Jack Broder three years ago, is slated to go to trial in Los Angeles in February. Sam Howard, co-plaintiff with Leo McCarthy, gave depositions in Los Angeles last weekend. Howard and McCarthy, partners in American Eagle, brought the action when 340 Universal and United Artists pictures were diverted from American Eagle to Broder after the films allegedly had been committed to Howard and McCarthy for reissue purposes.

The block of 40 UA films and 300 Universal productions had been acquired by Jacques Grinieff who had a deal pending for their delivery to American Eagle. According to the complaint, Broder, who ultimately formed Realart Pictures, closed a deal for the product on his own after Howard had discussed with Broder the possibility of the latter joining the enterprise with Howard and McCarthy.

Move for Repeal of Richmond, Va., Tax

RICHMOND, Nov. 19.—An ordinance to repeal this city's five per cent tax on motion picture theatre admissions will be introduced in the City Council, probably on Nov. 24, at the request of the Richmond Theatre Owners Association.

Seymour Hoffman of the association pointed out that the tax unfairly favors drive-in theatres outside the city limits, at the expense of regular theatres. The present tax was enacted in 1946.

ARBITRATION ONLY FIELD HIT BY APPROVAL OF COLE BID

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The proposal of H. A. Cole of Dallas, made several weeks ago, that Allied officers terminate their posts in connection with all-industry endeavors in order to concentrate exclusively on trade practice battles, was accepted by the Allied board and convention here only insofar as Allied's further participation in efforts to set up an industry arbitration system is concerned.

Cole's proposal could have included his own removal from the post of co-chairman of the industry's tax repeal campaign and the termination of Trueman Rembusch's tenure as Allied's representative on the triumvirate which administers the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

The board directed that Cole and Rembusch continue in those posts and the convention approved.

Myers announced the board's decision to the convention. He said: "When I first read Col. Cole's now famous letter I began to wonder just which cooperative undertakings would or could be abandoned in order to release Allied manpower for work of greater benefit to the members. I knew we could not withdraw the Colonel from the tax campaign. . . . I did not see how we could completely withdraw from COMPO at this time without pulling the rug from under the Colonel, so I concluded that Trueman Rembusch's hobby was safe—for the time being.

"Then a horrible light began to dawn. It was my baby, little arby (arbitration) on whom Wilbur Snaper, Nate Yamins and I had lavished so much tender care, that was going to be thrown to the wolves: and it was even so. Arbitration was expendable. It did not meet the best of the board's statement of policy. It did not promise direct, immediate and substantial benefit to the exhibitors," Myers concluded.

4 More Join MGM Field Press Staff

M-G-M has added four more press representatives to bring its total field staff to 27. Assignment of the new additions, John L. John, Thomas Letcher, Alan Wiedner, and Jack Weiner was announced by Howard Dietz, vice-president and director of advertising-publicity.

Six divisional press representatives, appointed last March, will continue to handle special advance publicity and promotions. Operation of the field force is under the supervision of Dan Terrell, exploitation director.

As a result of the added manpower, several exchange assignments have been realigned to provide fuller coverage in each territory. A new field assignment has been made for the Seattle and Portland exchanges, which will be handled by Wiedner. A second new assignment will include New Orleans and Memphis and will be covered by Weiner. Letcher has been assigned to the Minneapolis exchange, and John to Indianapolis.

Dezel Gets Rights To Souvaine Films

Sioux Falls Branch Wins 'Depinet Drive'

RKO Radio's "Ned Depinet Sales Drive" was won by the Sioux Falls exchange, headed by branch manager Sherm Fitch, it was announced by Charles Boasberg, general sales manager. The New Orleans branch, headed by Roger Lamantia finished second; Portland, under Dick Lange, finished third, and Sol Sach's Dallas branch was fourth. Canadian results have Montreal in first place, led by manager Harry Cohen, while Winnipeg, under Meyer Nackimson, was second.

District standings were topped by Canada, headed by Carl Peppercorn. The Southeastern district under Dave Prince was second, and Ben Cammack's Southwestern district ran third.

The 27-week drive began on Dec. 21, 1951 and ran to last June 26.

Exhibitors Rally To Aid 'Dimes'

The worst polio year in U. S. history is inspiring the nation's showmen to a record support of the March of Dimes for its coming January campaign, according to pledges obtained by officials of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Starting with a national endorsement from Theatre Owners of America, more than 12,000 theatres have agreed to run March of Dimes trailers and to take up collections of some type, said the Foundation.

Arthur Davis Sets Six More Imports

'Aussie' Divorcement Held to Be Unlikely

Efforts by an independent exhibitor group in Australia to effect a theatre divorcement law in the Commonwealth are not likely to be successful, in the opinion of Clay V. Hake, Paramount's managing director for Australia and New Zealand, who is here for home office conferences. Hake pointed out that if the Australian Parliament should rule that distributors must give up their theatres, then it would have to break up alleged monopolies of the steel, oil, brewing and other industries of the country.

Hake said that monopolies of this kind represent the basic economy of the country and that it would seem unlikely that the film industry would be singled out for a split-up. M-G-M has 11 theatres in Australia, with Paramount owning one and 20th Century-Fox holding an interest in approximately 180 houses.

Theatre business is holding up strong in both Australia and New Zealand, Hake said, although there has been a drop from the peak years, as in all other industries. The only picture of local origin was in production when he left Sydney three weeks ago. This was "Jedda," produced by Charles Sharvell, who made "40,000 Horsemen" several years ago. The picture is being made entirely with Australian capital, although American financing was offered.

Hake will return to Australia next week.

"Flat Top"

(Allied Artists) Hollywood, Nov. 19

A POWERFUL and brisk production in color by Cinecolor that vividly deals with the various aspects of life in the Naval Air Corps has been fashioned by executive producer Walter Mirisch with a maximum of authenticity. Sterling Hayden and Richard Carlson head a fine cast which turns in uniformly sound performances, under the steady direction of Lesley Selander. It is a solid, stimulating picture that is mighty good entertainment and appears to be a real money-maker.

The story provided by Steve Fisher adheres to the facts of this division of Naval Service and avoids melodramatic distortions and over-bearing coincidence. There is no bathos in the even development of the story about the value of discipline and the inviolability of orders aboard an aircraft carrier that served with the Third Fleet in the Philippines in the last war.

Hayden portrays an air group commander and Carlson the leader of replacement pilots who join the ship in 1943. Carlson is appointed executive officer under Hayden and conflicts with the latter's authority several times over minor infractions of the rules committed by group pilots. It is Carlson who seeks leniency but Hayden insists on discipline. In the heat of battle Carlson and his men realize Hayden's methods were necessary and correct and come to respect him for maintaining discipline.

The U. S. carrier Princeton and members of its crew were used in the production and authentic Naval battle footage is included in the film. Others in the cast are Bill Phipps, John Bromfield, Keith Larsen, Todd Karns, Dave Willock, Walter Coy and Phyllis Coates.

This is a fast-moving, actionful, highly credible film that contains the proper elements for box-office success.

Running time, 85 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 11.

Hearst Pledges Industry Continued Cooperation

By WALTER PASHKIN

William Randolph Hearst, Jr. told an audience of motion picture industry and publication representatives at a luncheon given in his honor yesterday by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers that, "I pledge continued sympathetic understanding and support of all our organizations to the problem you may have." Earlier, he said, "The friendship between the two industries is a heritage I'm proud to continue and extend with every facility at our command."

The publisher of the New York Journal-American and American Weekly and editor-in-chief of all Hearst newspapers was greeted by a solid round of applause by a standing audience when he rose to speak. After acknowledging the laudatory introduction by Howard Dietz, master-of-ceremonies, Hearst mentioned the various Hearst enterprises that daily reach an approximate audience of 25,000,000 and noted the close ties and similarities of the motion picture and newspaper industries.

He traced the almost simultaneous rise of both the Hearst and film industries on the Coast 40 years ago order will be launched amid continued rumors and reports concerning the appointment of new RKO executives and board members and in the midst of reports concerning the possible sale of the controlling interests of the Ralph Stolkin syndicate.

Filed Last Friday

The show cause order stems from a suit filed last Friday by Eli B. Castleman and his wife, Marion V. Castleman of Detroit, and Louis Feuerman of this city, claiming to own 2,500 shares. Louis Kipnis, counsel for the minority stockholders, sought receivership "in order to protect the business and assets of the RKO enterprise." In an accompanying suit, naming Howard Hughes as defendant, the sum of $3,000,000, which the suit said Hughes made on the sale of his stock to the Stolkin group, is asked for reimbursement to the company.

Meanwhile, the company yesterday continued to be the subject of claims and counter-claims as to new management, new prospective purchasers of the Stolkin group's 29 per cent interest and internal reorganization. Reports that principals from the Coast were converging on New York for climactic meetings were described as "conjecture" by company spokesmen.

when early two-reelers were being shown and the late William Randolph Hearst, Sr. was operating the San Francisco Examiner. He referred to an evening's conversation which Hearst, Sr. had with Adolph Zukor in which "Mr. Motion Pictures," as Dietz had previously called Zukor, stressed his confidence in the future of films. This resulted in front-page commendatory editorials by the late Arthur Brisbane which forecast with remarkable accuracy the growth of the film industry.

Hearst stated, "Both industries have drawn largely from life itself, a bid for public favor with every issue, and measure our success by box-office returns." After comparing the staffs of both industries, he said, "Both must be constantly in touch with the man in the street, his aspirations, his fears, his desires. Our success will reflect how well we maintain our contact with him." He expressed the hope that future joint endeavors would strengthen ties between the industries.

AMPA president Harry McWilliams read several wires received from Coast notables expressing hearty agreement over the cooperation which the Hearst enterprises have accorded the motion picture industry through the years. They were too numerous to read so McWilliams read several while a teletype machine was used to simulate the effect of the sending. Among senders mentioned were Joseph Schenck, Herbert J. Yates, SAG head Walter Pidgeon, stars Susan Hayward, Betty Grable, Broderick Crawford, and others.

In his introductory remarks, Dietz recalled his debt of gratitude to Justin McGrath, Hearst city editor for the old New York American, who encouraged him to go to the Columbia University School of Journalism. Dietz recalled his beginning as an office boy for Hearst, his later rise to reporter and then magazine article writer for Cosmopolitan. He related some humorous incidents of his job at Cosmopolitan Productions, working under Hearst, Sr. Dietz emphasized the friendship of the film industry with Hearst enterprises and the mutual aid which resulted. He lauded the American Weekly motion picture edition of last August, handled by editor Ernest W. Heyn.

McWilliams introduced Dietz as "a most illustrious member of the profession" and spoke of his numerous other activities, including his recent writing of English lyrics for the opera "La Boheme," which the Metropolitan Opera House will present in December.

Trotta, Spiegel and Adams Address AMPA Class

Vincent Trotta, Henry Spiegel and Frank Adams addressed the "Showmanship Class" of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the Hotel Woodstock here last night, and Al Katz of Max Fine Display demonstrated low cost lobby displays.

Trotta, who was Paramount Pictures art director for 26 years, is currently conducting his own art service to the industry. Spiegel is director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for the New York and Brooklyn Paramount theatres. Adams is with the American Display Co.

las; main guy Marc Wolf, of Indianapolis, and first asistant George Hoover, of Miami. They were welcomed by Mayor David L. Lawrence, big boss, John H. Harris, dough guy George Eby, and ceremonial officer James Balmer, all of Pittsburgh.

In his opening address Beresin intends to stress the need for all tents in the organization to further their humanitarian work and charity accomplishments. Hoover will discuss plans for the staging of the annual convention at Mexico City next year, and Louis Montes and a group of film stars from that country will be on hand to add color to the invitation.

Murray Weiss, property master, will report on the activities of the various Tents and because of the jam-packed agenda the visit of the delegates to the Pitt-Penn State game has been called off to give them two full days of meetings.

To Appear on Telethon

Most of the international officers will appear on the all-night telethon on station WDTV Saturday night when an array of stage and screen talent is slated to be on hand.

Among those appearing will be Morton Downey, Virginia Mayo, Janet Leigh, George Murphy, Rhonda Fleming, Forrest Tucker, Michael O'Shea, Van Heflin and Tony Romano. Money raised from the telethon will be used to build a wing on the Rosalia Foundling Home to be named the Catherine Variety Wing, honoring the baby found in the lobby of the Sheridan Square Theatre 25 years ago which led to the founding of the organization.

Sunday night, Variety Club Tent No. 1 will hold its 25th silver anniversary banquet in the hotel's ballroom. The room has been turned into a midway with animals, barkers and side shows and the tent used for the first banquet will be set up for the 800 guests.

The principal speaker will be Congressman Dewey Short of Missouri, chairman of the Armed Forces Committee, who recently returned from Korea. John H. Harris and the other 10 original founders of the club will be on hand.

Among the speakers will be former Governor Harold Hoffman of New Jersey: Paul Martin, Canadian Minister of National Health and Welfare; C. J. Latta of the London's Tent; Branch Rickey, vice-president of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Rosey Roswell will make the annual Humanitarian Award.

Art Feldman, director of special events, has arranged for Mutual Network to carry part of the speaking program from the ballroom at 11.15 P.M. Sunday night. Universal and Pathe News also will have cameramen on hand for the affair.

Allied Action

objected to portions of the distributors' draft.

One question appeared to be the most prevalent here yesterday: Can other exhibition segments and distribution go ahead on a plan without Allied? Some distribution heads believed that it could be done; others were doubtful in view of the fact that such a move would require approval of the Department of Justice and that the D. of J. would not give the green light without Allied participation.

There will be no official statement from the MPAA on Allied's stand until member company heads can discuss the matter "among themselves," a spokesman said. Herman Levy, general counsel of the Theatre Owners of America, who was contacted by phone at his office in New Haven, declined to comment until he had read the trade press reports.

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, said that regardless of what other organizations planned to do, the ITOA would lay plans to set up its own arbitration system. While the machinery for such a venture has not been worked out, Brandt said his association would ask the cooperation of distributing companies in the project.

There was some speculation among industry leaders as to whether a single organization could establish an arbitration system of its own with Justice Department sanction or approval of the courts. Brandt said that anything that would be required to accomplish the project would be done. One industry lawyer said, however, that there would be nothing to prevent the ITOA from entering into a voluntary arbitration arrangement and that court sanction would not be necessary.

Whether Allied would accept the "open door" proposal of the MPAA and continue negotiations was a subject for conjecture yesterday. The concensus was that arbitration as far as Allied was concerned was "dead," with only a few holding out that there was a glimmer of hope still visible.

Both the drafts of Allied and the distributors have been kept under wraps since their preparation, but there seemed to be a move afoot yesterday to make the proposals public and "to let the industry as a whole decide whether Allied was right or wrong," as one spokesman put it.

It is expected that it will be several days before official statements will be issued or whether Allied will make a gesture toward further talks.

THE recently-concluded report, "Resources for Freedom," formulated by the President's Materials Commission, headed by William S. Paley, chairman of the board of CBS, will be made into an hour-long documentary film and will be telecast via CBS sometime in March, 1953. Roy Lockwood, formerly production manager for BBC during the war, later associate producer at March of Time and now an executive at CBS, will produce. . . . With George Jessel emceeing festivities, NBComedian Jerry Lewis was named honorary Mayor of Pacific Palisades, Cal. His partner, Dean Martin, was likewise honored by the local Chamber of Commerce but on an 'if' basis. Dean was named Chief of Police, "if within 30 days he becomes a resident of the town." . . Producer Richard DeRochemont's first of six "Abe Lincoln" films which bowed on the TV scene last Sunday on CBS' "Omnibus," is being acclaimed as a classic. Equally deserving of honors along with the star of the series, Royal Dano, director Norman Lloyd and scripter James Agee (whose film "The African Queen" won an Oscar) is film editor Morris Roizman, who delved thru 100,000 feet of film before coming up with the 12,500 feet comprising the series. The remaining five episodes will be seen on alternate Sundays (4:30 to 6:00 P.M.).

"Gulf Playhouse" will be replaced NBCommencing Friday, Jan. 2 by "The Life of Riley," starring William Bendix. The TVersion of the successful radio series of the same name will be filmed in Hollywood and will include in the cast Marjorie Reynolds, Lugene Sanders, Wesley Morgan and Tom D'Andrea. Gulf Oil will sponsor the new series via Young & Rubicam. . . . Meg O'Shaughnessy's warbling on the Pyramid record of Elmo Russ' novel ditty, "Who Bothers 'Bout the Bad When the Good Is So Good," will get lots of deejay attention. . . . It is natural to regard television as a new medium and in truth the little 'Giant' only emerged from the toddling stage directly after the end of the World War II, yet Ireene Wicker, who for years was radio's famed and beloved 'Singing Lady,' is a TVeteran, having appeared as 'Pierrette' in Dr. Lee DeForest's experimental telecasts back in 1934. Miss Wicker currently is seen Sundays at noon in "Little Lady Party" via WABD. . . . Dick Dudley, NBC announcer, and Howard Smith musical CBStaffer have collabbed on a timely number, "It's Christmas Every Day" (When You're in Love) which could very well 'ring the bell.'

Pare Jarrico Suit Down to $100,000

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Writer Paul Jarrico's $350,000 suit against RKO Radio Pictures was pared down to $100,000 when Superior Judge Orlando Rhodes ruled today, following testimony given by Howard Hughes, that Jarrico could not be entitled to punitive damages.

Hughes testified he had been totally responsible for the studio's discharge of Jarrico and had ordered every scrap of paper written by Jarrico destroyed. Hughes also said it was he who ordered Jarrico's name eliminated from "The Las Vegas Story" screen credits and instructed that a suit to obtain court approval of that action be instituted.

Parsons' plans for the future call for specially produced news programs which will integrate up-to-the-minute newsreel films as well as spot news photos. He also will show football games and other sports, as well as any material which may be of local interest, in addition to special closed circuit attractions.

The invitational opening of the program was launched recently with the show, "What's Your Opinion," from local station KPIX, preliminary to the showing of the Walcott-Marciano fight telecast. Parsons pointed out that it is necessary to go through the procedure of getting permission from the network or sponsor as well as the producer of each show taken from local stations because of legal technicalities involved.

most rapid conclusion of deals" for any TNT event to date, including the recent Walcott-Marciano heavyweight title bout. As further indication of exhibitor response, the TNT official pointed out that within 24 hours of the public announcement, 21 theatres indicated they wanted to book the event, the first entertainment show to be offered on large-screen television. The TNT spokesman declined comment on identifying the theatres booking the event, stating that the announcements should come from the individual theatres.

Theatres in Smaller Circuits

It is understood that those theatres which already have signed are mainly owned by smaller circuit operators. Of the larger circuits, only affiliates of United Paramount Theatres have set definite plans to book the event. Five UPT theatres taking the telecast have already been listed.

Negotiations, in the meantime, are continuing with Warner Brothers, Loew's and RKO Theatres.

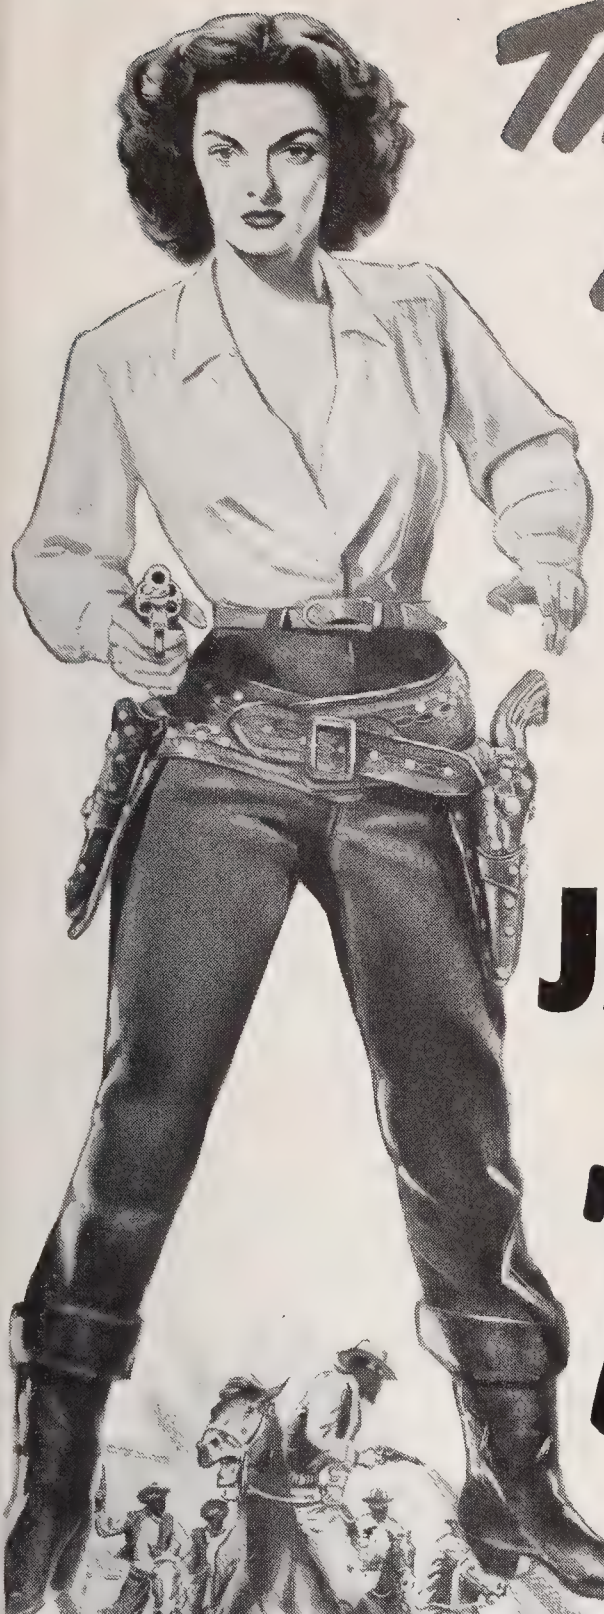
Locally, the "Carmen" telecast will be carried in Century Circuit's Marine Theatre, Brooklyn, in addition to New York's 50th Street Guild Theatre.

The TNT official termed the distribution in New York as "limited," and said that another TV-equipped theatre in New York may be signed up, depending upon the Metropolitan Opera's approval.

If coaxial cable clearances are procured from American Telephone and Telegraph Co. for doubtful situations, 50 or more theatres may join the "Carmen" net, the TNT official predicted. It was disclosed that TNT is currently contemplating setting some deadline date in the near future for the closing of deals in view of the belief that the opera, unlike the fights, will take more time to promote and sell to the public.



The standard contract agreed upon between TNT and the Metropolitan Opera calls for a 40 cents per seat minimum guarantee against 50 per cent of the net box-office gross.

Ir all started 13 years ago at the funeral of a movie pioneer. A group of the motion-picture industry's old-timers, including Jack Cohn (above, left), were there and decided they'd like to meet now and then under pleasanter circumstances. So they formed the Motion Picture Pioneers, Inc. Cohn, one of the founders of Columbia Pictures, was named permanent president.

Today, nearly a thousand men, among them producers, distributors and exhibitors, belong to the Pioneers. The pictures on this page show a few of them. Members are accepted only if they have been in the industry for at least 25 years, and new members are joining at the rate of about 100 a year. There are branch offices in big cities all over the world.

To take care of people in the industry, outside Hollywood, the Pioneers have established a foundation to help their colleagues "who may have fallen upon evil days through unemployment, illness or old age." The foundation parallels the Motion Picture Relief Fund which covers those in the production end in Hollywood.

Every year, the Pioneers get together and reminisce about old times and name one man as Pioneer of the Year. This year's Pioneer is Nate Blumberg (above, right), board chairman of Universal Pictures. He and his company are both celebrating their 40th year in the motion-picture business. His career reflects the color and chaos of early movie history.

At 12, Blumberg was carrying props at the famous Alhambra Theater in Milwaukee, where stage names like Jane Cowl and May Irwin played. At 18, he started his movie career as an assistant shipper in a film exchange, at a time when boys on bicycles carried one print from theater to theater. From there, he progressed from salesman to theater owner-exhibitor and was one of the first to play movies of the unknown Jack Benny.

BY the temper as well as the actions of the Allied States convention in Chicago last week there can be no doubt that Allied is back again on the so-called "militant" platform on which it was founded some 24 years ago and which has served it for so many years.

Many will regret it—even some within Allied ranks, for they are the thoughtful ones whose memories are not too short to remember that that policy has been futile in many instances and has not always served to improve the lot of Allied members.

Allied's current return to that policy is due to prevailing economic conditions in the industry. The exhibitor, the small one, especially, has his back to the wall, if the wall has not already caved in on him and deprived him of his theatre. It is a case of declining attendance and climbing film prices, with the exhibitor made desperate and combative because he has found no other answer to his grievous problems. In this situation the distributor is the most immediate target for the exhibitor's anxiety and resentment.

On the other hand, the producer-

TOA TO MAP PLANS ON ARBITRATION

Snaper Says Allied Has Not Closed the Door on Arbitration; TOA Leaders Will Meet This Week

By AL STEEN

Theatre Owners of America's future role in the evolvement of an arbitration system will be discussed here this week by Alfred Starr, TOA president; general counsel Herman M. Levy and Mitchell Wolfson, TOA executive. Levy and Wolfson are two of the organization's three members on the Industry Arbitration Conference. Si Fabian, the third member of the group, is out of town and will not be present at the sessions.

Calling of the meeting stems from Allied's Chicago action last week on the proposed industry arbitration system, although in a prepared statement from his home in Nashville, Starr does not mention Allied. In announcing this week's meeting, Starr said:

"I have stated on many occasions

The opinion that Allied has closed the door to further negotiations for an industry arbitration system and that the organization had rejected the proposed formula at its Chicago convention last week was described as a fallacy at the weekend here by Wilbur Snaper, Allied president. Snaper said that Allied objected only to those portions of the draft that did not meet the needs of exhibitors in overcoming their many problems. He contended that the door was still open for further conferences, indicating, however, that success hinged on those points that the so-called industry plan had side-stepped. These, among other things, were film prices and bidding as arbitable subjects.

Arbitration of film rentals continues to be a questionable item in the arbitration picture. Allied contends that the issue can be arbitrated, while the distributors claim that it would not be practicable. Association leaders base their affirmative opinions on the memorandum prepared almost a year ago by Abram F. Myers, Allied general

Top Theatre Television Price Ever: $7.20 Per

The 50th Street Guild Theatre here is currently selling reserved seat tickets at $7.20 per seat for the Dec. 11 evening telecast of the Metropolitan Opera Company's "Carmen," the highest box-office price ever set for a theatre television event.

Within seven days, 102 tickets were sold, while a large block of tickets has been reserved by the Metropolitan Opera Association, the management stated. The 450-seater is located in Rockefeller Center.

The $7.20 scale includes the 20 per cent Federal admission tax. The last theatre television event at the Guild—the Walcott-Marciano fight—brought $4.80 at the box-office.

Meanwhile, according to reports from Minneapolis, Benjamin Berger's Gopher Theatre will carry the "Carmen" telecast. The event will not be telecast by Minnesota Amusement Co.'s Radio City Theatre there. MACO said it made that decision to avoid a conflict with a scheduled concert on the same night by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra. The Gopher will use its theatre TV equipment for the first time for the one-hour Dec. 8 telecast of the James Lees sales convention.

distributor is faced with the same problems. Beset by increased costs on all sides, higher prices for his product are inescapable. The same competitive and economic forces which have reduced the theatres' patronage affect the producer-distributor as seriously and as impartially as they do the exhibitor. One of the moves the producer-distributor has resorted to in order to re-win patronage has been an increased concentration on production of high budget pictures, specials and super-specials which must and can compete with rival forms of entertainment and diversion.

For these, the price must be higher or the producer-distributor will not long survive.

In this conflict of costs versus income, Allied's militant policy is understandable, whether or not it is justifiable.

It remains to be observed that Allied has been down the same road before and the proof that there is no panacea at its end lies in the fact that Allied today is fighting against the same problems that beset it prior to its embarkation on a program in the 1930's which wound through 13 years of Federal court litigation, just ending, and returns now to the point of departure.

As we have said, Allied has explored that road before. Its recent, brief excursion on the other road—that of cooperative, all-industry endeavor, has been pursued irresolutely and to no conclusion. There is much in that direction that remains to be explored. This is not to say that it unequivocally promises the answers Allied is seeking. But it does seem preferable to a repetition of an old and futile adventure.

Kramer to Start Work on 'Mutiny'

Stanley Kramer, after confabs at Columbia here, at the weekend ordered "The Caine Mutiny" into immediate production, and declared that "all stops will be pulled on the picture." He said that he will devote to it the bulk of his own efforts in 1953.

See New RKO Radio Board

Disney Productions, releasing through RKO; Atlas Corp., one of RKO Pictures' leading stockholders, and David J. Greene, claiming to own and control more than 78,000 shares of RKO Pictures stock.

Connelly, of the law firm of Cravath, Cwaine and Moore, in arguing for a delay, informed the court that the two principal directors of the company were currently on the Coast working on the reconstitution of the board. Connelly apparently referred to Sherrill Corwin, acting chairman of the board, and Edward J. Burke, the other director who is also a member of the Ralph Stolkin syndicate which bought controlling interest in RKO from Howard Hughes. The attorney added that he expects the two directors in New York shortly.

"We have received a number of requests to submit affidavits in opposition" to the appointment of a temporary receiver, Connelly said, explaining they came from producers, major stockholders and bank representatatives. Continuing his argument, the RKO attorney said all of them would consider it "a tragedy" if a receiver was appointed. He added that the plaintiff had not proven any harm to the corporation by the present management which, he said, is now in the process of reorganization of its executive staff and continuing day-by-day operations of the company as heretofore.

In his ruling granting a 19-day postponement, Justice Greenberg pointed out that the appointment of a temporary receiver is a "serious matter" and "a drastic step," warranting a full and complete hearing on the arguments. He indicated that if all the parties to the dispute were not ready by that date, he would consider a further postponement.

Kipnis, representing minority stockholders Eli B. Castleman and his wife, Marion V. Castleman of Detroit, and Louis Feuerman of this city, argued that if they agreed to an adjournment it might be "misconstrued" or that "some misfortune" might occur to the company in the interim.

Whitney Seymour, of Simpson Thacher and Bartlett, who represented the Atlas Corp. and Walt Disney Productions, joined in RKO's application for adjournment and indicated that his clients would file affidavits. Atlas, according to its most recent report, as of June 30, stated that it owned 76,500 shares of RKO common.

Isadore J. Kresel, counsel for Greene, also argued for a postponement and expressed his opposition to the appointment of a receiver. Following the court session, Kresel denied that he was forming any stockholders committee or had been approached to join such a committee for a possible proxy contest.

A representative of the law firm of Rosenman, Goldmark, Colin and Kaye acted as an observer for Goldwyn. Among others attending was Roy Disney, president of Disney Productions. William Zimmerman, company attorney, who was recently named to the board, was the attorney of record.

The declaration that the reconstitution of the RKO board is currently being worked out on the Coast appears to spike claims and counter-claims that a new board slate and president have already been agreed upon. Corwin, Burke and Stolkin were reported meeting on the Coast with Hughes on the problem of interim leadership while negotiations for the sale of the Stolkin interests continue. On the basis of RKO's information to the court on Friday, it appeared that a decision on interim leadership still had to be reached.

RKO Pictures executives declined comment as to when Corwin and Burke are expected here from the Coast.

The application for the appointment of a temporary receiver stemmed from a suit filed by the same three minority stockholders naming Hughes as principal defendant, charging him with mismanagement. It also seeks restitution to the corporation of $3,000,000 from Hughes, said to be his profit on the sale of his 29 per cent interest to the Stolkin group.

Yeoman Leaves RKO For Own Business

ternal Revenue Bureau. In a letter to the sub-committee, Snyder said he did not try to influence the decision one way or the other but only tried to expedite a decision. He said his interest in this case "was no different than I have displayed in many other cases where it seemed to me that the taxpayer was entitled to call on the government for a fair and reasonable prompt consideration of its claim."

The sub-committee plans to hear Snyder in person early next month on the Universal and other cases.

Allied Door Open

counsel, as a basis for discussion of an arbitration procedure. At that time, Meyers claimed that a common form of arbitration was one to fix the value of goods delivered for which no price was stipulated. Myers said that the issue in such cases was the fair market value. Pointing out that films never were priced on a cost-plus profit basis but on their box office value which was ascertainable, Myers said it was common practice for some exhibitors to play pictures on open contracts; that is, with the film rental to be determined later.

Myers' Argument

Myers' argument was that, in the event the exhibitor and the distributor could not come to terms, there was no question but that their dispute could be arbitrated. Myers admitted that if all or even a substantial number of film deals were submitted to arbitration, the result would be disastrous. However, he said he did not think there would be as many such arbitrations as some industry people have feared. The fact that such arbitration involves delays, initial deposits and full disclosure of operations, many exhibitors would be reluctant to institute such proceedings unless they were in dire need of relief, as well as confident of winning their cases.

Myers said, however, that as a safeguard against such factors, the right of an exhibitor to invoke arbitration might be made dependent upon allegation and proof that he had tried in good faith to negotiate with the distributor and that he had ben refused a license except on terms that would not cover overhead and operating expense, plus a fair profit.

It is his matter of arbitration of film rentals that appears to be a principal stumbling block in a plan's adoption, with the general belief that concessions must be made by both sides before success can be achieved.

FCC Approves 14 New TV Stations

C.; Lima, O.; Johnstown, Pa.; Sioux Falls, S. D., and Henderson, Ky.

TOA Plans

that I have dedicated my tenure of office as president of TOA to the betterment of distributor-exhibitor relations. I now want to reaffirm that position.

"In an industry system of arbitration, I see a great step forward in the process of improving distributor-exhibitor relations. I feel, too, that exhibitors have everything to gain from such a system and nothing whatsoever to lose, since there is no compulsion on exhibitors to use it. It is there if they wish it.

Substantial Concessions

"Distribution has made substantial concessions in order to activate the system. It is not good sense for any exhibitor to reject those concessions."

Levy at the weekend declined to make any comment on Allied's rejection of the industry plan in its present form, preferring to wait until after this week's meeting before making an official statement.

Meanwhile, Allied's side-stepping of the industry arbitration system, at least for the present, continued to be a chief conversation topic here within the trade. While it was believed generally that Allied would eventually come back into the conferences, the necessary delay was bemoaned. One distribution head said that "it is difficult to understand, with so many 'plus points' listed by Abram Myers, Allied general counsel, in the industry plan, why the association didn't permit its members to take advantage of those 'plus points' by rejecting the plan. Allied has deprived its members of the opportunity to iron out their difficulties."

There was an opinion expressed that other exhibitor organizations and the distributors may go along on a system without Allied's participation actively, but no action along this line has been initiated.

By SHERWIN KANE

BY the temper as well as the actions of the Allied States convention in Chicago last week there can be no doubt that Allied is back again on the so-called "militant" platform on which it was founded some 24 years ago and which has served it for so many years.

Many will regret it—even some within Allied ranks, for they are the thoughtful ones whose memories are not too short to remember that that policy has been futile in many instances and has not always served to improve the lot of Allied members.

Allied's current return to that policy is due to prevailing economic conditions in the industry. The exhibitor, the small one, especially, has his back to the wall, if the wall has not already caved in on him and deprived him of his theatre. It is a case of declining attendance and climbing film prices, with the exhibitor made desperate and combative because he has found no other answer to his grievous problems. In this situation the distributor is the most immediate target for the exhibitor's anxiety and resentment.

On the other hand, the producer-

Increases approximating 10 per cent are provided in both instances.

Meanwhile, Local No. H-63 has been selected as bargaining agent by the employes of Columbia Pictures' New York exchange.

TOA TO MAP PLANS ON ARBITRATION

Snaper Says Allied Has Not Closed the Door on Arbitration; TOA Leaders Will Meet This Week

By AL STEEN

Theatre Owners of America's future role in the evolvement of an arbitration system will be discussed here this week by Alfred Starr, TOA president; general counsel Herman M. Levy and Mitchell Wolfson, TOA executive. Levy and Wolfson are two of the organization's three members on the Industry Arbitration Conference. Si Fabian, the third member of the group, is out of town and will not be present at the sessions.

Calling of the meeting stems from Allied's Chicago action last week on the proposed industry arbitration system, although in a prepared statement from his home in Nashville, Starr does not mention Allied. In announcing this week's meeting, Starr said:

The opinion that Allied has closed the door to further negotiations for an industry arbitration system and that the organization had rejected the proposed formula at its Chicago convention last week was described as a fallacy at the weekend here by Wilbur Snaper, Allied president. Snaper said that Allied objected only to those portions of the draft that did not meet the needs of exhibitors in overcoming their many problems. He contended that the door was still open for further conferences, indicating, however, that success hinged on those points that the so-called industry plan had side-stepped. These, among other things, were film prices and bidding as arbitable subjects.

Arbitration of film rentals continues to be a questionable item in the arbitration picture. Allied contends that the issue can be arbitrated, while the distributors claim that it would not be practicable. Association leaders base their affirmative opinions on the memorandum prepared almost a year ago by Abram F. Myers, Allied general

The 50th Street Guild Theatre here is currently selling reserved seat tickets at $7.20 per seat for the Dec. 11 evening telecast of the Metropolitan Opera Company's "Carmen," the highest box-office price ever set for a theatre television event.

Within seven days, 102 tickets were sold, while a large block of tickets has been reserved by the Metropolitan Opera Association, the management stated. The 450-seater is located in Rockefeller Center.

The $7.20 scale includes the 20 per cent Federal admission tax. The last theatre television event at the Guild—the Walcott-Marciano fight—brought $4.80 at the box-office.

Meanwhile, according to reports from Minneapolis, Benjamin Berger's Gopher Theatre will carry the "Carmen" telecast. The event will not be telecast by Minnesota Amusement Co.'s Radio City Theatre there. MACO said it made that decision to avoid a conflict with a scheduled concert on the same night by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra. The Gopher will use its theatre TV equipment for the first time for the one-hour Dec. 8 telecast of the James Lees sales convention.

According to an official of Theatre

Reject Drive-in Bid

BALTIMORE, Nov. 23.—An application for a special permit to erect a large drive-in theatre along Old Harford Road has been rejected by N. C. Heinmuller, acting zoning commissioner of Baltimore County. The proposed project was protested by home owners in the area who declared the theatre would cause a traffic hazard and create disturbing noises in the neighborhood.

distributor is faced with the same problems. Beset by increased costs on all sides, higher prices for his product are inescapable. The same competitive and economic forces which have reduced the theatres' patronage affect the producer-distributor as seriously and as impartially as they do the exhibitor. One of the moves the producer-distributor has resorted to in order to rewin patronage has been an increased concentration on production of high budget pictures, specials and super-specials which must and can compete with rival forms of entertainment and diversion.

For these, the price must be higher or the producer-distributor will not long survive.

In this conflict of costs versus income, Allied's militant policy is understandable, whether or not it is justifiable.

It remains to be observed that Allied has been down the same road before and the proof that there is no panacea at its end lies in the fact that Allied today is fighting against the same problems that beset it prior to its embarkation on a program in the 1930's which wound through 13 years of Federal court litigation, just ending, and returns now to the point of departure.

As we have said, Allied has explored that road before. Its recent, brief excursion on the other road—that of cooperative, all-industry endeavor, has been pursued irresolutely and to no conclusion. There is much in that direction that remains to be explored. This is not to say that it unequivocally promises the answers Allied is seeking. But it does seem preferable to a repetition of an old and futile adventure.

Kramer to Start Work on 'Mutiny'

Stanley Kramer, after confabs at Columbia here, at the weekend ordered "The Caine Mutiny" into immediate production, and declared that "all stops will be pulled on the picture." He said that he will devote to it the bulk of his own efforts in 1953.

Only one picture will precede "The Caine Mutiny," Kramer announced. This is titled temporarily "The Cyclists' Raid." "Circle of Fire" has gone on the shelf, Kramer disclosed, due to the illness of director Irving Reis who cannot return to the studio for many months.

See New RKO Radio Board

Disney Productions, releasing through RKO; Atlas Corp., one of RKO Pictures' leading stockholders, and David J. Greene, claiming to own and control more than 78,000 shares of RKO Pictures stock.

Connelly, of the law firm of Cravath, Cwaine and Moore, in arguing for a delay, informed the court that the two principal directors of the company were currently on the Coast working on the reconstitution of the board. Connelly apparently referred to Sherrill Corwin, acting chairman of the board, and Edward J. Burke, the other director who is also a member of the Ralph Stolkin syndicate which bought controlling interest in RKO from Howard Hughes. The attorney added that he expects the two directors in New York shortly.

"We have received a number of requests to submit affidavits in opposition" to the appointment of a temporary receiver, Connelly said, explaining they came from producers, major stockholders and bank representatives. Continuing his argument, the RKO attorney said all of them would consider it "a tragedy" if a receiver was appointed. He added that the plaintiff had not proven any harm to the corporation by the present management which, he said, is now in the process of reorganization of its executive staff and continuing day-by-day operations of the company as heretofore.

In his ruling granting a 19-day postponement, Justice Greenberg pointed out that the appointment of a temporary receiver is a "serious matter" and "a drastic step," warranting a full and complete hearing on the arguments. He indicated that if all the parties to the dispute were not ready by that date, he would consider a further postponement.

Kipnis, representing minority stockholders Eli B. Castleman and his wife, Marion V. Castleman of Detroit, and Louis Feuerman of this city, argued that if they agreed to an adjournment it might be "misconstrued" or that "some misfortune" might occur to the company in the interim.

Whitney Seymour, of Simpson Thacher and Bartlett, who represented the Atlas Corp. and Walt Disney Productions, joined in RKO's application for adjournment and indicated that his clients would file affidavits. Atlas, according to its most recent report, as of June 30, stated that it owned 76,500 shares of RKO common.

Isadore J. Kresel, counsel for Greene, also argued for a postponement and expressed his opposition to the appointment of a receiver. Following the court session, Kresel denied that he was forming any stockholders committee or had been approached to join such a committee for a possible proxy contest.

A representative of the law firm of Rosenman, Goldmark, Colin and Kaye acted as an observer for Goldwyn. Among others attending was Roy Disney, president of Disney Productions. William Zimmerman, company attorney, who was recently named to the board, was the attorney of record.

The declaration that the reconstitution of the RKO board is currently being worked out on the Coast appears to spike claims and counter-claims that a new board slate and president have already been agreed upon. Corwin, Burke and Stolkin were reported meeting on the Coast with Hughes on the problem of interim leadership while negotiations for the sale of the Stolkin interests continue. On the basis of RKO's information to the court on Friday, it appeared that a decision on interim leadership still had to be reached.

RKO Pictures executives declined comment as to when Corwin and Burke are expected here from the Coast.

The application for the appointment of a temporary receiver stemmed from a suit filed by the same three minority stockholders naming Hughes as principal defendant, charging him with mismanagement. It also seeks restitution to the corporation of $3,000,000 from Hughes, said to be his profit on the sale of his 29 per cent interest to the Stolkin group.

Allied Door Open

counsel, as a basis for discussion of an arbitration procedure. At that time, Meyers claimed that a common form of arbitration was one to fix the value of goods delivered for which no price was stipulated. Myers said that the issue in such cases was the fair market value. Pointing out that films never were priced on a cost-plus profit basis but on their box office value which was ascertainable, Myers said it was common practice for some exhibitors to play pictures on open contracts; that is, with the film rental to be determined later.

Myers' Argument

Myers' argument was that, in the event the exhibitor and the distributor could not come to terms, there was no question but that their dispute could be arbitrated. Myers admitted that if all or even a substantial number of film deals were submitted to arbitration, the result would be disastrous. However, he said he did not think there would be as many such arbitrations as some industry people have feared. The fact that such arbitration involves delays, initial deposits and full disclosure of operations, many exhibitors would be reluctant to institute such proceedings unless they were in dire need of relief, as well as confident of winning their cases.

Myers said, however, that as a safeguard against such factors, the right of an exhibitor to invoke arbitration might be made dependent upon allegation and proof that he had tried in good faith to negotiate with the distributor and that he had ben refused a license except on terms that would not cover overhead and operating expense, plus a fair profit.

It is his matter of arbitration of film rentals that appears to be a principal stumbling block in a plan's adoption, with the general belief that concessions must be made by both sides before success can be achieved.

TOA Plans

that I have dedicated my tenure of office as president of TOA to the betterment of distributor-exhibitor relations. I now want to reaffirm that position.

"In an industry system of arbitration, I see a great step forward in the process of improving distributor-exhibitor relations. I feel, too, that exhibitors have everything to gain from such a system and nothing whatsoever to lose, since there is no compulsion on exhibitors to use it. It is there if they wish it.

Substantial Concessions

"Distribution has made substantial concessions in order to activate the system. It is not good sense for any exhibitor to reject those concessions."

Levy at the weekend declined to make any comment on Allied's rejection of the industry plan in its present form, preferring to wait until after this week's meeting before making an official statement.

Meanwhile, Allied's side-stepping of the industry arbitration system, at least for the present, continued to be a chief conversation topic here within the trade. While it was believed generally that Allied would eventually come back into the conferences, the necessary delay was bemoaned. One distribution head said that "it is difficult to understand, with so many 'plus points' listed by Abram Myers, Allied general counsel, in the industry plan, why the association didn't permit its members to take advantage of those 'plus points' by rejecting the plan. Allied has deprived its members of the opportunity to iron out their difficulties."

There was an opinion expressed that other exhibitor organizations and the distributors may go along on a system without Allied's participation actively, but no action along this line has been initiated.

The operations of RKO Pictures Corp. and subsidiary companies for the nine months ended Sept. 27 resulted in a net loss (unaudited), after all charges, of $4,777,766, which compares with a loss of $145,904 for the same period of 1951.

Series of Shorts on Para. Screen Tests

Paramount's plan to produce a featurette titled "How to Break Into the Movies," to show the screen tests of upcoming Paramount stars, may be revised so that the project would become a series of shorts instead of a single subject. Company executives are of the opinion that there is too much interesting material available from the screen test to be crammed into one featurette.

The tentative plan now is to spread the subject matter over a series of one-reelers, each to be made available at about the time that a feature starring one or more of the players whose screen test is highlighted in the short, is released.

WB Joins 'Carmen' Telecast Line-up

"Hans Christian Andersen"

[Samuel Goldwyn-RKO Pictures]

CHILDREN OF ALL AGES love fairy tales and this one about the Danish writer in eye-caressing color by Technicolor reflects the remarkable Goldwyn genius that combines genuine artistry with solid commercial values. The peculiar magic that has been best exemplified on the screen by the great Disney stories here is captured in the heart-warming Moss Hart screenplay and enchantingly projected in a performance by Danny Kaye that is eloquently simple.

Entwined with the cobbler-story-teller's appreciation of people and children, is a sub-plot concerning his innocent affection for a beauteous ballerina. Jeanmaire looks and dances the role admirably and her acting is surprisingly sensitive despite an obvious if charming French accent. Unknown to Kaye, she is happily married to a temperamental ballet director, portrayed by Farley Granger with considerable glowering and gesturing but little conviction. They quarrel and fight in front of Kaye but kiss and make up later.

It is an exploitable angle of the film if a minor one and Kaye's shy romance is touching. This part contains a dream sequence, a charming wedding fantasy and two opulent ballets, elaborately staged, and expertly danced. Roland Petit, head of the Paris Ballet for which Jeanmarie starred,

Allied's Hands On Arbitration Tied Until Jan.

Next Move Up to Board; Majors May Call Meet

Regardless of how Allied members may feel about reopening discussions on a uniform arbitration plan, nothing can be done about it until after the association's board meeting in New Orleans Jan. 12. Even if the distributors should come up with a plan that would be entirely acceptable to Allied, no action could be taken on it until the proposals were placed before the directors at the January sessions. This was stated emphatically by Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board, in Washington.

Meanwhile, it is reported here that distribution leaders are giving some thought to calling a meeting of Allied chieftains for the purpose of discussing the Allied objections to the so-called industry arbitration plan which was turned down by Allied at its annual convention in Chicago last week. By taking the "minus" points one by one, the distributors believe they may

Cut in Power Dims Pacific Marquees

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 24.—All theatres in the large centers of the Pacific Northwest—principally in Portland and Seattle—have agreed to cut their electric power consumption 10 per cent in accordance with a request from the Defense Electric Power Administration. A power shortage exists.

The Evergreen, Hamrick, J. J. Parker and Sterling circuits will dim their lights on their marquees and darken display signs and spotlights.

Promotion Plan Is Set by Cinerama

Cinerama Productions has a plan to make use of the heavy press attention given its new dimensional process, according to Dudley Roberts, company head. The stories carried in key city newspapers will be classified and grouped in relation to the 200 cities in which it is planned to show Cinerama within the next three years, in the form of bound folders for theatres.

Raftery Testifies at Chicago UA Hearing

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Edward Raftery, New York attorney and former president of United Artists, testified here today in the Krinsley vs. United Artists et al hearing before Special Master William Saltiel, appointed by Federal Judge William J. Campbell to hear evidence.

The case involves splitting of the "spoils" of the Towne case, United Artists claiming they should share in the damages awarded the theatre, having been partners, and the owners of the theatre claiming that UA was admitted to partnership in the theatre through coercion because of the Towne's inability to buy first-run pictures, which United Artists supplied to the theatre after buying an interest. The hearings before Saltiel probably will be concluded tomorrow.

State Department Pleased By New French Film Pact

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—State Department officials have expressed satisfaction that the film industry itself had negotiated the new French pact, rather than continuing it as a government-to-government agreement.

They said that in the reports disclosing details of the new agreement, this fact had generally been overlooked. They said the previous French-American film agreement, which grew out of conversations between one-time Secretary of State Byrnes and former French premier Blum, was the only instance where the U. S. government had negotiated with a foreign government for financial terms for a particular industry. All other film agreements, such as the British, and all agreements governing other products such as autos or steel, are negotiated between the U. S. industry and the foreign government, it was asserted.

"The French film agreement was always an anomalous one, and we were never very happy about it," one official said. "Frequently, we had to veto something that was for the good of the industry because it conflicted with over-all State Department policy. It is a fine thing that this situation has been changed and that the new agreement was negotiated by the industry and that all future bargaining will be done by the industry."

MPEA Seeking New Terms in Pakistan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Industry officials hope to get the Pakistan government to agree to better customs terms for U.S. film imports.

Irving Maas of the Motion Picture Export Association was reported to be in Pakistan or en route there to work on the problem.

Some time ago the Pakistan government raised its duties on all film imports. This was designed to protect the domestic industry mainly against an influx of films from India. Recently, however, the Pakistan government banned Indian films outright, thus reducing the need for the tariff protection. U.S. officials are hopeful the Pakistan government will agree to a drawback provision under which U.S. film imports would get a lower duty.

be able to find a means of meeting Allied's objections.

Because of Allied's position on the issue, until after the board meeting, it is obvious that an arbitration formula which would include Allied could not be operative at least until after Jan. 12. While the reported distributors' desire for a roundtable conference with Allied leaders might result in a step toward ironing out some of wrinkles which Allied believes to exist in the present format, participants could do nothing but report the efforts to the board. Formal negotiations then could follow.

Rank Group Resigns From 'U' Board

Directors of Universal Pictures yesterday formally accepted the resignations of J. Arthur Rank, Robert Benjamin and G. I. Woodham-Smith from the Universal board at a meeting held here.

Rank had continued as a board member following the sale of his stock interest in Universal last spring, while Benjamin and Woodham-Smith had remained on the board by virtue of their executive association with Rank. Rank and Woodham-Smith tendered their resignations recently, in view of the fact that Rank's interest had been sold to Decca Records. Benjamin resigned when he became chairman of the board of United Artists.

The trio's places on the Universal board will not be filled, according to N. J. Blumberg, board chairman.

"Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd"

(Warner Brothers)

CHARLES LAUGHTON does slapstick comedy with alacrity in this amusing farce that features the formula antics of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello and includes six songs zestfully rendered by a chorus and the principals. Fran Warren is introduced in this satire on the famous pirate chief and sings several of the Bob Russell-Lester Lee songs.

It is one of the better films coming from the team lately due largely to the fine spoofing done by Laughton and Hillary Brooke, the latter as a beauteous lady pirate. The color by Supercinecolor is rather garish, but, nevertheless, the production has the right elements for good box-office returns.

The story written by Howard Dimsdale and John Grant has tailor-made situations for Abbott and Costello. It deals with Laughton, as Captain Kidd, having raided ships in Miss Brooke's territory and the latter demanding her share of the treasure which is cached on Laughton's private island. Abbott and Costello become involved when they accidentally gain possession of a map showing where the treasure is buried.

Leif Erickson stolidly plays Morgan, Laughton's assistant. Miss Warren is appealing as a lady taken off a vanquished merchant ship, and Bill Shirley is handsome, and sings with relish, as her boy friend who is shanghaied by Erickson. When Laughton double-crosses Miss Brooke over the treasure she joins forces with Abbott and Costello and when her own ship arrives, they destroy Laughton's gang. At the finale A. & C. sail off happily with the treasure and Laughton hanging from the bowsprit by his toes.

Songs included are "North of Nowhere," "A Bachelor's Life," "Meet Captain Kidd," "Speak To Me of the Tall Pine," "We Sail Tonight," and "Away, Aye, Ay, Aye, Oh!"

Alex Gottlieb produced and Charles Lamont directed. This is a broadly played comedy that contains names that can be exploited.

Running time, 70 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 27.

"Thunderbirds"

(Republic)

A RESOUNDING tribute is paid to another branch of the Armed Forces, the National Guard, in this ambitious Republic production. Oklahoma's famed and respected 45th Infantry Division, known as the "Thunderbirds," is the focal point of the drama. Republic has given the picture a thoroughgoing and competent production treatment and has assembled a large cast for its enactment. As a drama it moves along the familiar ground of war stories. As for good exploitation material, it abounds in it.

Starting early in 1940, when Congress called up the National Guard, the story traces the adventures and experiences of two buddies, John Derek and John Barrymore, Jr., both of whom are in love with the same girl, Eileen Christy.

Their first baptism of fire is a harrying one and the camera traces with stark realism battle after battle in Sicily and Italy. A considerable amount of actual combat footage has been inserted for authentic effect. Around the main plot in which the two lads play the focal part, the screenplay by Mary C. McCall, Jr. delineates several other subplots involving others in the unit. Thus it has warmth, humor, pathos and sentiment.

News finally comes to the boys that Miss Christy has made her choice of one to marry, Barrymore, thus leaving Derek crestfallen. It is not for long, however, as he meets a pretty Army nurse, Mona Freeman. The boys are separated, and tension grows as Barrymore is believed to have been killed.

In a storybook ending, both are happily united however. Ward Bond, a veteran sergeant who turns out to be Barrymore's father, dies heroically, thus erasing a court marshal from World War I.

John H. Auer was associate producer-director for this Herbert J. Yates presentation, based on a story by Kenneth Gamet. Others in the cast are Gene Evans and Barton MacLane, both as sergeants.

Running time, 98 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 27.

"Tromba, the Tiger Man"

(Lippert Pictures) Hollywood, Nov. 24

MADE in Germany and in the German language but since dubbed in English, this stacks up as a fair offering with subject matter that allows for exploitation in certain situations. The dubbing is about average and performances are ordinary.

The setting is the famous Krone circus in Europe and the story, by Elizabeth Zimmermann and Helmut Weiss, deals with circus performers and animals, thus providing circus promotional angles.

Tromba, who has a tiger act, is presented as the top attraction of the circus. His way with women is persuasive, unprincipled, and usually tragic. The circus is owned by a former trapeze artiste who was crippled in an accident caused by Tromba. The same accident killed her husband. Tromba becomes romantically entangled with the owner's daughter, who replaces another trapeze artiste in his affections. Tromba's act with the tigers depends upon a drug that keeps the tigers under control and when he runs out of the drug, one of the tigers claws him to death.

Rene Deltgen portrays the title role and others in the cast include Angeline Hauff, Gustav Knuth, Hilde Weissner, Gretha Weiser, Gardy Granass, and Adrian Hoven. Helmut Weiss directed.

Running time, 63 minutes. Adult audience classification. Release date, Nov. 14.

Special Lighting

To get maximum effects for the theatre audiences across the country, the Metropolitan has agreed for the first time to special television lighting of its stage. TV cameras and technical crews of the DuMont Television Network will be used for the telecast, with cameras located in the "Diamond Horseshoe" boxes, in the orchestra pit, and for special programming outside the auditorium of the Metropolitan.

In Boston, the American Theatre Corp. has announced that it has reconsidered and will definitely present the "Carmen" telecast at the Pilgrim Theatre.

In Albany, N. Y., it was disclosed that Fabian's Grand will present the "Carmen" telecast. Prices will range from $1.20 to $3.60 on a reserved seat basis.

Manager Paul Wallen said that the first seven rows of the orchestra will be scaled at $2.50 and the remainder at $3.60. Eight rows in the balcony will be sold at $3.60 and six at $2.50. Second balcony prices will be $1.50 and $1.20. The theatre seats 1,500. Tickets will probably be placed on sale the latter part of this week, coincidental with the breaking of an advertising campaign.

did the choreography and dances with her in the "The Little Mermaid" ballet. Erik Bruhn of the Ballet Theatre performs with her in the other.

Frank Loesser's fine score has been integrated with the story and it includes several songs based on and containing the essence of several of Andersen's tales. There are "The Ugly Duckling," "The King's New Clothes," "Thumbelina" and "Inch Worm," "Wonderful Copenhagen," "Anywhere I Wander," "I'm Hans Christian Andersen," and the thoroughly modern and delightful duet "No Two People."

Joey Walsh is outstanding among a group of pleasant youngsters as the orphaned cobbler-apprentice more wise to society's vicious ways than his kindly guardian. It is Walsh who talks Kaye into leaving his small town to go to Copenhagen when he discovers the town is going to order Kaye to leave for keeping the children from school with his tale-telling. Walsh also tries to dissuade Kaye from his love for Jeanmarie.

But Kaye persists and writes the "Mermaid" book for the ballerina and it is produced when the company returns from tour. Before the performance Kaye is accidentally locked in the prop room by Granger and left there. Next morning Jeanmarie discovers this and summons him. He declares his love for her but Granger bursts in with a display of affection and an extravagant gift of jewelry. Kaye realizes the truth and leaves Copenhagen, meeting Walsh, whom he had broken relations with, on the way back to their small town. Since he had achieved some fame from the publication of his tales, he is welcomed back as a story-teller.

Charles Vidor's excellent direction has sustained the appealing mood and maintained interest for the greater part of the production's 114 minutes.

Fifteen years of preparation have gone into this production which is said to have cost $4,000,000 to make. The result is a unique film that offers tremendous merchandising potential. There is an enormous attraction for the fairy tale audience of children and their parents all over the world. The ballet sequences which utilize the talents of top performers in the field and spectacular settings comprise nearly 25 per cent of the film. Audience appreciation of the ballet is probably currently at a peak but even if not, the ballets are immense visual productions, the "Mermaid" alone costing $400,000. In addition there is the romantic triangle which can draw. The marquee lure of Kaye and the Goldwyn trademark are strong assets, of course. The film should prove a most potent package of entertainment at the box-office.

Others in a capable cast are John Qualen, Peter Votrian, John Brown, Jeanne Lafayette, Robert Malcolm, George Chandler, Fred Kelsey, Gil Perkins and Philip Tonge.

Running time, 114 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

ferred during the Paramount vice-president's Hollywood trip.

The mushrooming interest in technological advancement throughout the industry was attributed by Raibourn to the current run of "This Is Cinerama" at the Broadway Theatre here. Technologically, Raibourn said, the industry had been marking time until the peripheral vision process which gives a three-dimensional effect was unveiled. Stereophonic sound—that is, sound coming from a number of directions—is also used in the Cinerama process.

The Paramount vice-president expressed the belief that technological advances will untap a wide audience for motion picture theatres. Questioned about the economic drawbacks of Cinerama, Raibourn said he believed that those and problems of other third - dimensional processes would be solved over a period of time.

Raibourn said to expect an announcement in the near future on Paramount's tri-color Chromatic TV tube. He declined to say what the annuoncement would be, but Dick Hodgson, president of Chromatic, previously reported on plans to hold demonstrations of the home color TV tube in key cities.

Raibourn acknowledged that Columbia Broadcasting System's television executives continue to express interest in the possible purchase of Paramount's backlog of short subjects. However, he made it clear that the talks have never come close to the consummation of a deal.

'Iron Mistress' Bow Good as Hold-overs Reign on Broadway

"Iron Mistress" opened to a pretty good $65,000 at the Paramount this week, a seven-day period in which hold-overs predominated in most New York first-run situations.

The dual world premiere of "Hans Christian Andersen" will take place today at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris Theatre. The last three days of "The Lusty Men" at the Criterion racked up a moderate $5,000. At the Paris, "Young Wives' Tale" bowed out in its third week with a rather slow $3,800.

At the Radio City Music Hall, a fairly nice $110,000 is seen for the second week of "Plymouth Adventure." The picture will hold over the Thanksgiving weekend. "Bloodhounds of Broadway" at the Roxy is due to hit a satisfactory $50,000 for its second week.

"Outpost in Malaya" will open tomorrow at Loew's State, replacing "The Steel Trap," which is expected to do a moderate $14,000 for its second and final week. A fair $17,000 is seen for "Prisoner of Zenda," in its third week, at the Capitol.

"Limelight" is holding up neatly with $24,000 expected for the fifth week of the film at the Astor and $9,000 at the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux. "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier," another good grosser, is due to hit $20,000 for its third inning at the Victoria.

Holding up fairly well is "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at the Rivoli, where $17,000 is estimated for the tenth week. "The Turning Point" at the Globe is expected to bow out with an average $10,500 for its second and final week. Opening Friday at the Globe will be "Kansas City Confidential."

"The Thief of Venice" will premiere at the Mayfair on Thursday, replacing "The World in His Arms," which is predicted to hit a rather moderate $10,000 for its seventh week.

Among off-Broadway theatres, the record-breaking "The Promoter" at the Fine Arts is expected to register a robust $11,500 for its fourth week. A neat $8,500 is indicated for "The Fourposter" at the Sutton, now in its sixth inning. At the 52nd Street Trans-Lux, a fine $9,000 is forecast for the sixth week of "O. Henry's Full House." "Under the Red Sea" at the Beekman opened to a pretty good $7,800 for its first week.

MGM Starts Appeal Film for 'Dimes'

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 24.—M-G-M today began filming this year's March of Dimes subject for the appeal on behalf of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. The company is making the short for the 12th year.

Starring Howard Keel for the second time, the half-reel appeal will be the largest scale production in the series. It will be made at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital with 50 to 75 respiratory cases appearing. As in previous years, Harry Loud will produce and direct the short under the supervision of Frank Whitbeck. Sid Sidman is unit manager. The short will be released in the near future with 14,000 prints being shown simultaneously for one week throughout the country.

Asides & Interludes

—by James Cunningham

TONIGHT, the Motion Picture Pioneers, in annual assembly, will mantle Nathan Blumberg with the cloak of "Motion Picture Pioneer of 1952." May he wear it well; well does he deserve it.

Late one December afternoon in 1937, Nate, who was then happily engaged as RKO Theatres' topper, invited a representative of each of the trade papers to dinner at New York's 21 Club. There was no apparent connection at the time to the rumors afoot and in print about the economic floundering of Universal Pictures. Universal talk-to's generally were not available for comment. Those who were, would not. Reporters on the Universal beat were not happy.

Cherrystones, filet and cafe disposed of, up spoke mine host: "I am leaving RKO Theatres." A shock. "Yes," added Nate, "I have been asked to take over the operation of Universal Pictures."

Universal's home office payroll that day was obtained from the first day's rental of the Roxy Theatre's smash opening of a new Universal star, known little then, but better now, as Deanna Durbin. Nate candidly explained the plight of the company and as he let down the silvery locks atop that round and likeable dome, he asked the guys for their support of "a terrific assignment."

Nate met the same reporters on the same night annually, after steering Universal from the "red" to the "black," for several years thereafter.

Nat Williams has some theatres down Georgia way, around Quitman and Thomasville. And Nat has a problem. Being a member in good standing on the books of the Theatre Owners of America, Nat sent an S.O.S. to TOA legalistic sage Herman Levy, up Connecticut way, as follows:

"I need help badly and immediately.

"Surely in some of your educational pursuits and charitable activities, you have attached yourself in an official manner to some medical school or hospital.

"I want a corpse. Well preserved, if possible, but a corpse. I'm in a battle with the Railway Express Agency, and only with a corpse can I win.

"Quitman is 24 miles from here. They have set a $2.52 rate on a feature film from here to there, or over 10 cents a mile. They will haul a corpse for 2.6 cents per mile. If I can get a bow-legged corpse, I can set a film can between his legs, and re-use indefinitely, saving 7.4 cents a mile on hauls. Don't know life expectancy of a corpse, but should recover profit before he wears out.

"For a reasonable fee, say a half-dozen Scotchs, could you advise if the plan has any legal flaws? If not, see what COMPO will offer for the idea. They could copyright, sell to exhibitors, and simplify their funding labors."

AN IDYLL ABOUT IDEALISTIC GREEKS:—Many years ago, after the buffeting of oyster-opening in a St. Louis hash-house, and the many harrowing experiences in building a circuit in and around that precinct, George Skouras arrived in New York. He told me shortly thereafter that his life's ambition was to buy a tiny island off the coast of his native Greece, and to repose there to philosophize. Whether George ever did acquire that island, we do not know. But we do know that George toured this country in the interim to round up horses and cattle and pigs and whatnot and had them shipped to replenish the farms of those parts of Greece which had been devastated by war.

While George was collecting horses and theatres, his brother, Charles, was shuffling about on the West Coast doing something or other about 450 theatres of National Theatres. Apparently, Charles also had a dream.

His dream was realized only the other day when the Cathedral of Saint Sophia was dedicated in Los Angeles. Charles personally raised the several million dollars required for its construction. It is the most expensive Cathedral in the world, we are told, costing $850 per seat, making it more costly than St. Peter's in Rome and St. Sophia's in Constantinople.

"This is the church that Skouras built," said A.P.D. Valakis, in a gorgeous brochure describing the imposing edifice rising in the middle of a large, landscaped area on Normandie Avenue near Pico Boulevard, where Charles Skouras plans to extend the arts and music, the liturgical and ritualistic influences which the Orthodox Church has propagated through the long centuries.

12 Films in Natural Vision Will Be Made In Next 15 Months

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 24. — Twelve major motion pictures will be produced in Natural Vision 3-dimension process during the next 15 months, M. L. Gunzburg, president of Natural Vision Corp., announced today.

Among them will be "Spear in Sand," another production by Arch Oboler, whose "Bwana Devil," the first feature filmed in NV, premieres here Wednesday evening. Negotiations are under way also for filming the Broadway musical, "New Faces," on the stage, and for making a feature using the "Cecil and Beany" puppets from the television show of that name.

Contracts Signed

Gunzburg said contracts for exhibition in 50 cities in the next six months have been signed, with San Francisco and New York following Los Angeles in presenting the first attraction.

In response to questioning, Gunzburg said experiments have been made to determine whether NV on television is practicable, but "3-D on television is not an immediate possibility."

'Bwana Devil' Will Bow Without PCA Seal of Approval

Hollywood, Nov. 24.—Arch Oboler's "Bwana Devil" will be world premiered Wednesday night at the Hollywood and Downtown Paramount Theatres as the first feature ever filmed with natural vision 3-dimension process despite the fact that the Production Code Administration has withheld its seal of approval, Oboler told the press today.

Oboler said PCA's objection to issuing the seal is based on a love scene which, he said, looks "hotter" in rounded form achieved by NV than it might have looked in regular two dimension medium.

PCA spokesman told MOTION PICTURE DAILY the sequence alluded to would have been objectionable "in two dimensions, one dimension, or flat."

'3-Dimension Week' Proclaimed in L.A.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24.—Mayor Fletcher Bowron has issued a proclamation here declaring the seven days starting Wednesday to be "Three Dimension Week" in honor of the world premiere of "Bwana Devil" in the Natural Vision process at two Paramount Theatres Wednesday evening.

According to the proclamation the event "will have important repercussions in the motion picture industry and already has created widespread interest throughout the U. S. and abroad," because "final perfection of the three dimensional film is the result of over two decades of intensive efforts and research."

The operations of RKO Pictures Corp. and subsidiary companies for the nine months ended Sept. 27 resulted in a net loss (unaudited), after all charges, of $4,777,766, which compares with a loss of $145,904 for the same period of 1951.

Series of Shorts on Para. Screen Tests

Paramount's plan to produce a featurette titled "How to Break Into the Movies," to show the screen tests of upcoming Paramount stars, may be revised so that the project would become a series of shorts instead of a single subject. ## "Hans Christian Andersen"

[Samuel Goldwyn-RKO Pictures]

CHILDREN OF ALL AGES love fairy tales and this one about the Danish writer in eye-caressing color by Technicolor reflects the remarkable Goldwyn genius that combines genuine artistry with solid commercial values. The peculiar magic that has been best exemplified on the screen by the great Disney stories here is captured in the heart-warming Moss Hart screenplay and enchantingly projected in a performance by Danny Kaye that is eloquently simple.

Entwined with the cobbler-story-teller's appreciation of people and children, is a sub-plot concerning his innocent affection for a beauteous ballerina. Jeanmaire looks and dances the role admirably and her acting is surprisingly sensitive despite an obvious if charming French accent. Unknown to Kaye, she is happily married to a temperamental ballet director, portrayed by Farley Granger with considerable glowering and gesturing but little conviction. They quarrel and fight in front of Kaye but kiss and make up later.

It is an exploitable angle of the film if a minor one and Kaye's shy romance is touching. This part contains a dream sequence, a charming wedding fantasy and two opulent ballets, elaborately staged, and expertly danced. Roland Petit, head of the Paris Ballet for which Jeanmarie starred,

Allied's Hands On Arbitration Tied Until Jan.

Next Move Up to Board; Majors May Call Meet

Regardless of how Allied members may feel about reopening discussions on a uniform arbitration plan, nothing can be done about it until after the association's board meeting in New Orleans Jan. 12. Even if the distributors should come up with a plan that would be entirely acceptable to Allied, no action could be taken on it until the proposals were placed before the directors at the January sessions. This was stated emphatically by Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board, in Washington.

Meanwhile, it is reported here that distribution leaders are giving some thought to calling a meeting of Allied chieftains for the purpose of discussing the Allied objections to the so-called industry arbitration plan which was turned down by Allied at its annual convention in Chicago last week. CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Edward Raftery, New York attorney and former president of United Artists, testified here today in the Krinsley vs. United Artists et al hearing before Special Master William Saltiel, appointed by Federal Judge William J. Campbell to hear evidence.

The case involves splitting of the "spoils" of the Towne case, United Artists claiming they should share in the damages awarded the theatre, having been partners, and the owners of the theatre claiming that UA was admitted to partnership in the theatre through coercion because of the Towne's inability to buy first-run pictures, which United Artists supplied to the theatre after buying an interest. The hearings before Saltiel probably will be concluded tomorrow.

State Department Pleased By New French Film Pact

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—State Department officials have expressed satisfaction that the film industry itself had negotiated the new French pact, rather than continuing it as a government-to-government agreement.

They said that in the reports disclosing details of the new agreement, this fact had generally been overlooked. They said the previous French-American film agreement, which grew out of conversations between one-time Secretary of State Byrnes and former French premier Blum, was the only instance where the U. S. government had negotiated with a foreign government for financial terms for a particular industry. All other film agreements, such as the British, and all agreements governing other products such as autos or steel, are negotiated between the U. S. industry and the foreign government, it was asserted.

"The French film agreement was always an anomalous one, and we were never very happy about it," one official said. "Frequently, we had to veto something that was for the good of the industry because it conflicted with over-all State Department policy. It is a fine thing that this situation has been changed and that the new agreement was negotiated by the industry and that all future bargaining will be done by the industry."

MPEA Seeking New Terms in Pakistan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Industry officials hope to get the Pakistan government to agree to better customs terms for U.S. film imports.

Irving Maas of the Motion Picture Export Association was reported to be in Pakistan or en route there to work on the problem.

Some time ago the Pakistan government raised its duties on all film imports. This was designed to protect the domestic industry mainly against an influx of films from India. Recently, however, the Pakistan government banned Indian films outright, thus reducing the need for the tariff protection. U.S. officials are hopeful the Pakistan government will agree to a drawback provision under which U.S. film imports would get a lower duty.

Because of Allied's position on the issue, until after the board meeting, it is obvious that an arbitration formula which would include Allied could not be operative at least until after Jan. 12. While the reported distributors' desire for a roundtable conference with Allied leaders might result in a step toward ironing out some of wrinkles which Allied believes to exist in the present format, participants could do nothing but report the efforts to the board. Formal negotiations then could follow.

Rank Group Resigns From 'U' Board

Directors of Universal Pictures yesterday formally accepted the resignations of J. Arthur Rank, Robert Benjamin and G. I. Woodham-Smith from the Universal board at a meeting held here.

Rank had continued as a board member following the sale of his stock interest in Universal last spring, while Benjamin and Woodham-Smith had remained on the board by virtue of their executive association with Rank. Rank and Woodham-Smith tendered their resignations recently, in view of the fact that Rank's interest had been sold to Decca Records. Benjamin resigned when he became chairman of the board of United Artists.

The trio's places on the Universal board will not be filled, according to N. J. Blumberg, board chairman.

"Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd"

(Warner Brothers)

CHARLES LAUGHTON does slapstick comedy with alacrity in this amusing farce that features the formula antics of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello and includes six songs zestfully rendered by a chorus and the principals. Fran Warren is introduced in this satire on the famous pirate chief and sings several of the Bob Russell-Lester Lee songs.

It is one of the better films coming from the team lately due largely to the fine spoofing done by Laughton and Hillary Brooke, the latter as a beauteous lady pirate. The color by Supercinecolor is rather garish, but, nevertheless, the production has the right elements for good box-office returns.

The story written by Howard Dimsdale and John Grant has tailor-made situations for Abbott and Costello. It deals with Laughton, as Captain Kidd, having raided ships in Miss Brooke's territory and the latter demanding her share of the treasure which is cached on Laughton's private island. Abbott and Costello become involved when they accidentally gain possession of a map showing where the treasure is buried.

Leif Erickson stolidly plays Morgan, Laughton's assistant. Miss Warren is appealing as a lady taken off a vanquished merchant ship, and Bill Shirley is handsome, and sings with relish, as her boy friend who is shanghaied by Erickson. When Laughton double-crosses Miss Brooke over the treasure she joins forces with Abbott and Costello and when her own ship arrives, they destroy Laughton's gang. At the finale A. & C. sail off happily with the treasure and Laughton hanging from the bowsprit by his toes.

Songs included are "North of Nowhere," "A Bachelor's Life," "Meet Captain Kidd," "Speak To Me of the Tall Pine," "We Sail Tonight," and "Away, Aye, Ay, Aye, Oh!"

Alex Gottlieb produced and Charles Lamont directed. This is a broadly played comedy that contains names that can be exploited.

Running time, 70 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 27.

"Thunderbirds"

(Republic)

A RESOUNDING tribute is paid to another branch of the Armed Forces, the National Guard, in this ambitious Republic production. Oklahoma's famed and respected 45th Infantry Division, known as the "Thunderbirds," is the focal point of the drama. Republic has given the picture a thoroughgoing and competent production treatment and has assembled a large cast for its enactment. As a drama it moves along the familiar ground of war stories. As for good exploitation material, it abounds in it.

Starting early in 1940, when Congress called up the National Guard, the story traces the adventures and experiences of two buddies, John Derek and John Barrymore, Jr., both of whom are in love with the same girl, Eileen Christy.

Their first baptism of fire is a harrying one and the camera traces with stark realism battle after battle in Sicily and Italy. A considerable amount of actual combat footage has been inserted for authentic effect. Around the main plot in which the two lads play the focal part, the screenplay by Mary C. McCall, Jr. delineates several other subplots involving others in the unit. Thus it has warmth, humor, pathos and sentiment.

News finally comes to the boys that Miss Christy has made her choice of one to marry, Barrymore, thus leaving Derek crestfallen. It is not for long, however, as he meets a pretty Army nurse, Mona Freeman. The boys are separated, and tension grows as Barrymore is believed to have been killed.

In a storybook ending, both are happily united however. Ward Bond, a veteran sergeant who turns out to be Barrymore's father, dies heroically, thus erasing a court marshal from World War I.

John H. Auer was associate producer-director for this Herbert J. Yates presentation, based on a story by Kenneth Gamet. Others in the cast are Gene Evans and Barton MacLane, both as sergeants.

Running time, 98 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 27.

"Tromba, the Tiger Man"

(Lippert Pictures) Hollywood, Nov. 24

MADE in Germany and in the German language but since dubbed in English, this stacks up as a fair offering with subject matter that allows for exploitation in certain situations. The dubbing is about average and performances are ordinary.

The setting is the famous Krone circus in Europe and the story, by Elizabeth Zimmermann and Helmut Weiss, deals with circus performers and animals, thus providing circus promotional angles.

Tromba, who has a tiger act, is presented as the top attraction of the circus. His way with women is persuasive, unprincipled, and usually tragic. The circus is owned by a former trapeze artiste who was crippled in an accident caused by Tromba. The same accident killed her husband. Tromba becomes romantically entangled with the owner's daughter, who replaces another trapeze artiste in his affections. Tromba's act with the tigers depends upon a drug that keeps the tigers under control and when he runs out of the drug, one of the tigers claws him to death.

Rene Deltgen portrays the title role and others in the cast include Angeline Hauff, Gustav Knuth, Hilde Weissner, Gretha Weiser, Gardy Granass, and Adrian Hoven. Helmut Weiss directed.

Running time, 63 minutes. Adult audience classification. Release date, Nov. 14.

did the choreography and dances with her in the "The Little Mermaid" ballet. Erik Bruhn of the Ballet Theatre performs with her in the other.

Frank Loesser's fine score has been integrated with the story and it includes several songs based on and containing the essence of several of Andersen's tales. There are "The Ugly Duckling," "The King's New Clothes," "Thumbelina" and "Inch Worm," "Wonderful Copenhagen," "Anywhere I Wander," "I'm Hans Christian Andersen," and the thoroughly modern and delightful duet "No Two People."

Joey Walsh is outstanding among a group of pleasant youngsters as the orphaned cobbler-apprentice more wise to society's vicious ways than his kindly guardian. It is Walsh who talks Kaye into leaving his small town to go to Copenhagen when he discovers the town is going to order Kaye to leave for keeping the children from school with his tale-telling. Walsh also tries to dissuade Kaye from his love for Jeanmarie.

But Kaye persists and writes the "Mermaid" book for the ballerina and it is produced when the company returns from tour. Before the performance Kaye is accidentally locked in the prop room by Granger and left there. Next morning Jeanmarie discovers this and summons him. He declares his love for her but Granger bursts in with a display of affection and an extravagant gift of jewelry. Kaye realizes the truth and leaves Copenhagen, meeting Walsh, whom he had broken relations with, on the way back to their small town. Since he had achieved some fame from the publication of his tales, he is welcomed back as a story-teller.

Charles Vidor's excellent direction has sustained the appealing mood and maintained interest for the greater part of the production's 114 minutes.

Fifteen years of preparation have gone into this production which is said to have cost $4,000,000 to make. The result is a unique film that offers tremendous merchandising potential. There is an enormous attraction for the fairy tale audience of children and their parents all over the world. The ballet sequences which utilize the talents of top performers in the field and spectacular settings comprise nearly 25 per cent of the film. Audience appreciation of the ballet is probably currently at a peak but even if not, the ballets are immense visual productions, the "Mermaid" alone costing $400,000. In addition there is the romantic triangle which can draw. The marquee lure of Kaye and the Goldwyn trademark are strong assets, of course. The film should prove a most potent package of entertainment at the box-office.

Others in a capable cast are John Qualen, Peter Votrian, John Brown, Jeanne Lafayette, Robert Malcolm, George Chandler, Fred Kelsey, Gil Perkins and Philip Tonge.

Running time, 114 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

ferred during the Paramount vice-president's Hollywood trip.

The mushrooming interest in technological advancement throughout the industry was attributed by Raibourn to the current run of "This Is Cinerama" at the Broadway Theatre here. Technologically, Raibourn said, the industry had been marking time until the peripheral vision process which gives a three-dimensional effect was unveiled. Stereophonic sound—that is, sound coming from a number of directions—is also used in the Cinerama process.

The Paramount vice-president expressed the belief that technological advances will untap a wide audience for motion picture theatres. Questioned about the economic drawbacks of Cinerama, Raibourn said he believed that those and problems of other third - dimensional processes would be solved over a period of time.

Raibourn said to expect an announcement in the near future on Paramount's tri-color Chromatic TV tube. He declined to say what the annuoncement would be, but Dick Hodgson, president of Chromatic, previously reported on plans to hold demonstrations of the home color TV tube in key cities.

Raibourn acknowledged that Columbia Broadcasting System's television executives continue to express interest in the possible purchase of Paramount's backlog of short subjects. However, he made it clear that the talks have never come close to the consummation of a deal.

'Iron Mistress' Bow Good as Hold-overs Reign on Broadway

"Iron Mistress" opened to a pretty good $65,000 at the Paramount this week, a seven-day period in which hold-overs predominated in most New York first-run situations.

The dual world premiere of "Hans Christian Andersen" will take place today at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris Theatre. The last three days of "The Lusty Men" at the Criterion racked up a moderate $5,000. At the Paris, "Young Wives' Tale" bowed out in its third week with a rather slow $3,800.

At the Radio City Music Hall, a fairly nice $110,000 is seen for the second week of "Plymouth Adventure." The picture will hold over the Thanksgiving weekend. "Bloodhounds of Broadway" at the Roxy is due to hit a satisfactory $50,000 for its second week.

"Outpost in Malaya" will open tomorrow at Loew's State, replacing "The Steel Trap," which is expected to do a moderate $14,000 for its second and final week. A fair $17,000 is seen for "Prisoner of Zenda," in its third week, at the Capitol.

"Limelight" is holding up neatly with $24,000 expected for the fifth week of the film at the Astor and $9,000 at the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux. "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier," another good grosser, is due to hit $20,000 for its third inning at the Victoria.

Holding up fairly well is "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at the Rivoli, where $17,000 is estimated for the tenth week. "The Turning Point" at the Globe is expected to bow out with an average $10,500 for its second and final week. Opening Friday at the Globe will be "Kansas City Confidential."

"The Thief of Venice" will premiere at the Mayfair on Thursday, replacing "The World in His Arms," which is predicted to hit a rather moderate $10,000 for its seventh week.

Among off-Broadway theatres, the record-breaking "The Promoter" at the Fine Arts is expected to register a robust $11,500 for its fourth week. A neat $8,500 is indicated for "The Fourposter" at the Sutton, now in its sixth inning. At the 52nd Street Trans-Lux, a fine $9,000 is forecast for the sixth week of "O. Henry's Full House." "Under the Red Sea" at the Beekman opened to a pretty good $7,800 for its first week.

—by James Cunningham

TONIGHT, the Motion Picture Pioneers, in annual assembly, will mantle Nathan Blumberg with the cloak of "Motion Picture Pioneer of 1952." May he wear it well; well does he deserve it.

Late one December afternoon in 1937, Nate, who was then happily engaged as RKO Theatres' topper, invited a representative of each of the trade papers to dinner at New York's 21 Club. There was no apparent connection at the time to the rumors afoot and in print about the economic floundering of Universal Pictures. Universal talk-to's generally were not available for comment. Those who were, would not. Reporters on the Universal beat were not happy.

Cherrystones, filet and cafe disposed of, up spoke mine host: "I am leaving RKO Theatres." A shock. "Yes," added Nate, "I have been asked to take over the operation of Universal Pictures."

Universal's home office payroll that day was obtained from the first day's rental of the Roxy Theatre's smash opening of a new Universal star, known little then, but better now, as Deanna Durbin. Nate candidly explained the plight of the company and as he let down the silvery locks atop that round and likeable dome, he asked the guys for their support of "a terrific assignment."

Nate met the same reporters on the same night annually, after steering Universal from the "red" to the "black," for several years thereafter.

Drive-in theatres' counterpart of baseball's "rain checks": "Fog tickets"; they're being issued in those sectors of these United States where a condensed watery vapor suspended in th atmosphere obscures vision. . . . Nat Williams has some theatres down Georgia way, around Quitman and Thomasville. And Nat has a problem. Being a member in good standing on the books of the Theatre Owners of America, Nat sent an S.O.S. to TOA legalistic sage Herman Levy, up Connecticut way, as follows:

"I need help badly and immediately.

"Surely in some of your educational pursuits and charitable activities, you have attached yourself in an official manner to some medical school or hospital.

"I want a corpse. Well preserved, if possible, but a corpse. I'm in a battle with the Railway Express Agency, and only with a corpse can I win.

"Quitman is 24 miles from here. They have set a $2.52 rate on a feature film from here to there, or over 10 cents a mile. They will haul a corpse for 2.6 cents per mile. If I can get a bow-legged corpse, I can set a film can between his legs, and re-use indefinitely, saving 7.4 cents a mile on hauls. Don't know life expectancy of a corpse, but should recover profit before he wears out.

"For a reasonable fee, say a half-dozen Scotchs, could you advise if the plan has any legal flaws? If not, see what COMPO will offer for the idea. They could copyright, sell to exhibitors, and simplify their funding labors."

AN IDYLL ABOUT IDEALISTIC GREEKS:—Many years ago, after the buffeting of oyster-opening in a St. Louis hash-house, and the many harrowing experiences in building a circuit in and around that precinct, George Skouras arrived in New York. He told me shortly thereafter that his life's ambition was to buy a tiny island off the coast of his native Greece, and to repose there to philosophize. Whether George ever did acquire that island, we do not know. But we do know that George toured this country in the interim to round up horses and cattle and pigs and whatnot and had them shipped to replenish the farms of those parts of Greece which had been devastated by war.

While George was collecting horses and theatres, his brother, Charles, was shuffling about on the West Coast doing something or other about 450 theatres of National Theatres. Apparently, Charles also had a dream.

His dream was realized only the other day when the Cathedral of Saint Sophia was dedicated in Los Angeles. Charles personally raised the several million dollars required for its construction. It is the most expensive Cathedral in the world, we are told, costing $850 per seat, making it more costly than St. Peter's in Rome and St. Sophia's in Constantinople.

"This is the church that Skouras built," said A.P.D. Valakis, in a gorgeous brochure describing the imposing edifice rising in the middle of a large, landscaped area on Normandie Avenue near Pico Boulevard, where Charles Skouras plans to extend the arts and music, the liturgical and ritualistic influences which the Orthodox Church has propagated through the long centuries.

12 Films in Natural Vision Will Be Made In Next 15 Months

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 24. — Twelve major motion pictures will be produced in Natural Vision 3-dimension process during the next 15 months, M. L. Gunzburg, president of Natural Vision Corp., announced today.

Among them will be "Spear in Sand," another production by Arch Oboler, whose "Bwana Devil," the first feature filmed in NV, premieres here Wednesday evening. Negotiations are under way also for filming the Broadway musical, "New Faces," on the stage, and for making a feature using the "Cecil and Beany" puppets from the television show of that name.

Contracts Signed

Gunzburg said contracts for exhibition in 50 cities in the next six months have been signed, with San Francisco and New York following Los Angeles in presenting the first attraction.

In response to questioning, Gunzburg said experiments have been made to determine whether NV on television is practicable, but "3-D on television is not an immediate possibility."

'Bwana Devil' Will Bow Without PCA Seal of Approval

Hollywood, Nov. 24.—Arch Oboler's "Bwana Devil" will be world premiered Wednesday night at the Hollywood and Downtown Paramount Theatres as the first feature ever filmed with natural vision 3-dimension process despite the fact that the Production Code Administration has withheld its seal of approval, Oboler told the press today.

Oboler said PCA's objection to issuing the seal is based on a love scene which, he said, looks "hotter" in rounded form achieved by NV than it might have looked in regular two dimension medium.

PCA spokesman told MOTION PICTURE DAILY the sequence alluded to would have been objectionable "in two dimensions, one dimension, or flat."

'3-Dimension Week' Proclaimed in L.A.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24.—Mayor Fletcher Bowron has issued a proclamation here declaring the seven days starting Wednesday to be "Three Dimension Week" in honor of the world premiere of "Bwana Devil" in the Natural Vision process at two Paramount Theatres Wednesday evening.

According to the proclamation the event "will have important repercussions in the motion picture industry and already has created widespread interest throughout the U. S. and abroad," because "final perfection of the three dimensional film is the result of over two decades of intensive efforts and research."

It was "old timers' night" in the Grand Ballroom of New York's Hotel Astor last night when the Motion Picture Pioneers gathered for their annual banquet and to pay homage to N. J. Blumberg, who was proclaimed the "Motion Picture Pioneer of 1952." Blumberg, chairman of the board of directors of Universal Pictures, is marking his 40th anniversary in the motion picture business.

To Honor Zukor

fair, on behalf of Variety International. The plan was discussed and approved at Variety's mid-winter meeting in Pittsburgh last weekend.

Extend Over Several Months

The testimonials, which are expected to extend over several months, will lead off with a celebration marking Zukor's 80th birthday, Jan. 7. This will be in the form of a dinner in Hollywood, probably at the Ambassador Hotel, with all branches of the industry represented, including many persons who were associated with Zukor in his enterprises in the past. Another dinner, scheduled for March 4 at the Hotel Waldorf Astoria in New York, will commemorate the 50th anniversary of Zukor's entrance into the motion picture business in March, 1903. The guest list will include financial, business and political leaders of the nation.

At a trade press conference here yesterday, O'Donnell said that all crafts, guilds, associations and organizations within the industry, as well as all other phases of the entertainment world, will be invited to participate with the Variety Clubs in honoring the veteran film showman. Plans for the events originated when O'Donnell learned that Paramount executives were contemplating a birthday dinner in his honor.

In a telegram sent earlier to the Paramount home office from Dallas, O'Donnell declared that Zukor's 80th birthday and his 50th anniversary in the film business constituted occasions deserving a celebration by the entire industry. Upon receiving the consent of Paramount executives, O'Donnell went to Pittsburgh and placed the idea before the Variety meeting.

"Adolph Zukor's life," O'Donnell said yesterday, "is an example of the American dream fulfilled. Coming to America from his native Hungary as a poor boy, he not only raised himself to a position of honor, but in doing so built an industry which has carried the ideals of his adopted country all over the world. His life is a saga of Americanism at its best and I can think of nothing more worthwhile for our industry than to hold up Mr. Zukor as a shining example of what this business stands for."

Other events in honor of Zukor will be held throughout the world during 1953.

awaiting the development in this electronic age." He warned that "we of the older generation, we who have seen our business grow from an idea to a fabulous institution, must not assume the role of spectators," adding that "we must place accent on youth, but we also must respect maturity."

Blumberg said he believed the Pioneers should enlarge its scope and assume an obligation to help induct new blood in the business. "Our maturity plus youth should be a combination to insure good health in our industry," he said.

The plaque presented to Blumberg as the year's pioneer of the industry read: "Motion Picture Pioneers bestows its highest honor upon Nate Blumberg, whose forty brilliant years in the motion picture business closely parallel the spectacular growth and tremendous achievements of the industry he has served so faithfully and well. For enriching our industry with his countless contributions as exhibitor, producer and distributor, for his sterling attributes exemplified by his devotion, his affection and his feeling for his fellow man, we acclaim him 'Pioneer of the Year'."

In telling about the work of the Foundation of the Motion Picture Pioneers during the past year, Depinet asked those Pioneers fortunate enough to be able to leave an estate to consider leaving some of the estate to the Foundation. He said the Foundation should be uppermost in their minds because "the help we give these unfortunate people is only a small token of repayment for their great service in building what we know as a successful motion picture industry."

Depinet traced Blumberg's rise from poster clerk to his present important position, with proof of his humble beginning supplied by Harold Fitzgerald, president of Fox-Wisconsin Theatres, who gave Blumberg his start in the film business in 1912.

Father Peyton, who achieved international fame through his Family Rosary Crusade via radio, TV, films and rallies, paid tribute to film industry members who joined forces with radio in bringing the messages of the Crusade's Family Theatre to the people of America and the world.

Other speakers included Pioneers president Jack Cohn, Danny Kaye and Jesse Block. Plaques "for constructive contributions in both thoughts and deeds" were presented to Harry J. Takiff, secretary-treasurer of the organization, and vice-president Marvin Kirsch. Special thanks for helping to make the "Jubilee Dinner" a success were given to John J. O'Connor, Maurice Bergman, Charles Alicoate, Gilbert Josephson, David Bader, Ray Gallagher, Leon Leonidoff, Henry A. Linet and Milton Livingston as members of the working committee.

A telephone recording of greetings from three Hollywood friends of Blumberg was played over a loud speaker. The salutes came from Jack Benny, Jimmy Durante and James Stewart. Harry Wismer read the names of 36 industry representatives, 20 of them members of the Pioneers, who died during the past year. Rabbi Ralph Silverstein of Temple Sinai and former Chaplain of the Cinema Lodge of B'nai B'rith, delivered the invocation and participated in requiem ceremonies for the departed members.

Jane Pickens Sings

Jane Pickens sang the national anthem and entertainment was supplied by Radio City Music Hall's Glee Club, the latter through the courtesy of G. S. Eyssell and Leon Leonidoff. Music was provided by Al Rickey and his "Pioneer Orchestra." Acknowledgments were made to Jake Starr who, every year, has created and contributed display decorations for the dinners and to the trade press for its help in publicizing the affair.

A special feature was a "Salute by Look Magazine" to the Pioneers, featured in the Dec. 2 issue of the magazine, now on newsstands.

Dais guests at the dinner were Blumberg, Edward P. (Ted) Curtis, Depinet, Fitzgerald, Frank Folsom, William German, William Goetz, Leonard Goldenson, T. J. Hargrave, Jessel, Kaye, Louis Lurie, Judge Pecora, Father Peyton, Sam Pinanski, Milton R. Rackmil, J. Robert Rubin, Serge Semenenko, Rabbi Silverstein, George Skouras, Harry M. Warner, Robert R. ## Programming Slant

to programming which hundreds of exhibitors have adopted relates to format and advertising.

"No longer is programming a mere matter of time-filling to these showmen," Morgan said. "They have taken cognizance of the great national magazines' profound influence on public entertainment values and tastes; that is to say, they have come to realize that just as such magazines maintain a proper balance of reading entertainment and enlightenment in the form of features, stories, serials, oddities, news commentaries and special departments and columns, so must the motion picture theatre balance its program instead of overweighing it with features at the expense of such entertainment as cartoons, newsreels and other short subjects.

"The exhibitors realize, too, that to deprive their patrons of the film counterparts of magazine oddities, sports items, news reports, etc., is to create in the customers' subconscious minds the feeling of having been cheated of part of that to which theatre patrons are entitled in return for the admission price paid. Thus, the content and format of the great national magazines now exercise an influence on motion picture theatre programming, according to numbers of independent exhibitors and circuit operators.

New Attitude

"This new exhibitor attitude is reflected in theatre newspaper advertisements as well as on the screen. In city after city which I visited I found advertisements for features also listing by title the short subjects on the programs. Less and less do we find merely the line: 'Also selected short subjects.' And because the intelligent exhibitor now knows his customers regard newsreels as a necessary part of the pattern of keeping well-informed in these times, he is demanding that his newsreels be new and not two or more weeks old—this despite the extent to which television can provide quick news service."

Morgan said, "I have discovered also two other important developments, (1) that motion picture advertising in general by exhibitors is showing a greater exercise of intelligence and reflecting strong insights into what sets the public's imagination afire, and, (2), that exhibitors in general are using press books more consistently than ever before."

"Against All Flags"

(Universal-International)

MAUREEN O'HARA and ERROL FLYNN are as handsome a couple as ever got mixed up with pirates in bright color by Technicolor in this superior production that contains all the elements of a strong box-office success. Anthony Quinn is on hand as a swaggering pirate captain whose attentions are rejected by Miss O'Hara and who tries to do-in Flynn, a government spy trying to break up the captains of the Coast pirate syndicate.

There is a sure-fire mixture of attractive romance and vigorous swashbuckling in a taut screenplay by Aeneas MacKenzie and Joseph Hoffman, based on a MacKenzie story, that provides crisp and often humorous dialogue for the principals. The island backgrounds are impressive and George Sherman's direction has kept the proceedings moving at a neat pace.

Producer Howard Christie has made good use of shipboard settings where much of the action occurs. Flynn poses as an officer-deserter who escapes with seamen Phil Tully and John Alderson. They are accepted by the pirates after Flynn defeats a huge pirate in an exciting pike duel. Flynn becomes navigator on Quinn's ship. Quinn vanquishes a ship on the high seas that is the state ship of the Emperor of India and carries Alice Kelley, the emperor's daughter.

Flynn rescues Miss Kelley from the burning ship and later spikes the island's fortification guns. He then signals the waiting government ship to attack but is caught by Quinn and only saved from death by Miss O'Hara, who loves him. Flynn boards Quinn's ship as it is escaping by using Miss Kelley as a hostage. He kills Quinn in a duel, returns the ship to his superior officers, obtains a pardon for Miss O'Hara, and happily chooses her at the finale.

Flynn and Quinn are zestful derring-doers, Miss O'Hara registers strongly as the spitfire pirate, Miss Kelley is notable as the pretty princess, and Mildred Natwick supplies comedy as her governess. Others in the cast are Michael Ross, Harry Cording and Paul Newlan. This production has names, action, and spirit and should be a solid attraction.

Running time, 83½ minutes. General audience classification. For December release.

"The Desperate Search"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A SOLID cast featuring Howard Keel, Jane Greer, Patricia Medina, and Keenan Wynn is the main asset of this moderate entry that is dramatically concerned with several routine domestic problems but suffers from a rather incredible story. There is some attractive aerial footage since the protagonists are bush flyers, and some suspense is generated in the climactic search for survivors of a passenger plane crash.

The screenplay by Walter Doniger, based on a novel by Arthur Mayse, presents Keel as a pilot married to Miss Greer and the father of two children, Lee Aaker and Linda Lowell, by a previous marriage to domineering flyer, Miss Medina. Aaker and young Miss Lowell spend some time with their father and are on a plane slated to return them to their mother when it crashes in a mountainous area.

The children, sole survivors, try to await rescue and avoid being killed by a cougar while Keel is trying to convince the search party to follow his hunch and search the crash area. They do not do so and Miss Medina attempts to win back Keel but he remains true to Miss Greer and after a few days follows his hunch and flies to the area alone, locating the youngsters. After landing, he finds the children treed by the animal, which he clubs to death and all ends happily as Miss Medina decides to leave the children with him.

The children make a very appealing pair and perform capably, as do the stars. Others in the cast are Robert Burton, Michael Dugan, Elaine Stewart, Jonathan Cott, Jeff Richards ,and Dick Simmons. Production and direction are adequate. Matthew Rapf produced and Joseph Lewis directed. The production has several exploitation angles and some genuine appeal.

Running time, 73 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 16.

Mt. Hood Radio, TV Appeals FCC Ruling

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Mt. Hood Radio and Television Broadcasting Corp. attorneys have appealed to the full Federal Communications Commission from a hearing examiner's decision that a pending application for a Portland, Ore., television station could not be changed to include the liquidation of the holdings of Ralph E. Stolkin and affiliated investors.

Stolkin, Edward G. Burke, Jr., and Sherrill C. Corwin formerly held 43½ per cent of Mt. Hood stock, and Ted Gamble owns 43½ per cent of the stock. Several weeks ago Stolkin, Burke and Corwin sold their stock to more than 30 employes of radio station KOIN in Portland, which is controlled by Mt. Hood.

The FCC has been holding hearings on several competing applications for Portland TV channels and Mt. Hood is one of the applicants. Mt. Hood asked permission to change its applications to conform to the stock sale but examiner Elizabeth C. Smith refused the request, declaring it was too late in the hearing to permit the change.

Mt. Hood's appeal to the full Commission stated Miss Smith's ruling was inconsistent with the law and previous FCC regulations and decisions.

THE advertising profession lost a prospective account executive when Alec Guiness, British star, resigned from an ad agency to become an actor, according to a story in the current issue of Life. Twelve portraits of Alec are reproduced in a spread, each showing him in a different character part. The author of the article says it takes Alec up to three hours to make up for each character role and transform himself into his screen personality. It is rare when a British film shows a substantial profit in the U. S. market. However, Alec Guiness' last three pictures, "The Lavender Hill Mob," "The Man in the White Suit" and "The Promoter," all Universal-International releases, are expected to make a profit of over $2,000,000 in this country.

Cameron Shipp has written his impressions of Leslie Caron for the issue of Woman's Home Companion now on the newsstands. When reading Shipp's article you get the feeling that Miss Caron both astounded and bewildered the author. Although she is now a star at the M-G-M studio and married to the heir of the Hormel ham and meat packing fortune, she still practices the thrift taught to her by her French parents. Quoting Leslie on economy, she said, "I cook all the time. I have to. We do not have mooch money and we hate restaurants." M-G-M has scheduled her for stardom. Her next pictures will be "Glory Alley," "Lili" and "The Story of Three Loves."

John Wayne says "I don't act, I react," according to Don Allen in a story on this modest star which will appear in Sunday's American Weekly. This is John's quaint way of explaining his acting ability, although he has been voted the best box office star in the Motion Picture Herald-Fame poll for the past two years. He has been leading man for Colbert, Dietrich and Crawford. Their consensus of opinion of John was, "He's so dependable." Oddly enough, Wayne never worries about his love scenes. Nor does he try to be too adept. He thinks a little clumsiness is better suited to the characters he plays. On the "Jet Pilot" set his co-star, Janet Leigh, was ribbed about this. "The guy wasn't very expert in love interludes, was he?" "Maybe not," said Janet seriously, summing him up, "but he's very thorough." Wayne's current picture is "The Quiet Man," produced by John Ford for Republic Pictures.

Louis Pollock's profile on Deborah Kerr in December's Redbook gives the reader the impression that her life's story would make a rather good movie script. During the war, while part of a theatrical troupe entertaining servicemen, she met an RAF fighter pilot whom she married after the European war had ended. fair, on behalf of Variety International. The plan was discussed and approved at Variety's mid-winter meeting in Pittsburgh last weekend.

Extend Over Several Months

The testimonials, which are expected to extend over several months, will lead off with a celebration marking Zukor's 80th birthday, Jan. 7. This will be in the form of a dinner in Hollywood, probably at the Ambassador Hotel, with all branches of the industry represented, including many persons who were associated with Zukor in his enterprises in the past. Another dinner, scheduled for March 4 at the Hotel Waldorf Astoria in New York, will commemorate the 50th anniversary of Zukor's entrance into the motion picture business in March, 1903. The guest list will include financial, business and political leaders of the nation.

At a trade press conference here yesterday, O'Donnell said that all crafts, guilds, associations and organizations within the industry, as well as all other phases of the entertainment world, will be invited to participate with the Variety Clubs in honoring the veteran film showman. Plans for the events originated when O'Donnell learned that Paramount executives were contemplating a birthday dinner in his honor.

In a telegram sent earlier to the Paramount home office from Dallas, O'Donnell declared that Zukor's 80th birthday and his 50th anniversary in the film business constituted occasions deserving a celebration by the entire industry. Upon receiving the consent of Paramount executives, O'Donnell went to Pittsburgh and placed the idea before the Variety meeting.

"Adolph Zukor's life," O'Donnell said yesterday, "is an example of the American dream fulfilled. Coming to America from his native Hungary as a poor boy, he not only raised himself to a position of honor, but in doing so built an industry which has carried the ideals of his adopted country all over the world. His life is a saga of Americanism at its best and I can think of nothing more worthwhile for our industry than to hold up Mr. Zukor as a shining example of what this business stands for."

Other events in honor of Zukor will be held throughout the world during 1953.

awaiting the development in this electronic age." He warned that "we of the older generation, we who have seen our business grow from an idea to a fabulous institution, must not assume the role of spectators," adding that "we must place accent on youth, but we also must respect maturity."

Blumberg said he believed the Pioneers should enlarge its scope and assume an obligation to help induct new blood in the business. "Our maturity plus youth should be a combination to insure good health in our industry," he said.

The plaque presented to Blumberg as the year's pioneer of the industry read: "Motion Picture Pioneers bestows its highest honor upon Nate Blumberg, whose forty brilliant years in the motion picture business closely parallel the spectacular growth and tremendous achievements of the industry he has served so faithfully and well. For enriching our industry with his countless contributions as exhibitor, producer and distributor, for his sterling attributes exemplified by his devotion, his affection and his feeling for his fellow man, we acclaim him 'Pioneer of the Year'."

In telling about the work of the Foundation of the Motion Picture Pioneers during the past year, Depinet asked those Pioneers fortunate enough to be able to leave an estate to consider leaving some of the estate to the Foundation. He said the Foundation should be uppermost in their minds because "the help we give these unfortunate people is only a small token of repayment for their great service in building what we know as a successful motion picture industry."

Depinet traced Blumberg's rise from poster clerk to his present important position, with proof of his humble beginning supplied by Harold Fitzgerald, president of Fox-Wisconsin Theatres, who gave Blumberg his start in the film business in 1912.

Father Peyton, who achieved international fame through his Family Rosary Crusade via radio, TV, films and rallies, paid tribute to film industry members who joined forces with radio in bringing the messages of the Crusade's Family Theatre to the people of America and the world.

Other speakers included Pioneers president Jack Cohn, Danny Kaye and Jesse Block. Plaques "for constructive contributions in both thoughts and deeds" were presented to Harry J. Takiff, secretary-treasurer of the organization, and vice-president Marvin Kirsch. Special thanks for helping to make the "Jubilee Dinner" a success were given to John J. O'Connor, Maurice Bergman, Charles Alicoate, Gilbert Josephson, David Bader, Ray Gallagher, Leon Leonidoff, Henry A. Linet and Milton Livingston as members of the working committee.

A telephone recording of greetings from three Hollywood friends of Blumberg was played over a loud speaker. The salutes came from Jack Benny, Jimmy Durante and James Stewart. Harry Wismer read the names of 36 industry representatives, 20 of them members of the Pioneers, who died during the past year. Rabbi Ralph Silverstein of Temple Sinai and former Chaplain of the Cinema Lodge of B'nai B'rith, delivered the invocation and participated in requiem ceremonies for the departed members.

Jane Pickens Sings

Jane Pickens sang the national anthem and entertainment was supplied by Radio City Music Hall's Glee Club, the latter through the courtesy of G. S. Eyssell and Leon Leonidoff. A special feature was a "Salute by Look Magazine" to the Pioneers, featured in the Dec. 2 issue of the magazine, now on newsstands.

Dais guests at the dinner were Blumberg, Edward P. (Ted) Curtis, Depinet, Fitzgerald, Frank Folsom, William German, William Goetz, Leonard Goldenson, T. J. Hargrave, Jessel, Kaye, Louis Lurie, Judge Pecora, Father Peyton, Sam Pinanski, Milton R. Rackmil, J. Robert Rubin, Serge Semenenko, Rabbi Silverstein, George Skouras, Harry M. Warner, Robert R. Police confiscated $427 in "contributions" which were tossed into barrels placed around the bingo hall.

Programming Slant

to programming which hundreds of exhibitors have adopted relates to format and advertising.

"No longer is programming a mere matter of time-filling to these showmen," Morgan said. "They have taken cognizance of the great national magazines' profound influence on public entertainment values and tastes; that is to say, they have come to realize that just as such magazines maintain a proper balance of reading entertainment and enlightenment in the form of features, stories, serials, oddities, news commentaries and special departments and columns, so must the motion picture theatre balance its program instead of overweighing it with features at the expense of such entertainment as cartoons, newsreels and other short subjects.

"The exhibitors realize, too, that to deprive their patrons of the film counterparts of magazine oddities, sports items, news reports, etc., is to create in the customers' subconscious minds the feeling of having been cheated of part of that to which theatre patrons are entitled in return for the admission price paid. Thus, the content and format of the great national magazines now exercise an influence on motion picture theatre programming, according to numbers of independent exhibitors and circuit operators.

New Attitude

"This new exhibitor attitude is reflected in theatre newspaper advertisements as well as on the screen. In city after city which I visited I found advertisements for features also listing by title the short subjects on the programs. Less and less do we find merely the line: 'Also selected short subjects.' And because the intelligent exhibitor now knows his customers regard newsreels as a necessary part of the pattern of keeping well-informed in these times, he is demanding that his newsreels be new and not two or more weeks old—this despite the extent to which television can provide quick news service."

Morgan said, "I have discovered also two other important developments, (1) that motion picture advertising in general by exhibitors is showing a greater exercise of intelligence and reflecting strong insights into what sets the public's imagination afire, and, (2), that exhibitors in general are using press books more consistently than ever before."

Reviews

"Against All Flags"

(Universal-International)

MAUREEN O'HARA and ERROL FLYNN are as handsome a couple as ever got mixed up with pirates in bright color by Technicolor in this superior production that contains all the elements of a strong box-office success. Anthony Quinn is on hand as a swaggering pirate captain whose attentions are rejected by Miss O'Hara and who tries to do-in Flynn, a government spy trying to break up the captains of the Coast pirate syndicate.

There is a sure-fire mixture of attractive romance and vigorous swashbuckling in a taut screenplay by Aeneas MacKenzie and Joseph Hoffman, based on a MacKenzie story, that provides crisp and often humorous dialogue for the principals. The island backgrounds are impressive and George Sherman's direction has kept the proceedings moving at a neat pace.

Producer Howard Christie has made good use of shipboard settings where much of the action occurs. Flynn poses as an officer-deserter who escapes with seamen Phil Tully and John Alderson. They are accepted by the pirates after Flynn defeats a huge pirate in an exciting pike duel. Flynn becomes navigator on Quinn's ship. Quinn vanquishes a ship on the high seas that is the state ship of the Emperor of India and carries Alice Kelley, the emperor's daughter.

Flynn rescues Miss Kelley from the burning ship and later spikes the island's fortification guns. He then signals the waiting government ship to attack but is caught by Quinn and only saved from death by Miss O'Hara, who loves him. Flynn boards Quinn's ship as it is escaping by using Miss Kelley as a hostage. He kills Quinn in a duel, returns the ship to his superior officers, obtains a pardon for Miss O'Hara, and happily chooses her at the finale.

Flynn and Quinn are zestful derring-doers, Miss O'Hara registers strongly as the spitfire pirate, Miss Kelley is notable as the pretty princess, and Mildred Natwick supplies comedy as her governess. Others in the cast are Michael Ross, Harry Cording and Paul Newlan. This production has names, action, and spirit and should be a solid attraction.

Running time, 83½ minutes. General audience classification. For December release.

"The Desperate Search"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A SOLID cast featuring Howard Keel, Jane Greer, Patricia Medina, and Keenan Wynn is the main asset of this moderate entry that is dramatically concerned with several routine domestic problems but suffers from a rather incredible story. There is some attractive aerial footage since the protagonists are bush flyers, and some suspense is generated in the climactic search for survivors of a passenger plane crash.

The screenplay by Walter Doniger, based on a novel by Arthur Mayse, presents Keel as a pilot married to Miss Greer and the father of two children, Lee Aaker and Linda Lowell, by a previous marriage to domineering flyer, Miss Medina. Aaker and young Miss Lowell spend some time with their father and are on a plane slated to return them to their mother when it crashes in a mountainous area.

The children, sole survivors, try to await rescue and avoid being killed by a cougar while Keel is trying to convince the search party to follow his hunch and search the crash area. They do not do so and Miss Medina attempts to win back Keel but he remains true to Miss Greer and after a few days follows his hunch and flies to the area alone, locating the youngsters. After landing, he finds the children treed by the animal, which he clubs to death and all ends happily as Miss Medina decides to leave the children with him.

The children make a very appealing pair and perform capably, as do the stars. Others in the cast are Robert Burton, Michael Dugan, Elaine Stewart, Jonathan Cott, Jeff Richards ,and Dick Simmons. Production and direction are adequate. Matthew Rapf produced and Joseph Lewis directed. The production has several exploitation angles and some genuine appeal.

Running time, 73 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 16.

Mt. Hood Radio, TV Appeals FCC Ruling

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Mt. Hood Radio and Television Broadcasting Corp. attorneys have appealed to the full Federal Communications Commission from a hearing examiner's decision that a pending application for a Portland, Ore., television station could not be changed to include the liquidation of the holdings of Ralph E. Stolkin and affiliated investors.

Stolkin, Edward G. Burke, Jr., and Sherrill C. Corwin formerly held 43½ per cent of Mt. Hood stock, and Ted Gamble owns 43½ per cent of the stock. Several weeks ago Stolkin, Burke and Corwin sold their stock to more than 30 employes of radio station KOIN in Portland, which is controlled by Mt. Hood.

The FCC has been holding hearings on several competing applications for Portland TV channels and Mt. Hood is one of the applicants. Mt. Hood asked permission to change its applications to conform to the stock sale but examiner Elizabeth C. Smith refused the request, declaring it was too late in the hearing to permit the change.

Mt. Hood's appeal to the full Commission stated Miss Smith's ruling was inconsistent with the law and previous FCC regulations and decisions.

THE advertising profession lost a prospective account executive when Alec Guiness, British star, resigned from an ad agency to become an actor, according to a story in the current issue of Life. Twelve portraits of Alec are reproduced in a spread, each showing him in a different character part. The author of the article says it takes Alec up to three hours to make up for each character role and transform himself into his screen personality. It is rare when a British film shows a substantial profit in the U. S. market. However, Alec Guiness' last three pictures, "The Lavender Hill Mob," "The Man in the White Suit" and "The Promoter," all Universal-International releases, are expected to make a profit of over $2,000,000 in this country.

Cameron Shipp has written his impressions of Leslie Caron for the issue of Woman's Home Companion now on the newsstands. When reading Shipp's article you get the feeling that Miss Caron both astounded and bewildered the author. Although she is now a star at the M-G-M studio and married to the heir of the Hormel ham and meat packing fortune, she still practices the thrift taught to her by her French parents. Quoting Leslie on economy, she said, "I cook all the time. I have to. We do not have mooch money and we hate restaurants." M-G-M has scheduled her for stardom. Her next pictures will be "Glory Alley," "Lili" and "The Story of Three Loves."

John Wayne says "I don't act, I react," according to Don Allen in a story on this modest star which will appear in Sunday's American Weekly. This is John's quaint way of explaining his acting ability, although he has been voted the best box office star in the Motion Picture Herald-Fame poll for the past two years. He has been leading man for Colbert, Dietrich and Crawford. Their consensus of opinion of John was, "He's so dependable." Oddly enough, Wayne never worries about his love scenes. Nor does he try to be too adept. He thinks a little clumsiness is better suited to the characters he plays. On the "Jet Pilot" set his co-star, Janet Leigh, was ribbed about this. "The guy wasn't very expert in love interludes, was he?" "Maybe not," said Janet seriously, summing him up, "but he's very thorough." Wayne's current picture is "The Quiet Man," produced by John Ford for Republic Pictures.

Louis Pollock's profile on Deborah Kerr in December's Redbook gives the reader the impression that her life's story would make a rather good movie script. Deborah was born in Helensburgh, Scotland, went to London in her early 'teens to study the ballet and drama. During the war, while part of a theatrical troupe entertaining servicemen, she met an RAF fighter pilot whom she married after the European war had ended. Her most recent picture is M-G-M's "Prisoner of Zenda," now playing at the Capitol Theatre here.

Meet SAG Strike With Unity: Gold

A plea for unity among all television producers of filmed commercials was sounded here by Mel Gold, president of the National Television Film Council, in the face of the threatened Screen Actors Guild strike, set for Monday.

Addressing Wednesday's NTFC luncheon meeting here at the Hotel Warwick, Gold warned against any "private deals" when the strike goes into effect. The following TV production centers will be affected by the strike, the first such action taken since the inception of the SAG: New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and Detroit.

Gold called SAG wage proposals "unfair" in his review of the protracted negotiations held in the East. He said agreement could not be reached on the principles of hiring actors on a per spot basis rather than per day, the present practice; on the SAG's demand for the limitation of the use of the TV commercial, and the payment to actors for additional use. He said the SAG is seeking $70 per spot for the actor, in comparison to the current scale of $70 per day in which the actor can make a number of spots.

The following slates were nominated to head the NTFC next year: For president, Andrew Jaeger, Arch Mayers, Sydney Mayers; vice-president, David Savage, Sally Perle; secretary, David Bader, Bill Van Praag, Sally Perle; treasurer, William Reddick, Waldo Mayo; directors, Mel Gold, Bill Holland, Henry Brown, Gene Sharin, Sydney Mayers, Lou Feldman, Arch Mayers, Bader, Dr. Alfred Goldsmith, Jaeger, White, Reddick, Connie Lazar and Savage.

Paramount-Italian Co-production Deal Is Near Completion

Paramount's plan for co-production of features in Italy with Italian producers is reported to have materialized to the point where an announcement may be forthcoming shortly. While there has been no confirmation of the deal's completion, reports from Rome indicate that George Weltner, president of Paramount International, who has been in the Italian capital this week, has reached an agreement with the principals on the project.

Under the plan, Paramount will participate in the production of moderately budgeted pictures for European distribution by Paramount. However, the company will have an option on American distribution of those films which are believed suitable for the U. S. market.

Weltner was reported to have flown to London from Rome and will return to New York Monday, cutting short a European tour that was to have extended well into December. The Italian deal is said to have been the reason for his quick return to the home office.

past president, and Herman Levy, general counsel.

Starr said that TOA was pleased with the report that the Motion Picture Association of America may initiate meetings among Allied, TOA and distributors in order to determine Allied objections to the draft, which was turned down at its recent annual convention in Chicago. However, it was stressed that if the MPAA does not sponsor such a meeting, the TOA will do so on its own.

Starr said he did not believe that the difference between Allied and the distributors were irreconcilable. He asserted that Allied objected only to portions of the draft and that he was confident of a renewal of negotiations. TOA, too, has objections to the last draft, Starr said, but the association will not abandon hope for a formula because of the objections, which can be overcome. He warned that the industry must have some sort of an unmpire to settle disputes and unless the industry sets up a system, the government could step in and dictate one of its own. He described a government-sponsored system as having "disastrous" possibilities.

Exhibitors, Starr said, have not surrendered anything in drafting an arbitration plan, but the distributors surrendered "plenty" in their proposals. The agreement to arbitrate runs and damages was a definite concession, he said, in view of the fact that it was a "one way street," meaning that the exhibitor could bring an arbitration complaint but the distributor could not. Starr said he agreed with Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, in the latter's pursuit of a provision for arbitrating film rentals, also as a "one way street." But whether a workable plan could be conceived is questionable, he added.

Wolfson pointed out that if something desirable is left out of a final draft, an exhibitor can still go to court if he wishes. Arbitration is not compulsory for the exhibitor, but it is mandatory for the distributor if a theatre operator registers a complaint. Wolfson said that litigation was costly, but, on the other hand, whatever is subject to litigation also can be arbitrated. He said TOA wanted a vehicle that was reasonable without the necessity of "calling the cops." Wolfson said a great deal of the differences between exhibitor and distributor stemmed from a "lack of communication" between the two. He said distributors were not always unwilling to settle a dispute, but often were not aware of the situation.

Wolfson declared there was some danger in an attempt to fix film rentals. He said if the public should become aware of film rental control, it might seek to fix admission prices through government agencies.

Starr emphasized the point that TOA had not approved the distributors' arbitration plan. TOA, he said, would like some changes, but the association is willing and ready to sit down and discuss the changes at any time.

"If we don't have arbitration," Starr said, "the plight of the exhibitor will worsen."

"The Lawless Breed"

(Universal-International)

ROCK HUDSON achieves stardom by combining a solid, convincing portrayal with his rugged good looks in this uncommonly good Western that bears the brand of a smooth Raoul Walsh production.

There is plenty of quick-on-the-draw gunplay, exciting chases, and two thrilling horse races. Two competent and extremely attractive young actresses, Julia Adams and Mary Castle, turn in neat performances. Wrapped up in flawless color by Technicolor, for which color-consultant William Frietzsche rates special mention, this is a fine entertainment package that should result in strong box-office returns.

Director Walsh obtained credible performances from the entire cast and moved the story forward with a maximum of interest and suspense. The screenplay by Bernard Gordon, from a story by William Alland, details the constant moving which Hudson must do after killing a man in a poker fight in a setting after the Civil War in a state occupied by the Northern army. Hudson leaves his home because of a fanatically religious severe disciplinarian father and lives with his kindly uncle. Both roles are well played by John McIntire.

In self defense, Hudson eventually kills two of the brothers of the man he shot and he is wounded. Miss Castle, his sweetheart, is killed in one of his narrow escapes but he is aided by Miss Adams, a gambling saloon girl. The two live on his gambling earnings. Hudson marries Miss Adams but Texas Rangers capture him and he spends 16 years in jail. Pardoned, he returns to his family only to find his son a gun-slinging replica of his adolescence. Hudson is shot in the back in a bar argument involving his son but recovers and convinces his son living by the gun is not good, at the happy ending.

William Alland produced and used serviceable Western backgrounds effectively. This is a compact and skillfully-made entry that should account for itself well at the box-office.

Others in the cast are Hugh O'Brien, William Pullen, Glenn Strange, Lee Van Cleef, Michael Ansara, Race Gentry, Forrest Lewis, Bob Anderson and Stephen Chase.

Running time, 83 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

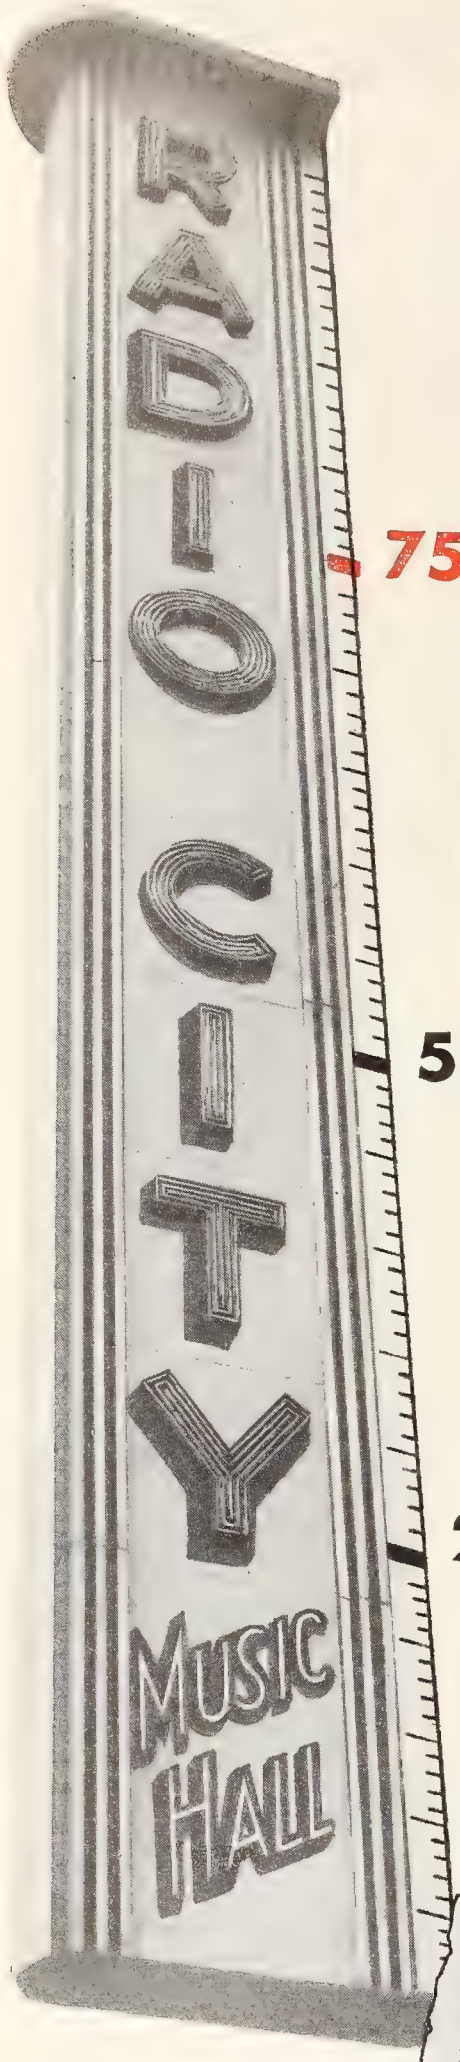
The A theatre was used for the test. It had 750 seats, made three changes weekly (Sunday-Monday-Tuesday, Wednesday-Thursday, and Friday-Saturday); the admission price was 40 cents and the theatre played only single features. There were no road-show engagements and the theatre played product from all major companies, except one.

During the preferred time for 1951 the exhibitor did an average gross business of $989 weekly, paid an average film rental of 35 per cent and spent $45 for advertising.

The agreement between the exhibitor and the distributor was that the exhibitor increase his film rental to 40 per cent on his last year's average of $989 gross for his preferred time change. The distributor would receive 25 per cent of any additional gross over $989.

The picture which the exhibitor selected grossed $1,960 which was $971 over the previous year's average of $989. But the theatre paid a film rental of 32 per cent instead of an average 35 per cent the year before. The distributor last year received $346 on the average of $989 gross, while on the $1,960 gross he received $638. The exhibitor spent $75 for advertising against the $45 average for last year. (On this particular picture the distributor was asking for a sliding scale of 40 per cent through 50 per cent).

The picture chosen by the distributor grossed $1,680, which was $691 over the previous year's average of $989, but the exhibitor paid a film rental of 33 per cent instead of the average 35 per cent paid the previous year. The distributor last year received $346 average on the $989 average gross, while on the $1,680 he received $568. The exhibitor spent $70.50 for advertising against last year's average of $45. (On this particular picture the distributor was asking for a sliding scale of 37½ per cent through 50 per cent).



Observations disclosed that as a result of the increased attendance during the preferred time change, an increase of 11.8 per cent was noted for the two following changes of the same week.

Colonel H. A. Cole, co-chairman of Texas COMPO and chairman of the board of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, commented on the plan as follows: "For practical purposes the program needs clarification and qualification. It can be enormously successful if the exhibitor selects only one picture from each film company and the distributor selects only one picture during a 12-month period. In my opinion the average exhibitor dissipates his efforts if he endeavors to sell more than 16 pictures a year. The superior and comprehensive selling of 16 pictures per year will carry the routine merchandising of the other pictues on the program to a substantial profit."

Rorex stated that, "for obvious reasons, due to the singular circumstances it would not be possible to disclose the distributor, the exhibitor and the two pictures involved."

Jarrico Decision Is Called Precedental

Hollywood, Nov. 27.—Superior Judge Orlando H. Rhodes' decision yesterday finding RKO Pictures justified in refusing screen credit to Paul Jarrico on "The Las Vegas Story," following the writer's discharge for refusing to answer official Un-American Activities Committee questions, is regarded here as importantly precedental with respect to the studio's right to allot or withhold screen credits.

As all talent guilds and some unions have provisions in their basic contracts with studios governing the manner in which screen credits may be apportioned, the Jarrico precedent apparently opens the way for the reconsideration of these agreements. It is believed, however, that studios would seek no more than a provision for the elimination of discredited names or similar limited modifications in existing pacts.

"Blackbeard, the Pirate"

(RKO Pictures)

ROBERT NEWTON chews up the scenery in this pirate film that contains more gore and violence than most vicious melodramas and which, because of its comic-book story and performances, will appeal mainly to the younger element.

It can be exploited for the leads, Linda Darnell and William Bendix, a plethora of fighting and swordplay, and much intrigue. Miss Darnell's beauty is breathtakingly displayed in lush color by Technicolor. The screenplay by Alan LeMay, from a story by DeVallon Scott, presents Newton as the famed pirate escaping destruction by the government, which is represented by former pirate Sir Henry Morgan, as played by Torin Thatcher. Newton has Miss Darnell, Morgan's intended bride, kidnapped as protection. Young surgeon Keith Andes is a government spy who is supposed to prove that Thatcher is still in league with buccaneers.

Miss Darnell has a fortune in jewels which is taken by Newton and buried by him on an island. Thatcher arrives for combat and Newton is defeated but escapes. Newton later captures a ship with Andes and Miss Darnell aboard. His crew mutinies, demanding treasure shares. Andes and Miss Darnell vow their mutual love and escape, while Newton is buried alive on shore at the gruesome fadeout.

Edmund Grainger produced economically. Raoul Walsh's direction emphasized the action and allowed for broad performances. Andes turns in the most solid acting job; others in the cast are Irene Ryan, Alan Mowbray, Richard Egan, Skelton Knaggs, Dick Wessel, Anthony Caruso, Jack Lambert, Noel Drayton and Pat Flaherty.

Running time, 99 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 25.

period marked the division of the company into separate production-distribution and exhibition units, with National Theatres, the new exhibition company, taking over the operation of the Roxy.

The $2,147,628 earnings of the corporation for the same period in 1951 amounted to 69 cents per share, after deduction of preferred dividends, on the then outstanding 2,769,396 shares. This compares with this year's $1.39 per share of common stock earned in the 39-week period, when there was no deduction for preferred dividends.

Total income for the 39 weeks in 1952 was $119,120,437, compared to $119,120,446 for the same period of 1951. The company reported that gross income from film rentals in the 1952 period totaled $67,149,364, against $66,050,817 in 1951, and that theatre receipts totaled $41,508,215 in the 1952 period, against $43,618,276 in 1951.

The change in accounting procedure was made, it was explained, in order to consolidate foreign operations for the same periods as domestic operations. Foreign operations had previously been consolidated five weeks in arrears of domestic, but improved airmail service now makes it feasible to state them for the same dates, it was stated.

It was also announced that a quarterly cash dividend of 25 cents per share on the outstanding common stock had been declared payable Dec. 24 to stockholders of record on Dec. 9.

Release Granted in Jackson Pk. Decree

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Some modifications of the Jackson Park decree have been granted by Federal Judge Michael Igoe, who handed down an order which read in part: "No doubt the separation of interests required by the Paramount decree will eventually be effective to eradicate all illegal concert between producer-distributors and the exhibitor branch of the industry."

The court granted some modification in regard to: Licensing of double features in first-run houses, granting the request in the Balaban and Katz petition to eliminate the necessity for getting specific permission from the Jackson Park for each first-run double feature booking (which permission had been granted tacitly on a blanket basis by the Jackson Park); clearance on pictures that are booked for two weeks and pulled prior to the end of the scheduled run because of poor business shall be 10 days, to give the film companies adequate time to get the picture into release for subsequent runs; and the burden of enforcement of the provision of the decree that forbids booking of double features "in such a manner as to deny product at a reasonable price to the Jackson Park" shall be shifted from Balaban and Katz to the distributors.

Requests were denied in the B. and K. petition to eliminate the two-week restriction on first-runs without specific exemption by the court on individual pictures, and to change the present distribution set-up to provide for "reasonable" clearance between first Chicago runs and first subsequent run. The present distribution set-up, which was continued, calls for immediate release of pictures to first outlying runs when they wind up their first Chicago runs.

The order also stated that "we think that completion of divestiture did not result in such immediate change in relationships between distributors and exhibitors as to require immediate relaxation of restraints in an industry whose members have been described (by the Supreme Court) as having 'shown a marked proclivity for unlawful conduct'."

Meanwhile, Judge Igoe granted a first-run of up to eight weeks for the RKO-Goldwyn release of "Hans Christian Andersen," with an admonition to RKO Radio Pictures, whose "Peter Pan" was granted an extended run but will not be played here until mid-February, that pictures must be played off within a reasonable time after they are granted extended running time.

Lists Tastes of Hometowners

Trueman T. Rembusch, Indiana exhibitor and one of the triumvirate which heads the Council of Motion Picture Organizations, has probed the motion picture tastes of hometown Americans in 32 states and his findings appear in the December issue of The American Magazine, on newsstands today, in an article written by Martin Bunn. Summarized, the masses expressed their cinematic likes and dislikes as follows:

We don't care much for present-day Academy Award pictures. The last five Oscar winners were superb productions, technically, but most of the folks who saw them found them comparatively dull.

We aren't even slightly impressed any more by super-productions costing $10,000,000.

We are losing our appetite for love. At one time when the word "love" was in the title, fans stormed the doors. Now that word is poison.

We want no messages in our entertainment.

Rembusch found that John Q. Public, in his search for relaxation and entertainment, is not serious-minded. Sometimes we pass up first-class entertainment because we suspect a preachy picture. "My Son John," an exposure of Communism, and "I Was a Communist for the FBI" were great shows, but they drew relatively slim audiences.

Most of us don't go for "arty" or "longhair" pictures. As a rule we don't like foreign productions.

We usually don't give a hoot, either, for professional critics' opinions of a picture.

We've had enough run-of-the-mine Westerns.

We are sharply divided on double bills.

We average people pick our favorite actors usually because they have warm, lovable personalities.

We don't object to "cheesecake" but we wonder why producers don't spend more time developing another Shirley Temple.

Most of us like drive-in theatres.

Here is the Rembusch list of stars for whom most family people, old and young, have "a real affection":

Percy Kilbride and Marjorie Main, Martin and Lewis, John Wayne, Abbott and Costello, Francis the Talking Mule, Alan Ladd, Esther Williams, June Allyson, James Stewart, Doris Day, the Bowery Boys, Susan Hayward.

CURRENT consideration being given to the convening of a conference on arbitration to discuss Allied States' objections to the distributors' proposed draft in order to determine what, if anything, might be done to meet those objections appears to be a start in the right direction.

The holding of such a meeting is a logical first step, if industry arbitration efforts are not to be summarily abandoned. And without Allied participation, the idea might just as well be abandoned. Even conceding the wholly questionable possibility that the Department of Justice and the Federal court would sanction an arbitration plan which did not have Allied approval, there remains the plain fact that without that large segment of independent exhibition participating, any industry arbitration system would be incomplete and very likely ineffectual.

The main inducement to distributors of an arbitration system is the promise it holds of reducing the number of anti-trust actions instigated by exhibitors. Without Allied participation that aim never could

Before the luncheon the guests will attend a private showing of "Hans Christian Andersen." In addition to Goldwyn and Mrs. Goldwyn, among those who are slated to be present are Governor Paul A. Dever, Governor-elect Christian A. Herter, Mayor John B. Hynes, Danish consul Earle W. Eames, Serge Semenenko, vice-president of the First National Bank of Boston, and others.

Cites Industry for Aid On Election Day Turnout

C. M. Vandeburg, executive director of the American Heritage Foundation, has cited the motion picture industry for the "monumental role" it played in aiding the recent record-breaking 60,000,000 election-day turnout.

He stated, "In an outstanding and generous way, the Motion Picture Association of America, its member companies and the exhibitors of the country turned their energies to the cause of good citizenship in this election. Without this signal devotion to better citizenship, the unprecedented vote could not have been achieved."

"Of the 51 national organizations and industry groups which worked with the American Heritage Foundation to get out the vote," he said, "none did more to convey the appeal to the public than the country's mass communications media. The unique power and impact of the theatre screen and its vast weekly attendance made the contribution of the motion picture industry all the more significant and valuable."

"The Motion Picture Association of America and its member companies, in cooperation with the exhibitors of the nation actually did more than urge movie-goers to register and vote," it was stated. "Through newsreels, trailers and specially produced short subjects, they acquainted the public with the dominant issues of the campaign and devoted two entire newsreel editions to each of the Presidential candidates."

From Aug. 4 to election day, the film industry's five newsreels ran more than 200 sequences highlighting the candidates and their views as they toured the nation. Trailers on every newsreel issued for three months prior to the election exhorted movie-goes to register and vote. Motion picture companies and hundreds of theatres supplemented their efforts by inserting register-and-vote appeals in their newspaper ads. A few enthusiastic exhibitors even went so far as to provide free admissions to people in their community who voted, it was explained.

During the pre-election months, film companies also made available to civic and community organizations taking part in the register-and-vote campaign specially prepared film shorts and trailers that emphasized the importance of voting.

Big RCA Screen to Bow at RKO Here

The world premiere of Syncro-Screen, described as the largest screen ever made by RCA, will be held here at the RKO 58th Street Theatre on Friday.

Projected on the big screen, which is three times the size of regular one at the theatre, will be the dual attraction "Way of a Gaucho" and "Lure of the Wilderness." Before its premiere, RKO has scheduled a series of newspaper advertisements in local papers heralding the event.

There will be a demonstration on Wednesday for the trade press and New York newspaper film editors.

be importantly realized. Moreover, without Allied, the workings of the system could be hamstrung by refusals of many independent exhibitors to intervene in or respond to arbitration complaints involving competitive situations of which they are a part. Clearance and run, bidding and other complaints would be particularly difficult to resolve if they involved Allied members who ignored them. Arbitration awards made without the intervention of Allied members who were affected by them well might lead to more, not less, litigation.

Therefore, if it is possible to bring Allied back into the fold, and the door does not appear to be forever closed, a conference to determine when and how that might be accomplished, would be eminently worth the time and effort it requires.

The Allied board at its Chicago meeting emphasized that neither it nor the organization as a whole is "opposed to arbitration and yields to no one in their devotion to that concept."

In other words, the present opposition within Allied is directed only at the distributors' draft as it now stands, and not to arbitration per se.

What, then, must be done to remove that opposition?

First, of all, Allied has said, an arbitration plan which it can approve must promise "direct, immediate and substantial benefit to exhibitors." If Allied can be convinced that an industry arbitration plan meets that basic requirement and does not contain provisions "which are not deemed to be in the exhibitors' interest," it might then be determined whether Allied would not be willing to waive its only other requisite—the arbitration of film rentals.

These are matters requiring a conference of the arbitration principals. If they can be resolved, and that does not seem beyond the realm of possibility, it could well be that a better arbitration plan than that now proposed, could result. If so, Allied's stand might become overnight a valuable contribution to the industry at large, rather than the negative obstruction which some now hold it to be.

SAG TV Commercial Strike on Today

The Screen Actors Guild's strike against producers of filmed television commercials is scheduled to begin nationally today.

On the eve of the strike, an SAG representative in the East reported that the Guild has been pledged full cooperation from the "Four A's," Members of Actors Equity and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists have been alerted by mail about the strike. The SAG spokesman added that TV commercial producers have been warned that the hiring of non-union talent would lead to the advertised product being put on the "unfair list" of the American Federation of Labor.

The strike will not affect commercial telecasts which already have been produced. Such telecasts will continue to be seen on home television sets.

"Come Back, Little Sheba"

(Hal B. Wallis-Paramount) Hollywood, Nov. 30

THIS distinguished production by Hal B. Wallis of a stage play by William Inge which ran up a big Broadway success, both commercial and artistic, is exceptional in so many ways, as a motion picture theatre attraction, as to present problems as well as promise of profit to the practical showman.

Foremost on the plus side of the picture's prospects is the brilliant performance of Shirley Booth in the principal role, a performance already widely described, quite properly, as an achievement of Academy Award calibre.

At the other pole of the property, concerning the considerations of a practical showman, is the drunk scene in which the alcoholic of the story shouts accusations at his wife in which the word "slut," unfamiliar on the screen and in most homes, is reiterated as a keynote.

High in the scale of assets is the presence of Burt Lancaster, the strongest name in the cast and proving here that he's as fine an actor as he is an athlete.

Less likely to startle cinema customers than the loose use of the word "slut" are candid references by husband and wife to the unrestrained nature of their courtship, the resultant necessity of their wedding, and the casual candor of dialogue from beginning to the end of the picture—but likely enough.

Strictly plus values are Richard Jaeckel and Terry Moore, strikingly proficient young performers who make their portrayals of sex-happy college students realistic beyond usual screen requirements.

Excellent direction by Daniel Mann, and fine supporting performances by Philip Ober, Lisa Golm and Walter Kelley have much to do with making the film a rounded, convincing drama.

In common with most other pictures made from stage plays, this one is more mental than physical, more concerned with emotions than with motion, and with character study, delineation, and dramatic observation. Miss Booth plays the listless but loving wife of Lancaster, a chiropractor whom Alcoholics Anonymous has kept sober for a year before the picture opens, and the issues between them are too much for their mentalities to cope with. By the end of the picture they appear to have got hold of their hopes again, as has happened often during their 20 years together. The how, the why and so forth are what the picture's about.

The picture is, quite completely, a filming of a stage play, rather than a motion picture. There is no apparent intent to make it seem other than that. In view of the success of the play, that doubtless is what it should be.

The production may be offered to the public, if an exhibitor choose to do so, as evidence that the screen is becoming adult, as the saying goes. If it becomes any more adult than "Come Back, Little Sheba" we're going to have a new kind of motion picture business to deal with, and it won't be for the kiddies, nor for the family audience, but rather for the patronage that supports the Broadway stage.

"Come Back, Little Sheba" was produced originally by the Theatre Guild, probably not this well.

Running time, 90 minutes. Adult audience classification. For February release.

Teleconference, he added, was organized about six months ago by a group of men with long service in the public relations field. The officers were listed as follows: Stanley Baar, president; Thomas Casey, vice-president; Feinsot, vice-president; Gerald Dickler, secretary and general counsel.

one set by Theatre Network Television, which has booked the national sales convention of Lees Carpets on Dec. 8 in 15 cities from coast-to-coast.

Among the circuits taking the Bendix telecast are United Paramount Theatres affiliates, Warner Brothers, Loew's, RKO Theatres and Fabian Theatres.

Commenting on the deal, Robert H. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer of UPT, said that the acceptance of closed circuit television by an industry leader such as Bendix was an indication that its commercial use would be accelerated. "We have always felt that the real field for closed circuit television is in its use by industry, and we welcome this opportunity to test in every key market area in the United States the public's reaction to such a presentation."

Judson S. Sayre, Avco vice-president and general manager of Bendix, said, "We feel that closed circuit telecasting possesses unlimited opportunities for presenting to the best possible advantage this great new appliance our dealers will have on their floors in a very few weeks." He added that while the cost of the telecast would be comparable to regional dealer meetings, a great saving would be effected in the hours and energy spent by executives to travel to individual regional meetings.

Bendix and Teleconference officials have been working for weeks to clear theatres and lines. Teleconference said the cities which will be used include: Albany, Atlanta, Buffalo, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Detroit, New York, Pittsburgh, Providence, Richmond, Toledo, Jacksonville, Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Des Moines, St. Louis, Dallas, Birmingham, Houston, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Kansas City, Memphis, New Orleans, Omaha, Gary, Indianapolis, Louisville, Denver, Phoenix, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland.

played cautious coolness as well as confusion in trying to evaluate the process and the picture in a single review.

Marco Wolff, co-owner of the Hollywood Paramount, said, "Arch Oboler's 'Bwana Devil' in Natural Vision 3-dimension is a big step forward in motion picture production, and the public knows it, as is evidenced by the all-time record for an opening day having been broken by more than $2,000."

Jerry Zigmond, West Coast division manager of UPT, operating the downtown Paramount, said, "proof that the public is movie theatre conscious cannot be better shown than by the sensational business done. Opening business at the downtown Paramount broke every record of any kind, including stage shows with top personalities. Beyond the great business the picture is doing, the industry as a whole will benefit from this 3-dimension film, with the public again looking at theatres as their number one entertainment source."

Raymond Willey, assistant general manager of Interstate Theatres, said, "I flew in from Dallas to see Natural Vision in action in 'Bwanna Devil.' As a result I am determined to make this picture our big Christmas attraction in Dallas and Fort Worth and, if they'll give me enough prints, in San Antonio and Houston. People are going to want to see 3-dimension, and theatres will have a long, big-money run after the smash openings."

Holland Smith, managing director of Saenger Theatres, New Orleans, said, "the smart exhibitor is looking for box office. Natural Vision's 3-dimension process, as shown by Oboler's 'Bwana Devil,' is going to be the biggest thing since sound and color. I'm glad I came to California to see exactly how big this was going to be. I'll book every picture made in Natural Vision."

Myer J. Schine, president of the Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., said, "I enjoyed the picture. I know glasses cannot be avoided, and so we exhibitors and public will live with them. There is no question but that Natural Vision will mean a great deal to the box office. I like the whole idea very much and know it will mean much to the industry."

Both Natural Vision equipment and "Bwana Devil," the first feature produced for exhibition in New York, are being booked nationally by George J. Schaefer, New York.

"Angel Face"

(RKO Pictures)

THE hatred for and subsequent murder of a stepmother by a pretty young girl who adores her father serves as the mainspring of this interesting drama that unfolds too slowly but builds towards a suspensful climax. A competent cast includes such name performers as Robert Mitchum, Jean Simmons, Mona Freeman and Herbert Marshall, but the idea of an innocent bystander becoming romantically involved and hence blamed with the murderess is not tautly enough developed.

Otto Breminger produced with a maximum of economy and directed it with emphasis on the evolving dramatic suspense. The screenplay by Frank Nugent and Oscar Millard, from a Chester Erskine story, presents Mitchum as an ambulance driver who meets Miss Simmons on an emergency call to her mountain-top mansion when her stepmother, Barbara O'Neil, is overcome by a mysteriously opened gas jet. Mitchum is a former racing car driver and desires to open a garage for such cars. He quits his job to become Miss Simmons' chauffeur and breaks off with his girl friend, Miss Freeman.

Mitchum refuses to run away with Miss Simmons and the next day Miss O'Neil and Herbert Marshall, her husband who had requested a ride to town, go over a cliff when the car acts in reverse. Evidence implicates Mitchum so legal-eagle Leon Ames convinces him to marry Miss Simmons, and beat the murder charge. The latter half of the film concerning the trial is quite effective; Ames is especially convincing as the shrewd lawyer. They are acquitted but Mitchum, although rejected by Miss Freeman, refuses to remain with Miss Simmons. He plans a Mexican divorce but Miss Simmons, who had confessed her guilt to Ames to no avail, drives Mitchum and herself over the cliff.

This has names and a theme to exploit and should gather fair returns at the boxoffice.

Others in the cast are Kenneth Tobey, Raymond Greenleaf, Griff Barnett, Robert Gist, Morgan Farley and Jim Backus.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 23.

WALTER PASHKIN

"Cattle Town"

(Warner Brothers)

A HUSKY Western that develops along formula lines but contains an ample amount of fighting and some vocalizing by Dennis Morgan, this picture stacks up fairly well for its type. An occasional note of fictionalized history is mixed in, concerning the bickerings and battles between ranch owners and squatters in Texas shortly after the Civil War.

The screenplay by Tom Blackburn has Morgan sent into the troubled territory by a Texas governor to bring about peace. His efforts are opposed by rancher Ray Teal who plans to fleece the squatters of their cattle in addition to treating them inhumanly.

There is excitement and intrigue and the usual rounds of gunplay and hard riding building up to a climactic cattle stampede which causes the death of Teal and gives Morgan a chance to rescue Amanda Blake. Miss Blake and Rita Moreno vie for Morgan's affection in the romantic angle but at the fadeout it is Miss Blake who Morgan chooses, and they ride off together happily.

Others in the cast are Philip Carey, Paul Picerni, Jay Novello, George O'Hanlon, Bob Wilke, Sheb Wooley, Charles Meredith, Merv Griffin, A. Guy Teague, Boyd Morgan and Jack Kenney. Bryan Foy produced and Noel Smith directed.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 6.

Chesapeake Files for 'Alice' Assignment

Chesapeake Industries has filed a suit in Federal Court here against Lou Bunin Productions and Souvaine Selective Pictures, seeking an assignment on "Alice in Wonderland," which Bunin produced in France in 1949. Chesapeake claims there is a balance due of $24,626 on a promissory note for $28,000.

The plaintiff asked the court to allow full rights to the picture to anybody who buys the foreclosed mortgage. "Alice" originally was released by Film Classics and was then taken over by Souvaine. Chesapeake also has pending a $27,000 suit against Bunin for prints and laboratory work on the picture.

Florida Firm Files Trust Suit vs. 'U'

MIAMI, Nov. 30.—A $255,000 triple-damage anti-trust suit has been filed in Federal court here by a Miami Beach firm against Universal and its subsidiary, United World Films. The suit, brought by Allied Motion Pictures and its officers individually, charges the defendants with monopolistic practices in failing to supply the plaintiffs with products.

Drive-in Membership Plan Set in Mich.

DETROIT, Nov. 30.—The executive committee of Allied Theatres of Michigan has approved a new plan of membership for drive-ins.

The recent Allied state convention showed that drive-ins have much in common with other theatres in regard to film buying, arbitration, film delivery costs, free shows, the Federal admissions tax and the constant threat of a state amusement tax.

The major obstacle which prevented drive-in owners from joining Allied was the high rate of dues.

A plan worked out by the executive committee consists of a seasonal membership for all drive-ins, regardless of capacity, with free membership each year for the months of January, February, March, April, October, November and December. The exhibitors would pay only for five months membership. Drive-ins would pay two cents a month per speaker for the five months, or a total of 10 cents per speaker for the period.

Pierce Parkurst, of Lansing, drive-in chairman, and Joe D. Kitchen, drive-in secretary, outlined the membership plan in a bulletin to exhibitors in Michigan.

Under the new program, all due to Allied would "pay once and for all" all assessments which would otherwise be solicited from exhibitors by salesmen or directly from the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

The plan, it was said, will provide sufficient income to permit a budget to handle all legislative problems and tax issues, both state and national. Allied would represent exhibitors in all financial payments in the industry.

If the Motion Picture Association of America decides to initiate the sessions, a date and place probably will not be set until after the return of MPAA president Eric Johnston from his current South American tour. Johnston is due back early this month, but the MPAA office here did not know the exact date at the weekend. On the other hand, the distributors' arbitration committee may set a schedule this week for future roundtable discussions among the film companies, Allied and the Theatre Owners of America.

with the write-off on color films running as high as six per cent behind the amortization of black-and-white pictures. Both categories, according to a report to the Securities and Exchange Commission, have a complete write-off period of 104 weeks. However, the black-and-white features, under the system instituted and reflected in the company's last annual report, are amortized at a greater percentage rate than tinted films. The percentage varies from six per cent for the first 13 weeks in release to one per cent at the 91st week.

CURRENT consideration being given to the convening of a conference on arbitration to discuss Allied States' objections to the distributors' proposed draft in order to determine what, if anything, might be done to meet those objections appears to be a start in the right direction.

The holding of such a meeting is a logical first step, if industry arbitration efforts are not to be summarily abandoned. And without Allied participation, the idea might just as well be abandoned. Even conceding the wholly questionable possibility that the Department of Justice and the Federal court would sanction an arbitration plan which did not have Allied approval, there remains the plain fact that without that large segment of independent exhibition participating, any industry arbitration system would be incomplete and very likely ineffectual.

The main inducement to distributors of an arbitration system is the promise it holds of reducing the number of anti-trust actions instigated by exhibitors. Without Allied participation that aim never could

Cites Industry for Aid On Election Day Turnout

C. M. Vandeburg, executive director of the American Heritage Foundation, has cited the motion picture industry for the "monumental role" it played in aiding the recent record-breaking 60,000,000 election-day turnout.

He stated, "In an outstanding and generous way, the Motion Picture Association of America, its member companies and the exhibitors of the country turned their energies to the cause of good citizenship in this election. Without this signal devotion to better citizenship, the unprecedented vote could not have been achieved."

"Of the 51 national organizations and industry groups which worked with the American Heritage Foundation to get out the vote," he said, "none did more to convey the appeal to the public than the country's mass communications media. The unique power and impact of the theatre screen and its vast weekly attendance made the contribution of the motion picture industry all the more significant and valuable."

"The Motion Picture Association of America and its member companies, in cooperation with the exhibitors of the nation actually did more than urge movie-goers to register and vote," it was stated. "Through newsreels, trailers and specially produced short subjects, they acquainted the public with the dominant issues of the campaign and devoted two entire newsreel editions to each of the Presidential candidates."

From Aug. 4 to election day, the film industry's five newsreels ran more than 200 sequences highlighting the candidates and their views as they toured the nation. Trailers on every newsreel issued for three months prior to the election exhorted movie-goes to register and vote. Motion picture companies and hundreds of theatres supplemented their efforts by inserting register-and-vote appeals in their newspaper ads. A few enthusiastic exhibitors even went so far as to provide free admissions to people in their community who voted, it was explained.

During the pre-election months, film companies also made available to civic and community organizations taking part in the register-and-vote campaign specially prepared film shorts and trailers that emphasized the importance of voting.

Big RCA Screen to Bow at RKO Here

There will be a demonstration on Wednesday for the trade press and New York newspaper film editors.

be importantly realized. Moreover, without Allied, the workings of the system could be hamstrung by refusals of many independent exhibitors to intervene in or respond to arbitration complaints involving competitive situations of which they are a part. Clearance and run, bidding and other complaints would be particularly difficult to resolve if they involved Allied members who ignored them. Arbitration awards made without the intervention of Allied members who were affected by them well might lead to more, not less, litigation.

Therefore, if it is possible to bring Allied back into the fold, and the door does not appear to be forever closed, a conference to determine when and how that might be accomplished, would be eminently worth the time and effort it requires.

The Allied board at its Chicago meeting emphasized that neither it nor the organization as a whole is "opposed to arbitration and yields to no one in their devotion to that concept."

In other words, the present opposition within Allied is directed only at the distributors' draft as it now stands, and not to arbitration per se.

What, then, must be done to remove that opposition?

First, of all, Allied has said, an arbitration plan which it can approve must promise "direct, immediate and substantial benefit to exhibitors." If Allied can be convinced that an industry arbitration plan meets that basic requirement and does not contain provisions "which are not deemed to be in the exhibitors' interest," it might then be determined whether Allied would not be willing to waive its only other requisite—the arbitration of film rentals.

These are matters requiring a conference of the arbitration principals. If they can be resolved, and that does not seem beyond the realm of possibility, it could well be that a better arbitration plan than that now proposed, could result. If so, Allied's stand might become overnight a valuable contribution to the industry at large, rather than the negative obstruction which some now hold it to be.

SAG TV Commercial Strike on Today

The Screen Actors Guild's strike against producers of filmed television commercials is scheduled to begin nationally today.

On the eve of the strike, an SAG representative in the East reported that the Guild has been pledged full cooperation from the "Four A's," Members of Actors Equity and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists have been alerted by mail about the strike. The SAG spokesman added that TV commercial producers have been warned that the hiring of non-union talent would lead to the advertised product being put on the "unfair list" of the American Federation of Labor.

The strike will not affect commercial telecasts which already have been produced. Such telecasts will continue to be seen on home television sets.

"Come Back, Little Sheba"

(Hal B. Wallis-Paramount) Hollywood, Nov. 30

THIS distinguished production by Hal B. Wallis of a stage play by William Inge which ran up a big Broadway success, both commercial and artistic, is exceptional in so many ways, as a motion picture theatre attraction, as to present problems as well as promise of profit to the practical showman.

Foremost on the plus side of the picture's prospects is the brilliant performance of Shirley Booth in the principal role, a performance already widely described, quite properly, as an achievement of Academy Award calibre.

At the other pole of the property, concerning the considerations of a practical showman, is the drunk scene in which the alcoholic of the story shouts accusations at his wife in which the word "slut," unfamiliar on the screen and in most homes, is reiterated as a keynote.

High in the scale of assets is the presence of Burt Lancaster, the strongest name in the cast and proving here that he's as fine an actor as he is an athlete.

Less likely to startle cinema customers than the loose use of the word "slut" are candid references by husband and wife to the unrestrained nature of their courtship, the resultant necessity of their wedding, and the casual candor of dialogue from beginning to the end of the picture—but likely enough.

Strictly plus values are Richard Jaeckel and Terry Moore, strikingly proficient young performers who make their portrayals of sex-happy college students realistic beyond usual screen requirements.

Excellent direction by Daniel Mann, and fine supporting performances by Philip Ober, Lisa Golm and Walter Kelley have much to do with making the film a rounded, convincing drama.

In common with most other pictures made from stage plays, this one is more mental than physical, more concerned with emotions than with motion, and with character study, delineation, and dramatic observation. Miss Booth plays the listless but loving wife of Lancaster, a chiropractor whom Alcoholics Anonymous has kept sober for a year before the picture opens, and the issues between them are too much for their mentalities to cope with. By the end of the picture they appear to have got hold of their hopes again, as has happened often during their 20 years together. The how, the why and so forth are what the picture's about.

The picture is, quite completely, a filming of a stage play, rather than a motion picture. There is no apparent intent to make it seem other than that. In view of the success of the play, that doubtless is what it should be.

The production may be offered to the public, if an exhibitor choose to do so, as evidence that the screen is becoming adult, as the saying goes. If it becomes any more adult than "Come Back, Little Sheba" we're going to have a new kind of motion picture business to deal with, and it won't be for the kiddies, nor for the family audience, but rather for the patronage that supports the Broadway stage.

"Come Back, Little Sheba" was produced originally by the Theatre Guild, probably not this well.

Running time, 90 minutes. Adult audience classification. For February release.

He added, however, that the firm would not limit itself. The future will tell how the organization expands its services, he indicated. Asked if Teleconference was in competition with Theatre Network Television, Feinsot said "we are already competing with them."

Teleconference, he added, was organized about six months ago by a group of men with long service in the public relations field. The officers were listed as follows: Stanley Baar, president; Thomas Casey, vice-president; Feinsot, vice-president; Gerald Dickler, secretary and general counsel.

one set by Theatre Network Television, which has booked the national sales convention of Lees Carpets on Dec. 8 in 15 cities from coast-to-coast.

Among the circuits taking the Bendix telecast are United Paramount Theatres affiliates, Warner Brothers, Loew's, RKO Theatres and Fabian Theatres.

Commenting on the deal, Robert H. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer of UPT, said that the acceptance of closed circuit television by an industry leader such as Bendix was an indication that its commercial use would be accelerated. "We have always felt that the real field for closed circuit television is in its use by industry, and we welcome this opportunity to test in every key market area in the United States the public's reaction to such a presentation."

Judson S. Sayre, Avco vice-president and general manager of Bendix, said, "We feel that closed circuit telecasting possesses unlimited opportunities for presenting to the best possible advantage this great new appliance our dealers will have on their floors in a very few weeks." He added that while the cost of the telecast would be comparable to regional dealer meetings, a great saving would be effected in the hours and energy spent by executives to travel to individual regional meetings.

Bendix and Teleconference officials have been working for weeks to clear theatres and lines. Teleconference said the cities which will be used include: Albany, Atlanta, Buffalo, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Detroit, New York, Pittsburgh, Providence, Richmond, Toledo, Jacksonville, Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Des Moines, St. Louis, Dallas, Birmingham, Houston, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Kansas City, Memphis, New Orleans, Omaha, Gary, Indianapolis, Louisville, Denver, Phoenix, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland.

FOR THE FIRST TIME since the creation of the Tesma and Teda organizations, a joint trade show convention was held in conjunction with theatre owners, and the value of that policy was proved at Chicago. And a number of products were exhibited at a Tesma show for the first time, among them White Comb vending equipment, the Miracle Whirl Whip ride for drive-in playgrounds, Oxford electric in-car speakers, Bally's space ship, Prince Castle's new multimixer, ABC's French Boy's popcorn warmer and Tripe-S changeable letters, and Master-Kraft refreshment stands.

played cautious coolness as well as confusion in trying to evaluate the process and the picture in a single review.

Marco Wolff, co-owner of the Hollywood Paramount, said, "Arch Oboler's 'Bwana Devil' in Natural Vision 3-dimension is a big step forward in motion picture production, and the public knows it, as is evidenced by the all-time record for an opening day having been broken by more than $2,000."

Jerry Zigmond, West Coast division manager of UPT, operating the downtown Paramount, said, "proof that the public is movie theatre conscious cannot be better shown than by the sensational business done. Opening business at the downtown Paramount broke every record of any kind, including stage shows with top personalities. Beyond the great business the picture is doing, the industry as a whole will benefit from this 3-dimension film, with the public again looking at theatres as their number one entertainment source."

Raymond Willey, assistant general manager of Interstate Theatres, said, "I flew in from Dallas to see Natural Vision in action in 'Bwanna Devil.' As a result I am determined to make this picture our big Christmas attraction in Dallas and Fort Worth and, if they'll give me enough prints, in San Antonio and Houston. People are going to want to see 3-dimension, and theatres will have a long, big-money run after the smash openings."

Holland Smith, managing director of Saenger Theatres, New Orleans, said, "the smart exhibitor is looking for box office. Natural Vision's 3-dimension process, as shown by Oboler's 'Bwana Devil,' is going to be the biggest thing since sound and color. I'm glad I came to California to see exactly how big this was going to be. I'll book every picture made in Natural Vision."

Myer J. Schine, president of the Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., said, "I enjoyed the picture. I know glasses cannot be avoided, and so we exhibitors and public will live with them. There is no question but that Natural Vision will mean a great deal to the box office. I like the whole idea very much and know it will mean much to the industry."

Both Natural Vision equipment and "Bwana Devil," the first feature produced for exhibition in New York, are being booked nationally by George J. Schaefer, New York.

Robert Stack, Barbara Britton and Nigel Bruce are principals in the Oboler production, which will be reviewed in an early issue.

"Angel Face"

THE hatred for and subsequent murder of a stepmother by a pretty young girl who adores her father serves as the mainspring of this interesting drama that unfolds too slowly but builds towards a suspensful climax. A competent cast includes such name performers as Robert Mitchum, Jean Simmons, Mona Freeman and Herbert Marshall, but the idea of an innocent bystander becoming romantically involved and hence blamed with the murderess is not tautly enough developed.

Otto Breminger produced with a maximum of economy and directed it with emphasis on the evolving dramatic suspense. The screenplay by Frank Nugent and Oscar Millard, from a Chester Erskine story, presents Mitchum as an ambulance driver who meets Miss Simmons on an emergency call to her mountain-top mansion when her stepmother, Barbara O'Neil, is overcome by a mysteriously opened gas jet. Mitchum is a former racing car driver and desires to open a garage for such cars. He quits his job to become Miss Simmons' chauffeur and breaks off with his girl friend, Miss Freeman.

Mitchum refuses to run away with Miss Simmons and the next day Miss O'Neil and Herbert Marshall, her husband who had requested a ride to town, go over a cliff when the car acts in reverse. Evidence implicates Mitchum so legal-eagle Leon Ames convinces him to marry Miss Simmons, and beat the murder charge. The latter half of the film concerning the trial is quite effective; Ames is especially convincing as the shrewd lawyer. They are acquitted but Mitchum, although rejected by Miss Freeman, refuses to remain with Miss Simmons. He plans a Mexican divorce but Miss Simmons, who had confessed her guilt to Ames to no avail, drives Mitchum and herself over the cliff.

This has names and a theme to exploit and should gather fair returns at the boxoffice.

Others in the cast are Kenneth Tobey, Raymond Greenleaf, Griff Barnett, Robert Gist, Morgan Farley and Jim Backus.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 23.

"Cattle Town"

(Warner Brothers)

A HUSKY Western that develops along formula lines but contains an ample amount of fighting and some vocalizing by Dennis Morgan, this picture stacks up fairly well for its type. An occasional note of fictionalized history is mixed in, concerning the bickerings and battles between ranch owners and squatters in Texas shortly after the Civil War.

The screenplay by Tom Blackburn has Morgan sent into the troubled territory by a Texas governor to bring about peace. His efforts are opposed by rancher Ray Teal who plans to fleece the squatters of their cattle in addition to treating them inhumanly.

There is excitement and intrigue and the usual rounds of gunplay and hard riding building up to a climactic cattle stampede which causes the death of Teal and gives Morgan a chance to rescue Amanda Blake. Miss Blake and Rita Moreno vie for Morgan's affection in the romantic angle but at the fadeout it is Miss Blake who Morgan chooses, and they ride off together happily.

Others in the cast are Philip Carey, Paul Picerni, Jay Novello, George O'Hanlon, Bob Wilke, Sheb Wooley, Charles Meredith, Merv Griffin, A. Guy Teague, Boyd Morgan and Jack Kenney. Bryan Foy produced and Noel Smith directed.

Running time, 71 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 6.

Chesapeake Files for 'Alice' Assignment

Chesapeake Industries has filed a suit in Federal Court here against Lou Bunin Productions and Souvaine Selective Pictures, seeking an assignment on "Alice in Wonderland," which Bunin produced in France in 1949. Chesapeake claims there is a balance due of $24,626 on a promissory note for $28,000.

The plaintiff asked the court to allow full rights to the picture to anybody who buys the foreclosed mortgage. "Alice" originally was released by Film Classics and was then taken over by Souvaine. Chesapeake also has pending a $27,000 suit against Bunin for prints and laboratory work on the picture.

'Andersen' Heading For Records Here

The opening week's business of Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion and Paris theatres here will shatter the box-office records at both houses, according to the managements.

A first week gross of $60,000 is predicted for the Criterion, while $24,000 is expected at the 572-seat Paris, which has added some extra shows.

Florida Firm Files Trust Suit vs. 'U'

MIAMI, Nov. 30.—A $255,000 triple-damage anti-trust suit has been filed in Federal court here by a Miami Beach firm against Universal and its subsidiary, United World Films. The suit, brought by Allied Motion Pictures and its officers individually, charges the defendants with monopolistic practices in failing to supply the plaintiffs with products.

Drive-in Membership Plan Set in Mich.

DETROIT, Nov. 30.—The executive committee of Allied Theatres of Michigan has approved a new plan of membership for drive-ins.

The recent Allied state convention showed that drive-ins have much in common with other theatres in regard to film buying, arbitration, film delivery costs, free shows, the Federal admissions tax and the constant threat of a state amusement tax.

The major obstacle which prevented drive-in owners from joining Allied was the high rate of dues.

A plan worked out by the executive committee consists of a seasonal membership for all drive-ins, regardless of capacity, with free membership each year for the months of January, February, March, April, October, November and December. The exhibitors would pay only for five months membership. Drive-ins would pay two cents a month per speaker for the five months, or a total of 10 cents per speaker for the period.

Pierce Parkurst, of Lansing, drive-in chairman, and Joe D. Kitchen, drive-in secretary, outlined the membership plan in a bulletin to exhibitors in Michigan.

Under the new program, all due to Allied would "pay once and for all" all assessments which would otherwise be solicited from exhibitors by salesmen or directly from the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

The plan, it was said, will provide sufficient income to permit a budget to handle all legislative problems and tax issues, both state and national. Allied would represent exhibitors in all financial payments in the industry.

scheduled as yet. If the Motion Picture Association of America decides to initiate the sessions, a date and place probably will not be set until after the return of MPAA president Eric Johnston from his current South American tour. Johnston is due back early this month, but the MPAA office here did not know the exact date at the weekend. On the other hand, the distributors' arbitration committee may set a schedule this week for future roundtable discussions among the film companies, Allied and the Theatre Owners of America.

with the write-off on color films running as high as six per cent behind the amortization of black-and-white pictures. Both categories, according to a report to the Securities and Exchange Commission, have a complete write-off period of 104 weeks. However, the black-and-white features, under the system instituted and reflected in the company's last annual report, are amortized at a greater percentage rate than tinted films. The percentage varies from six per cent for the first 13 weeks in release to one per cent at the 91st week.

UPT's Bendix Telecast Tops Other Circuits

Company Will Have 17 Houses in Dealer Show

Seventeen affiliates of United Paramount Theatres are slated to carry Teleconference's Dec. 30 theatre telecast of the Bendix dealers meeting, making UPT the circuit with the largest number of TV-equipped theatres ever to participate in a closed-circuit event.

Five Warner Brothers Theatres are also scheduled to join the Coast-to-Coast Teleconference net, which will be carried in 42 theatres in 41 cities. The only city which will have two TV-equipped houses participating will be New York. A Teleconference spokesman said that the list of theatres taking the commercial "off-hour" telecast, which will get underway from Chicago at about noon, will be made public shortly. Included in the circuit line-up are Loew's and Fabian theatres.

"Hans Christian Andersen" broke the 16-year gross record at the Criterion here, racking up a terrific $64,000 for its initial week. ## Say Dietrich Included in New Executive Team as Coast Confabs Continue Conferences on the problem of interim leadership for RKO Radio Pictures were reported yesterday to be reaching their climactic stage on the Coast, with the arrival there of Ned E. Depinet, former president, now company "consultant."

Depinet, according to informed trade quarters here, was called to the Coast by Howard Hughes at the weekend to discuss a new company executive slate, which would include himself, Hughes and Noah Dietrich, former chairman of the board.

Spurring the selection of company executives are the dual factors of the court hearing here next week on the receivership application pending against the company and the need to reestablish the company on a sound basis so that the Ralph Stolkin group can sell its 29 per cent controlling interest without incurring a severe financial penalty.

Arbitration May Rest On Allied's Stand on Rentals

By AL STEEN

Unless Allied is willing to go along on an arbitration system without the inclusion of the right to arbitrate film rentals, the chances for an industry formula for ironing out exhibitor-distributor problems are remote, distribution sources indicated here yesterday. A major company spokesman said he was certain the distributors would not agree to film rental arbitration, while Allied appears to be just as firm in its position that it's a case of "that or else."

Resumption of talks among exhibition segments and distribution in regard to revision of the distributors' plan will depend on what action Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, will take when he returns from South America within the next 10 days. The distribution committee on arbitration was set up by Johnston and the group will not initiate further meetings unless the MPAA president so requests, it was said yesterday.

There was a feeling among some distribution executives that Allied leaders had "mellowed" somewhat from their vehement opposition to the distributors' draft at Allied's convention in Chicago last month and that Allied feels it should not have taken

NEWS FLASHES

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1.--Western Theatre Owners has rejected the distributors' draft of the proposed arbitration plan, Rotus Harvey said here today. The two reasons given were: (1) It does not carry out the format as outlined at the original arbitration meeting; (2) It is too wordy and complicated; any plan to be agreeable to WTO must be simpler, less expensive.

Senator Urges Use of the Screen in 20% Tax Fight

DENVER, Dec. 1.—Plans are under way here to start what may well be a deciding factor in the fight to get the 20 per cent Federal amusement tax lifted. The move resulted from suggestions made by United States Senator Eugene D. Millikin (Rep. of Colorado), during a meeting between him and a number of Denver theatremen.

Pointing out that he was acting only in an advisory capacity, since any tax-cutting move would have to be started in the House Ways and Means Committee, Millikin told the local group to "Present your case through films. Get Hollywood to use the best script writers and the best talent in making a convincing short that will present the case of the discriminatory tax in a manner that will be easily understood. Make a succinct, entertaining film that will convey your point to every Senator and Representative." Denver theatremen are set to get action on this move, which they acclaim to be the best suggestion made to date.

In presenting arguments to the Senator, Robert Selig, executive vice-president of Fox Intermountain Theatres, pointed out that "the tax is discriminatory. Many little theatres over the country are closing because of the tax. No other industry is taxed in this manner. Department stores pay tax on furs and cosmetics, but they have much other merchandise for sale. Theatres sell only entertainment, and that is taxed. In many cases it means the difference between profit and loss."

"No Time for Flowers"

(Mort Briskin-RKO Pictures)

FILMED in its entirety in occupied Austria, this amusing satire on Russian police tactics in present-day Prague is merchandiseable but will need exploitation. Most audiences should enjoy the humorous situations but there are not many strong names for the marquee and the title may be inappropriate.

Viveca Lindfors and Paul Christian are starred as a secretary and a secret police agent, respectively, with Christian posing as a pro-American comrade in order to test her loyalty prior to her assignment as an ambassador's secretary in the U. S. The screenplay by Laslo Vadnay and Hans Wilhelm provides numerous jabs at Russian poverty.

Christian plies Miss Lindfors with American coffee, nylons, magazines, a bubble bath, and takes her to an expensive restaurant. Miss Lindfors reports all to police head, Peter Preses. But her love for Christian prevents her informing on the final test which concerns a planned escape to an American zone. Preses mistrusts her and Christian, and notifies personnel chief Frederick Berger she is not loyal. However, it is Berger who actually is pro-American and he has Miss Lindfors phone in. Christian discovers this, "arrests" Miss Lindfors, her family and Berger, and flees with them to the free American zone.

All of the principal performers turn in convincing portrayals under the incisive direction of Don Siegel. Manfred Inger supplies humor as a stolid suitor of Miss Lindfors who gifts her with food instead of flowers. Others noteworthy are Ludwig Stossel, Peter Czeyke and Adrienne Gessner.

Mort Briskin produced and made effective use of the Austrian streets and backgrounds. While this is a diverting satire on an almost-sure-fire topic, it will need special effort. Given proper backing, it should account for itself fairly well at the box-office.

Running time, 83 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Feb. 20, 1953.

The previous Criterion record of $60,000 was established 16 years ago by "Brute Force."

A fine $125,000 was forecast for the third week of "Plymouth Adventure" at Radio City Music Hall, which will open its Christmas show on Thursday with "Million Dollar Mermaid" on the screen. "Kansas City Confidential" is expected to do a fine $23,500 for its first seven days at the Globe. Another opener, "The Thief of Venice," is due to rack up a very good $25,000 for its initial week at the Mayfair.

Holding up strongly is "Limelight" at the Astor and the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux. A robust $27,000 for the sixth week is seen at the Astor and a nice $8,500 is indicated for the picture at the off-Broadway house. At the Paramount, a pretty good $64,000 is predicted for the second week of "Iron Mistress."

'Sound Barrier' Healthy

The fourth week of "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier" at the Victoria is due to hit a healthy $24,000. "Snows of Kilimanjaro," now in its 11th week at the Rivoli," is expected to do a good $20,000. The opening week of "Outpost in Malaya" at Loew's State was a bit disappointing, with $18,000 indicated. At the Capitol, a satisfactory $23,000 is indicated for "Prisoner of Zenda." Weekend business at the Roxy was fairly good, with $29,500 grossed up for the last three days of "Bloodhounds of Broadway." The picture, in its third week, was the last for the National Theatres' house before its closing to reopen on Dec. 22.

Among other off-Broadway houses, "The Promoter" is still outstanding, with the Fine Arts anticipating $13,800 for the film's fifth week. At the Sutton, a steady $8,800 is forecast for the seventh week of "The Fourposter." "O. Henry's Full House" at the 52nd Street Trans-Lux is expected to do a solid $8,500 for its seventh week, while a good $7,200 is seen for the second week of "Under the Red Sea" at the Beekman.

"Mr. Walkie Talkie"

THIS production involves the long-sputtering feud between Sergeant Joe Sawyer and Sergeant William Tracy of the U. S. Infantry. It moves a bit more slowly than usual but stacks up about par for the series as far as commercial value is concerned.

The screenplay by Edward Seabrook and George Carleton Brown has Tracy portray a walking-encyclopedia whose glib recitations of rare information annoy the stolid Sawyer to the point of hysteria. However, it is Tracy's photographic memory that extricates the infantry company from a disastrous position.

At the opening of the film in a training camp, Sawyer is so distraught that he applies for a transfer. It is granted and he is sent to Korea. There he is on front-line duty and is happy until Tracy arrives by parachute-drop, to share his life again. There are further adventures under fire and away from it, until the finale where Sawyer, fleeing Tracy's precocity, upsets his colonel who is in the act of recommending him for a Congressional Medal of Honor. Margia Dean supplies the feminine and musical touch as a volunteer entertainer. She sings a song number by Leon Klatzkin. Others in the cast are Russell Hicks, Robert Shayne, Alan Hale, Jr., and Wong Artarne. Hal Roach Jr., produced and Fred L. Guiol directed.

Running time, 65 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 28.

RKO Slate

Radio Pictures had encompassed many years, was said to be closeted with Hughes on the Coast over the weekend. The projected executive slate of Depinet, Hughes and Dietrich, it is pointed out, would be agreed upon to provide the leadership needed to pilot the company through its interim course, before a deal for the sale of the Stolkin group's stock interest is consummated.

The Stokin syndicate, which purchased its controlling interest in the company from Hughes, is finding it difficult to get offers commensurate with its investment, according to reports. The Stolkin group paid $7 per share for Hughes' 1,013,420 RKO Pictures shares last September.

Follows Other Talks

The reported Depinet-Hughes talks came on the heels of Coast conferences between Hughes and members of the Stolkin group, including Stolkin himself, on the selection of a company president and the filling of board vacancies. Presently on the Coast are Sherrill Corwin, acting chairman of the board, and Edward Burke, director, both members of the Stolkin group.

The approaching hearing in New York Supreme Court, slated for Dec. 10, on the receivership application filed by three minority stockholders, was seen as another strong factor pointing to the selection of new company executives shortly. The filling of the presidency and directorial vacancies, it is stressed, would strengthen the company's arguments opposing the appointment of a receiver.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 1.—Ned E. Depinet, former RKO Radio Pictures president and currently company "consultant," declined to comment today on New York reports that he, Howard Hughes and Noah Dietrich, were to head up the new executive slate of the company. He said he was here on personal business only.

Canada Is Cool to Quebec Censor Law

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—The Canadian government is looking coolly on the legislative move by the Quebec provincial government for the censoring of films and live shows for television.

Federal comment was that control of TV programs throughout the country is vested in the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., which is the Dominion-government agency for radio and television. Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec announced he would seek agreement with the Ottawa government on the subject of TV censorship. Other provinces in Canada are awaiting the outcome of negotiations. The new Quebec law provides for a penalty of $500 or three months in jail for the TV exhibition of any uncensored motion picture.

US-Argentina Near Accord: Johnston

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, states he believed the financial problems between the Argentine government and the American film industry involving dollar remittances had been resolved according to a news dispatch from Buenos Aires. Johnston is reported to have expressed this belief following conferences in Buenos Aires with Foreign Minister Jeronimo Remorino and Raul Apold, chief of the sub-secretariat of information.

The industry has not been allowed officially to transfer any earnings to the U. S. since about 1947, although Argentina ratified in July, 1951, an agreement made with the industry in May, 1950, that covered the remittance of dollar earnings in this country.

Earnings frozen in Argentina as a result of the government's failure to implement the agreement are estimated at more than $2,000,000. The government ascribed its failure to act to a dollar shortage.

Under the terms of a five-year agreement, the industry was to be permitted to remit profits up to $1,100,000 a year or 50 per cent of its earnings at the official free rate of 14 pesos to the dollar. The remaining 50 percent was allowed to be invested in local enterprises under the same privileges granted other foreign corporations.

Approximately 300 pictures have been imported by American companies in Argentina during the last year and a half. Of these, 178 are still waiting approval by review boards for licenses that would permit their exhibition.

Arbitration May Rest On Allied's Stand on Rentals

By AL STEEN

Unless Allied is willing to go along on an arbitration system without the inclusion of the right to arbitrate film rentals, the chances for an industry formula for ironing out exhibitor-distributor problems are remote, distribution sources indicated here yesterday. A major company spokesman said he was certain the distributors would not agree to film rental arbitration, while Allied appears to be just as firm in its position that it's a case of "that or else."

Resumption of talks among exhibition segments and distribution in regard to revision of the distributors' plan will depend on what action Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, will take when he returns from South America within the next 10 days. The distribution committee on arbitration was set up by Johnston and the group will not initiate further meetings unless the MPAA president so requests, it was said yesterday.

There was a feeling among some distribution executives that Allied leaders had "mellowed" somewhat from their vehement opposition to the distributors' draft at Allied's convention in Chicago last month and that Allied feels it should not have taken

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1. — Rotus Harvey told MOTION PICTURE DAILY here today that Western Theatre Owners finds it necessary to reject the proposed arbitration plan as approved by distribution for two seasons. # Senator Urges Use of the Screen in 20% Tax Fight

DENVER, Dec. 1.—Plans are under way here to start what may well be a deciding factor in the fight to get the 20 per cent Federal amusement tax lifted. The move resulted from suggestions made by United States Senator Eugene D. Millikin (Rep. of Colorado), during a meeting between him and a number of Denver theatremen.

Pointing out that he was acting only in an advisory capacity, since any tax-cutting move would have to be started in the House Ways and Means Committee, Millikin told the local group to "Present your case through films. Get Hollywood to use the best script writers and the best talent in making a convincing short that will present the case of the discriminatory tax in a manner that will be easily understood. Make a succinct, entertaining film that will convey your point to every Senator and Representative." Denver theatremen are set to get action on this move, which they acclaim to be the best suggestion made to date.

In presenting arguments to the Senator, Robert Selig, executive vice-president of Fox Intermountain Theatres, pointed out that "the tax is discriminatory. Many little theatres over the country are closing because of the tax. No other industry is taxed in this manner. Department stores pay tax on furs and cosmetics, but they have much other merchandise for sale. Theatres sell only entertainment, and that is taxed. In many cases it means the difference between profit and loss."

"No Time for Flowers"

(Mort Briskin-RKO Pictures)

FILMED in its entirety in occupied Austria, this amusing satire on Russian police tactics in present-day Prague is merchandiseable but will need exploitation. Most audiences should enjoy the humorous situations but there are not many strong names for the marquee and the title may be inappropriate.

Viveca Lindfors and Paul Christian are starred as a secretary and a secret police agent, respectively, with Christian posing as a pro-American comrade in order to test her loyalty prior to her assignment as an ambassador's secretary in the U. S. The screenplay by Laslo Vadnay and Hans Wilhelm provides numerous jabs at Russian poverty.

Christian plies Miss Lindfors with American coffee, nylons, magazines, a bubble bath, and takes her to an expensive restaurant. Miss Lindfors reports all to police head, Peter Preses. But her love for Christian prevents her informing on the final test which concerns a planned escape to an American zone. Preses mistrusts her and Christian, and notifies personnel chief Frederick Berger she is not loyal. However, it is Berger who actually is pro-American and he has Miss Lindfors phone in. Christian discovers this, "arrests" Miss Lindfors, her family and Berger, and flees with them to the free American zone.

All of the principal performers turn in convincing portrayals under the incisive direction of Don Siegel. Manfred Inger supplies humor as a stolid suitor of Miss Lindfors who gifts her with food instead of flowers. Others noteworthy are Ludwig Stossel, Peter Czeyke and Adrienne Gessner.

Mort Briskin produced and made effective use of the Austrian streets and backgrounds. While this is a diverting satire on an almost-sure-fire topic, it will need special effort. Given proper backing, it should account for itself fairly well at the box-office.

Running time, 83 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Feb. 20, 1953.

The previous Criterion record of $60,000 was established 16 years ago by "Brute Force."

A fine $125,000 was forecast for the third week of "Plymouth Adventure" at Radio City Music Hall, which will open its Christmas show on Thursday with "Million Dollar Mermaid" on the screen. "Kansas City Confidential" is expected to do a fine $23,500 for its first seven days at the Globe. A robust $27,000 for the sixth week is seen at the Astor and a nice $8,500 is indicated for the picture at the off-Broadway house. At the Paramount, a pretty good $64,000 is predicted for the second week of "Iron Mistress."

'Sound Barrier' Healthy

The fourth week of "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier" at the Victoria is due to hit a healthy $24,000. "Snows of Kilimanjaro," now in its 11th week at the Rivoli," is expected to do a good $20,000. ## "Mr. Walkie Talkie"

THIS production involves the long-sputtering feud between Sergeant Joe Sawyer and Sergeant William Tracy of the U. S. Infantry. It moves a bit more slowly than usual but stacks up about par for the series as far as commercial value is concerned.

The screenplay by Edward Seabrook and George Carleton Brown has Tracy portray a walking-encyclopedia whose glib recitations of rare information annoy the stolid Sawyer to the point of hysteria. However, it is Tracy's photographic memory that extricates the infantry company from a disastrous position.

At the opening of the film in a training camp, Sawyer is so distraught that he applies for a transfer. It is granted and he is sent to Korea. There he is on front-line duty and is happy until Tracy arrives by parachute-drop, to share his life again. There are further adventures under fire and away from it, until the finale where Sawyer, fleeing Tracy's precocity, upsets his colonel who is in the act of recommending him for a Congressional Medal of Honor. Margia Dean supplies the feminine and musical touch as a volunteer entertainer. She sings a song number by Leon Klatzkin. Others in the cast are Russell Hicks, Robert Shayne, Alan Hale, Jr., and Wong Artarne. Hal Roach Jr., produced and Fred L. Guiol directed.

Running time, 65 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Nov. 28.

RKO Slate

Radio Pictures had encompassed many years, was said to be closeted with Hughes on the Coast over the weekend. The projected executive slate of Depinet, Hughes and Dietrich, it is pointed out, would be agreed upon to provide the leadership needed to pilot the company through its interim course, before a deal for the sale of the Stolkin group's stock interest is consummated.

The Stokin syndicate, which purchased its controlling interest in the company from Hughes, is finding it difficult to get offers commensurate with its investment, according to reports. The Stolkin group paid $7 per share for Hughes' 1,013,420 RKO Pictures shares last September.

Follows Other Talks

The reported Depinet-Hughes talks came on the heels of Coast conferences between Hughes and members of the Stolkin group, including Stolkin himself, on the selection of a company president and the filling of board vacancies. Presently on the Coast are Sherrill Corwin, acting chairman of the board, and Edward Burke, director, both members of the Stolkin group.

The approaching hearing in New York Supreme Court, slated for Dec. 10, on the receivership application filed by three minority stockholders, was seen as another strong factor pointing to the selection of new company executives shortly. The filling of the presidency and directorial vacancies, it is stressed, would strengthen the company's arguments opposing the appointment of a receiver.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 1.—Ned E. Depinet, former RKO Radio Pictures president and currently company "consultant," declined to comment today on New York reports that he, Howard Hughes and Noah Dietrich, were to head up the new executive slate of the company. He said he was here on personal business only.

Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec announced he would seek agreement with the Ottawa government on the subject of TV censorship. Other provinces in Canada are awaiting the outcome of negotiations. ## FOR THE HEALTH YOU HAVE BY HELPING THOSE WHO LACK IT.....

Thanksgiving 1952

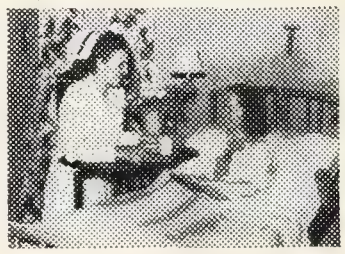
Let us view with gratitude the position we occupy as "stockholders" in the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital...

Already we have restored 1109 persons to useful lives, and we have the enviable record of having cured more than 90% of all our cases of tuberculosis.

Our hospital stands ready to help anyone in the amusement industry who needs TB care... without cost or obligation.



It's wonderful to have a part in such a beneficent movement—and it's also gratifying to know that the facilities, the skill, and the human understanding is there for our own use, too, should we ever need it.

So, let's be thankful that there IS a Will Rogers Hospital—grateful that we are part of it ... and let's be generous in our support of it. Give gratefully to this year's Christmas Salute—give "a dime, a dollar, or an endowment".

Where the light of knowledge, skill and brotherly love combine to combat mankind's ruthless enemy. . . . Here exhaustive research never ends. The best care—the best medical and surgical techniques. This is your contribution to mankind. All this is your protection, and your responsibility.

US-Argentina Near Accord: Johnston

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, states he believed the financial problems between the Argentine government and the American film industry involving dollar remittances had been resolved according to a news dispatch from Buenos Aires. Johnston is reported to have expressed this belief following conferences in Buenos Aires with Foreign Minister Jeronimo Remorino and Raul Apold, chief of the sub-secretariat of information.

The industry has not been allowed officially to transfer any earnings to the U. S. since about 1947, although Argentina ratified in July, 1951, an agreement made with the industry in May, 1950, that covered the remittance of dollar earnings in this country.

Earnings frozen in Argentina as a result of the government's failure to implement the agreement are estimated at more than $2,000,000. The government ascribed its failure to act to a dollar shortage.

Under the terms of a five-year agreement, the industry was to be permitted to remit profits up to $1,100,000 a year or 50 per cent of its earnings at the official free rate of 14 pesos to the dollar. The remaining 50 percent was allowed to be invested in local enterprises under the same privileges granted other foreign corporations.

Approximately 300 pictures have been imported by American companies in Argentina during the last year and a half. Of these, 178 are still waiting approval by review boards for licenses that would permit their exhibition.

Arbitration Is More Confused By WTO Action

Coast Group's Rejection Raises New Questions

Rejection of the distributors' arbitration draft by the Western Theatre Owners, as announced Monday in San Francisco by Rotus Harvey, past president of WTO, was greeted here yesterday by distribution leaders as further complicating the entire arbitration picture. It had been the feeling that Allied was the only holdout on accepting the draft as a springboard to a more acceptable formula, but with WTO siding in with Allied the problem takes on a more serious complexion, according to some opinions.

One distributor raised this question: If the industry were to move for the establishment of an arbitration system without Allied's participation in the hope of obtaining Department of Justice approval, regardless, would there be any chance of obtaining that approval with WTO, as well as Allied, opposed to the plan? It was

NEWS FLASHES

COLUMBUS, Dec. 2. -- The ITO of Ohio board of directors voted today to approve the action of national Allied rejecting the distributors' draft of the arbitration plan. It also authorized Columbus statistician W. V. Blake to make a study of Ohio film carriers. According to secretary Robert Wile, who was reappointed, a preliminary report revealed a wide discrepancy in rates.

The Dec. 11 "Carmen" telecast price range runs from $1.20 to $7.20, with most theatres taking the Theatre Network Television event charging from $2.40 to $4.80, a compilation of field reports disclosed here yesterday.

Myers Sees Hope In 'Heart-to-Heart' Arbitration Talks

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 2.—The door to industry arbitration was unlocked and left slightly ajar by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of national Allied, in his address before the Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana state convention here today.

"The only thing that would open up the situation," he said, "would be if distributor executives asked their sales departments to step aside while they acquainted themselves with the exhibitor point of view." There were indications that backstage talks toward this end are under way in New York with national Allied president Wilbur Snaper.

"If it results in bringing leaders

TV to Share in Newsreel 'Pool' of Ike's Korea Trip

Dave Oliver, Warner-Pathe News cameraman, will be the only newsreel representative to accompany President-elect Eisenhower to Korea.

The "visual media," which includes television, were limited to one representative. Oliver was chosen by Walton Ament, chairman of the Motion Picture Association newsreel committee and vice-president and general manager of Warner Pathe, with the consent of the other four newsreels. All of Oliver's footage will be pooled and released to the other reels simultaneously, immediately that security regulations on the Eisenhower journey have been lifted.

Plans call for Oliver's footage to be shipped directly to Washington, where it will be developed and made ready for instantaneous release, subject to security restrictions. Release of the footage to television will be held up pending shipment of the reels to theatres. Under this arrangement, TV could get a release simultaneous with theatre release but could not "scoop" the theatres, first-runs, at least, with the newsreel films.

The arrangement was made neces-

Jacon also revealed five regional sales offices involving a staff of 18 will be in operation by Jan. 1. The four Loew's theatres taking the "off-hour" program are: Loew's State, Cleveland, Loew's State, St. Louis; Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh; and Loew's State, Boston.

With Loew's taking the program in four situations, Warner Brothers in five and United Paramount Theatres' affiliates in 17, the major circuits account for 26 of the 42 theatres slated to take the Coast-to-Coast event.

Royal Purchases 5th Story for '53 Lineup

Purchase of "Murder by Proxy," a novel by Helen Neilsen, completes the five-picture lineup of Royal Productions for 1953, Julian Lesser, head of Royal, reported. The picture will go into production in March under the title of "Whispering Smith Off Balance."

Royal's first film in the new program, "The Lost Hours," produced in England, will be available in about 10 days. Lesser's program includes two each in the "Whispering Smith" and the "Saint" series.

Myers Sees

together for a real heart-to-heart discussion that leads to some measure of relief and a better arbitration draft, the action taken in Chicago was not a mere dragging of feet but a very fortunate thing to happen," Myers declared.

Myers pleaded for a "return to the days when the object was to fill theatres with people and not to get the most from each individual patron."

"I would like to see the distributors play along with us to that end," he said. "1943 definitely will be a year of decision in the motion picture business."

"There was not a director or a member of Allied I talked to who said he was against arbitration," Myers declared. "Arbitration isn't a word, it consists of a code of conduct and a method of enforcing it. In arriving at such a plan, you had better give careful consideration to what goes in it. It could give judicial sanction to practices many exhibitors feel are wrong." His criticism of the industry plan centered on pre-releases, competitive bidding and the lack of provisions that "would ease the strain on exhibitors today."

Caution was urged by Max A. Youngstein, vice-president of United Artists. "Aggressiveness is not good if it is without purpose," he argued, "If we forget where the actual disease in our business lies, if we are going to kick the brains out of distributors because it's a lot of fun, that is a serious mistake. Most of our problems will be solved only by recognizing that there are more areas of agreement than of disagreement."

Youngstein called Cinerama "the single most dramatic innovation in the last 20 years—in many ways a solid answer to television."

Trueman Rembusch, president of the state Allied for the past 7 years, announced that he was not a candidate for reelection.

Arbitration

pointed out that nearly half the organized exhibitors of the country are represented in the two organizations. The problem now, it was said, is to do more extensive missionary work in getting a larger bloc of exhibitors to agree to the tentative draft than was first anticipated.

On the other hand, some leaders took the position that the entire arbitration situation eventually would be solved, but that it would take more time. Objections to the plan can be overcome, say the more optimistic ones.

Meanwhile, both sides are awaiting the return from South America of Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, who may take some immediate action in setting up new talks. However, an MPAA spokesman said here yesterday that the association's knowledge of the willingness of exhibitor organization leaders to continue talks on ironing out the wrinkles in the latest arbitration plan has come only from trade press reports. It was suggested that the meetings might be expedited if one or more groups would contact Johnston or the MPAA and ask that the sessions be called. Johnston is due in New York next Monday.

Weltner Confirms Para.-Italian Deal

Completion of the deal whereby Paramount will co-produce a series of features in Italy was confirmed here yesterday by George Weltner, president of Paramount-International, who returned to the home office from a two-week European trip. Under the setup, Paramount will distribute in Europe the entire output of Ponti-De Laurentiis, Italian production company. The exact number has not been determined, but it is understand that there will be a minimum of 10 pictures.

The first two films under the agreement already are in production. They are "La Lupa" ("The She-Wolf") and an untitled feature. Paramount currently is distributing "Sensualita," which was produced by Ponti-De-Laurentiis prior to the new pact. This picture is not included in the current agreement.

UA in Joint Italian Production Deal

Joint Italo-American production in Italy of major motion pictures for world-wide distribution, will be achieved under an arrangement concluded in Naples by Arthur B. Krim, president of United Artists, and Angelo Rizzoli and Robert Haggiag of Italy, it was announced by UA here yesterday.

The arrangement also provides for the formation of a new distribution company, resulting from the merger of Dearfilm, a company currently distributing Italian films, and DAI, which is the exclusive agency for distributing UA releases in Italy. Haggiag is the head of DAI and Rizzoli, Italian publisher, industrialist and producer of "Tomorrow Is Too Late" and "Don Camillo," is the head of Dearfilm.

French Notify U. S. Firms on Allocations

PARIS, Dec. 2.—Letters to American film companies, notifying them as to how many dubbing permits each may apply for under the new French film pact, are being sent out by the French government. It is expected that the allocations will be made in two "shifts," allowing 90 permits immediately and 20, possibly in the spring, for member companies of the Motion Picture Export Association. Independent companies are being allocated a total of 11 permits.

The 20 permits, in a sense, are being borrowed against next year's quota. France is allowing an overall import total of 138 pictures from all countries.

Maas in Japan Seeks Unrestricted Imports

Unrestricted importation of American films in Japan is being sought by Irving Maas, representative of the international division of the Motion Picture Association of America, now in Tokyo. Maas is expected back in New York by Christmas, and it is believed that negotiations will be concluded within the next two weeks, but whether Japan will agree to the free entry of pictures remains a question.

National Pre-Selling

"A QUIET MAN'S MOVIES" is the title Look gives to a sketch of producer Hal Wallis's "life in the movies," appearing in the current issue. The story starts with Wallis in 1920, an obscure studio publicity man for Warner Brothers: "He dared to court film comedienne Louise Fazenda, then earning $4,000 a week. Her friend, Lilyan Tashman, warned Miss Fazenda against taking seriously a young nobody who was trying to hitch his wagon to a star. Miss Fazenda thought otherwise. She married Wallis and retired to watch the young nobody rise to head all production at Warners from 1930 to 1940, and from 1944, operate his independent company at Paramount." Wallis has two pictures ready for release: "Come Back, Little Sheba," with Shirley Booth, and "The Stooge," starring Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis. Both are Paramount releases.

Goldwyn said, "The better the picture, the more I'd like to start right in the minute it is made and do it all over again—and better."

Edwin Miller, motion picture editor of Seventeen, did a "profile" of Aldo Ray for the December issue. Miller says "Aldo is without self-consciousness. And without conceit. He happens to have a number of outstanding talents; he is aware of them. Underneath it all, though, he appeals for approval. He wants to feel that you agree with him, that you like him, that you feel he's okay." Ray's next part is a starring role opposite Jane Wyman in a musical called "Love Song." After that he is scheduled to appear in James Jones' story, "From Here to Eternity."

"Plymouth Adventure" is reviewed in "McCall's Goes to the Movies" in the issue now on newsstands. The reviewer says "'Plymouth Adventure,' the grim story of the Mayflower's famous voyage from the old world to New England, is tensely told in this M-G-M picture. Although founded on historical record, the film relies on fiction for action during the 96 days the Pilgrims were at sea in their tiny vessel. The hardships of the 102 persons crammed into the little ship, the tremendous effects of a storm at sea and the often bitter personal conflicts among the Pilgrims are all powerfully depicted." Also recommended in McCall's regular monthly movie guide are RKO Radio's "The Lusty Men," Columbia's "The Four Poster," and Paramount's "The Stooge."

sary when TV was counted out of the Eisenhower traveling party because it was tardy in making application for a representative, it was said. When TV finally woke up and applied for representation, accommodations on the Eisenhower plane were not available and there was insufficient time to clear a TV man, give him his "shots" and complete the numerous other preliminaries.

Newsreels, of course, maintain representation in Korea and Tokyo and the footage from those sources obtained during Eisenhower's visit will not be made available to television. However, if security agencies so decide, none of the Eisenhower footage may be released until the President-elect is back in the United States.

the new plan on more intensive local promotion policies will cover releases for the first six months of 1953, it was explained. Schwalberg stated, "We feel confident that each of our division managers and each branch manager has an intimate knowledge of his own territory which will be invaluable in setting details of merchandising plans and programs. By coordinating the individual needs of each territory into one completely-integrated program of promotion, we feel that we shall strengthen our operations tremendously."

Keynote of the plan, according to Schwalberg, will be the immediate inauguration of a series of individual regional meetings to be conducted in the headquarters city of each Paramount division. The meetings, to be conducted by Schwalberg, also will be attended by E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, vice-president, and Jerry Pickman, vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation, as well as the division manager and key division personnel.

"The basis for the added strength which the Paramount program will derive from this method of handling," Schwalberg added, "is the fact that individual division managers and branch managers are so much more closely connected with the needs of theatres throughout the country than we can possibly be in the home office. No program can have any value unless it provides a direct benefit to the exhibitor at his own box-office. This is our aim—to do everything we can to stimulate box-office revenue to the individual theatre."

The new program of individual meetings starts here tomorrow, where Schwalberg, O'Shea and Pickman are meeting with Mid-Eastern division manager Howard G. Minsky and key division personnel.

Following return to the home office Friday, Schwalberg, O'Shea and Pickman will fly to Dallas, where Sunday and Monday will be spent in similar meetings with South Central division manager A. M. Kane and territory personnel. Next stop will be Los Angeles, for a two-day session Tuesday and Wednesday, with Western division manager George A. Smith and Pacific Coast sales forces.

On Dec. 12 and 13, the executive trio will be in Chicago for sessions with Central division manager J. J. Donohue. Final meeting of the trip will be held in New York on Dec. 15 and 16, with Eastern and Southern division manager Hugh Owen calling together key personnel from his territories to discuss forthcoming product.

A definite date has not yet been set, Schwalberg said, for a sales meeting in Toronto with Canadian division manager Gordon Lightstone and Canadian sales personnel, but it is expected that this will be held before the first of the year.

Paramount's schedule for the first six months of 1953, as announced by Schwalberg, includes the following:

January: "Road to Bali," color by Technicolor; Bing Crosby-Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour starrer; "Thunder in the East," starring Alan Ladd, Deborah Kerr, Charles Boyer and Corinne Calvet; "Tropic Zone," Technicilor, starring Ronald Reagan, Rhonda Fleming and Estelita.

February: "The Stooge," Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis starrer; special pre-release engagements of "Come Back, Little Sheba," starring Shirley Booth, Burt Lancaster, Terry Moore and Richard Jaeckel.

April: "Off Limits," starring Bob Hope, Mickey Rooney and Marilyn Maxwell; "Pony Express," in Technicolor, starring Charlton Heston, Rhonda Fleming, Forrest Tucker and Jan Sterling.

May: George Pal's Technicolor production, "War of the Worlds"; "Jamaica," in Technicolor, starring Ray Milland, Arlene Dahl and Wendell Corey.

Paramount Sets This Month For Booker-Salesman Drive

Paramount has dedicated this month to its fifth annual "Booker-Salesman's Drive" as a tribute to the booker-salesmen, whom A. W. Schwalberg, drive initiater and president of the distributing company, regards as "the backbone of any film organization."

The drive opened on Nov. 30 and will continue through Jan. 3. The booker-salesmen have re-dedicated the drive to Schwalberg and vice-president E. K. (Ted) O'Shea.

Quotas have been set for the drive, and advertising material has been prepared by a home office committee under the chairmanship of Monroe R. Goodman. The committee includes Harold Beecroft, Joe Bisdale, Sid Blumenstock, Arthur Dunne, Martin Friedman, J. Knox Haddow, Fred Leroy, Sid Mesibov, Jack Roper, George Schur and Joe Walsh.

English Representative Due Dec. 13 for Production Talks

Richard Mealand, Paramount production representative in England, will arrive in New York by plane from London on Dec. 13 to start discussions with company executives about world-wide production problems and overseas shooting locales.

This will be Mealand's first U. S. visit in nearly two years. His first of several meetings with New York executives will be with Russell Holman, Paramount's Eastern production manager. Early in January Mealand will fly to the Coast to meet with Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of the studio; Don Hartman, in charge of production, and other studio heads.

78,000 RKO Pictures shares. The citation is sought on grounds that the government consent decree forbids officers and directors of split-up exhibition companies from influencing the management of the production-distribution firms. Greene is a director of RKO Theatres.

The show cause order was signed by Judge Sydney Sugarman of U. S. District Court. The hearing date of Dec. 9 is just one day before arguments on the receivership application are scheduled to be heard in New York Supreme Court.

A Greene spokesman, in commenting on the action, said "we intervened as a securities firm on the basis of the feeling that receivership would be unwise." He said that Kipnis' move would be vigorously opposed by Greene.

sound. Gettinger occasionally represents the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. of this city and, it is said, the plan he and Odlum are putting together for a deal which would be acceptable to both the Stolkin group and Hughes calls for the deposit of $1,000,000 with Chemical by Atlas Corp. as an initial payment on the 1,013,420 shares of RKO Pictures common stock, representing a controlling 29 per cent interest, which is presently held by the Stolkin group.

Further Details Not Clear

Further details of the proposal were not clear but it was assumed that thereafter Atlas Corp. would assume the future stock purchase obligations of the Stolkin group to Hughes, on some basis acceptable to both of the latter. The Stolkin group agreed to pay Hughes $7 per share for the stock and made an initial payment last September of $1,500,000. A similar amount is due next year and the balance in 1954. It is assumed the Atlas proposal will call for price and other concessions from both Stolkin and Hughes.

It could not be learned whether the Atlas proposal will include a provision, or agreement, to reinstate Ned E. Depinet as RKO Pictures president and Noah Dietrich as board chairman, as currently proposed by Hughes. Observers believed that Hughes might insist on such a condition in return for any concessions, price or otherwise which he might agree to in a possible modification of the Stolkin group's stock purchase agreement.

Meanwhile, Hughes, Depinet and members of the Stolkin syndicate are continuing their conferences in Hollywood, which are expected to last several days more. It is generally believed that if a deal with Atlas is not consummated in the very near future, Hughes will pick up the reins again and designate Depinet and Dietrich his chief executive officers.

Depinet served as vice-president of RKO Pictures in charge of distribution during the previous Atlas Corp. period of RKO control. N. Peter Rathvon was Odlum's choice for president then.

Arbitration Is More Confused By WTO Action

Coast Group's Rejection Raises New Questions

Rejection of the distributors' arbitration draft by the Western Theatre Owners, as announced Monday in San Francisco by Rotus Harvey, past president of WTO, was greeted here yesterday by distribution leaders as further complicating the entire arbitration picture. It had been the feeling that Allied was the only holdout on accepting the draft as a springboard to a more acceptable formula, but with WTO siding in with Allied the problem takes on a more serious complexion, according to some opinions.

One distributor raised this question: If the industry were to move for the establishment of an arbitration system without Allied's participation in the hope of obtaining Department of Justice approval, regardless, would there be any chance of obtaining that approval with WTO, as well as Allied, opposed to the plan? It was

COLUMBUS, Dec. 2.——The board of directors of Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio voted to approve the action of national Allied to reject the arbitration plan in its present form and to notify Abram Myers of the board's approval of the rejection.

The board authorized W. V. Blake, Columbus statistician, to make a study of Ohio film carriers and report his recommendations at the next board meeting. A preliminary study revealed a wide discrepancy in rates, said Robert Wile, secretary.

'Carmen' Tickets From $1.20 to $7.20

The price range for the Dec. 11 "Carmen" telecast runs from $1.20 to $7.20, with most theatres taking the Theatre Network Television event charging from $2.40 to $4.80, a check of field reports disclosed here.

In New York, the 450-seat Guild Theatre on 50th Street, which is charging $7.20 per seat, including tax, is nearly sold out.

Myers Sees Hope In 'Heart-to-Heart' Arbitration Talks

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 2.—The door to industry arbitration was unlocked and left slightly ajar by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of national Allied, in his address before the Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana state convention here today.

"The only thing that would open up the situation," he said, "would be if distributor executives asked their sales departments to step aside while they acquainted themselves with the exhibitor point of view." There were indications that backstage talks toward this end are under way in New York with national Allied president Wilbur Snaper.

TV to Share in Newsreel 'Pool' of Ike's Korea Trip

Dave Oliver, Warner-Pathe News cameraman, will be the only newsreel representative to accompany President-elect Eisenhower to Korea.

The "visual media," which includes television, were limited to one representative. Oliver was chosen by Walton Ament, chairman of the Motion Picture Association newsreel committee and vice-president and general manager of Warner Pathe, with the consent of the other four newsreels. All of Oliver's footage will be pooled and released to the other reels simultaneously, immediately that security regulations on the Eisenhower journey have been lifted.

Plans call for Oliver's footage to be shipped directly to Washington, where it will be developed and made ready for instantaneous release, subject to security restrictions. Release of the footage to television will be held up pending shipment of the reels to theatres. Under this arrangement, TV could get a release simultaneous with theatre release but could not "scoop" the theatres, first-runs, at least, with the newsreel films.

The arrangement was made neces-

together for a real heart-to-heart discussion that leads to some measure of relief and a better arbitration draft, the action taken in Chicago was not a mere dragging of feet but a very fortunate thing to happen," Myers declared.

Myers pleaded for a "return to the days when the object was to fill theatres with people and not to get the most from each individual patron."

"I would like to see the distributors play along with us to that end," he said. "1943 definitely will be a year of decision in the motion picture business."

"There was not a director or a member of Allied I talked to who said he was against arbitration," Myers declared. "Arbitration isn't a word, it consists of a code of conduct and a method of enforcing it. In arriving at such a plan, you had better give careful consideration to what goes in it. It could give judicial sanction to practices many exhibitors feel are wrong." His criticism of the industry plan centered on pre-releases, competitive bidding and the lack of provisions that "would ease the strain on exhibitors today."

Caution was urged by Max A. Youngstein, vice-president of United Artists. "Aggressiveness is not good if it is without purpose," he argued, "If we forget where the actual disease in our business lies, if we are going to kick the brains out of distributors because it's a lot of fun, that is a serious mistake. Most of our problems will be solved only by recognizing that there are more areas of agreement than of disagreement."

Youngstein called Cinerama "the single most dramatic innovation in the last 20 years—in many ways a solid answer to television."

Trueman Rembusch, president of the state Allied for the past 7 years, announced that he was not a candidate for reelection.

Arbitration

pointed out that nearly half the organized exhibitors of the country are represented in the two organizations. The problem now, it was said, is to do more extensive missionary work in getting a larger bloc of exhibitors to agree to the tentative draft than was first anticipated.

On the other hand, some leaders took the position that the entire arbitration situation eventually would be solved, but that it would take more time. Objections to the plan can be overcome, say the more optimistic ones.

Meanwhile, both sides are awaiting the return from South America of Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, who may take some immediate action in setting up new talks. However, an MPAA spokesman said here yesterday that the association's knowledge of the willingness of exhibitor organization leaders to continue talks on ironing out the wrinkles in the latest arbitration plan has come only from trade press reports. It was suggested that the meetings might be expedited if one or more groups would contact Johnston or the MPAA and ask that the sessions be called. Johnston is due in New York next Monday.

Weltner Confirms Para.-Italian Deal

Completion of the deal whereby Paramount will co-produce a series of features in Italy was confirmed here yesterday by George Weltner, president of Paramount-International, who returned to the home office from a two-week European trip. Under the setup, Paramount will distribute in Europe the entire output of Ponti-De Laurentiis, Italian production company. The exact number has not been determined, but it is understand that there will be a minimum of 10 pictures.

The first two films under the agreement already are in production. They are "La Lupa" ("The She-Wolf") and an untitled feature. Paramount currently is distributing "Sensualita," which was produced by Ponti-De-Laurentiis prior to the new pact. This picture is not included in the current agreement.

UA in Joint Italian Production Deal

Joint Italo-American production in Italy of major motion pictures for world-wide distribution, will be achieved under an arrangement concluded in Naples by Arthur B. Krim, president of United Artists, and Angelo Rizzoli and Robert Haggiag of Italy, it was announced by UA here yesterday.

The arrangement also provides for the formation of a new distribution company, resulting from the merger of Dearfilm, a company currently distributing Italian films, and DAI, which is the exclusive agency for distributing UA releases in Italy. Haggiag is the head of DAI and Rizzoli, Italian publisher, industrialist and producer of "Tomorrow Is Too Late" and "Don Camillo," is the head of Dearfilm.

French Notify U. S. Firms on Allocations

PARIS, Dec. 2.—Letters to American film companies, notifying them as to how many dubbing permits each may apply for under the new French film pact, are being sent out by the French government. It is expected that the allocations will be made in two "shifts," allowing 90 permits immediately and 20, possibly in the spring, for member companies of the Motion Picture Export Association. Independent companies are being allocated a total of 11 permits.

The 20 permits, in a sense, are being borrowed against next year's quota. France is allowing an overall import total of 138 pictures from all countries.

Maas in Japan Seeks Unrestricted Imports

Unrestricted importation of American films in Japan is being sought by Irving Maas, representative of the international division of the Motion Picture Association of America, now in Tokyo. Maas is expected back in New York by Christmas, and it is believed that negotiations will be concluded within the next two weeks, but whether Japan will agree to the free entry of pictures remains a question.

National Pre-Selling

"A QUIET MAN'S MOVIES" is the title Look gives to a sketch of producer Hal Wallis's "life in the movies," appearing in the current issue. The story starts with Wallis in 1920, an obscure studio publicity man for Warner Brothers: "He dared to court film comedienne Louise Fazenda, then earning $4,000 a week. Her friend, Lilyan Tashman, warned Miss Fazenda against taking seriously a young nobody who was trying to hitch his wagon to a star. Miss Fazenda thought otherwise. She married Wallis and retired to watch the young nobody rise to head all production at Warners from 1930 to 1940, and from 1944, operate his independent company at Paramount." Wallis has two pictures ready for release: "Come Back, Little Sheba," with Shirley Booth, and "The Stooge," starring Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis. Both are Paramount releases.

Goldwyn said, "The better the picture, the more I'd like to start right in the minute it is made and do it all over again—and better."

Edwin Miller, motion picture editor of Seventeen, did a "profile" of Aldo Ray for the December issue. Miller says "Aldo is without self-consciousness. And without conceit. He happens to have a number of outstanding talents; he is aware of them. Underneath it all, though, he appeals for approval. He wants to feel that you agree with him, that you like him, that you feel he's okay." Ray's next part is a starring role opposite Jane Wyman in a musical called "Love Song." After that he is scheduled to appear in James Jones' story, "From Here to Eternity."

"Plymouth Adventure" is reviewed in "McCall's Goes to the Movies" in the issue now on newsstands. The reviewer says "'Plymouth Adventure,' the grim story of the Mayflower's famous voyage from the old world to New England, is tensely told in this M-G-M picture. Although founded on historical record, the film relies on fiction for action during the 96 days the Pilgrims were at sea in their tiny vessel. The hardships of the 102 persons crammed into the little ship, the tremendous effects of a storm at sea and the often bitter personal conflicts among the Pilgrims are all powerfully depicted." Also recommended in McCall's regular monthly movie guide are RKO Radio's "The Lusty Men," Columbia's "The Four Poster," and Paramount's "The Stooge."

When TV finally woke up and applied for representation, accommodations on the Eisenhower plane were not available and there was insufficient time to clear a TV man, give him his "shots" and complete the numerous other preliminaries.

Newsreels, of course, maintain representation in Korea and Tokyo and the footage from those sources obtained during Eisenhower's visit will not be made available to television. However, if security agencies so decide, none of the Eisenhower footage may be released until the President-elect is back in the United States.

Schwalberg Details Meets

the new plan on more intensive local promotion policies will cover releases for the first six months of 1953, it was explained. Schwalberg stated, "We feel confident that each of our division managers and each branch manager has an intimate knowledge of his own territory which will be invaluable in setting details of merchandising plans and programs. By coordinating the individual needs of each territory into one completely-integrated program of promotion, we feel that we shall strengthen our operations tremendously."

Keynote of the plan, according to Schwalberg, will be the immediate inauguration of a series of individual regional meetings to be conducted in the headquarters city of each Paramount division. The meetings, to be conducted by Schwalberg, also will be attended by E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, vice-president, and Jerry Pickman, vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation, as well as the division manager and key division personnel.

"The basis for the added strength which the Paramount program will derive from this method of handling," Schwalberg added, "is the fact that individual division managers and branch managers are so much more closely connected with the needs of theatres throughout the country than we can possibly be in the home office. No program can have any value unless it provides a direct benefit to the exhibitor at his own box-office. This is our aim—to do everything we can to stimulate box-office revenue to the individual theatre."

The new program of individual meetings starts here tomorrow, where Schwalberg, O'Shea and Pickman are meeting with Mid-Eastern division manager Howard G. Minsky and key division personnel.

Following return to the home office Friday, Schwalberg, O'Shea and Pickman will fly to Dallas, where Sunday and Monday will be spent in similar meetings with South Central division manager A. M. Kane and territory personnel. Next stop will be Los Angeles, for a two-day session Tuesday and Wednesday, with Western division manager George A. Smith and Pacific Coast sales forces.

On Dec. 12 and 13, the executive trio will be in Chicago for sessions with Central division manager J. J. Donohue. Final meeting of the trip will be held in New York on Dec. 15 and 16, with Eastern and Southern division manager Hugh Owen calling together key personnel from his territories to discuss forthcoming product.

A definite date has not yet been set, Schwalberg said, for a sales meeting in Toronto with Canadian division manager Gordon Lightstone and Canadian sales personnel, but it is expected that this will be held before the first of the year.

Paramount's schedule for the first six months of 1953, as announced by Schwalberg, includes the following:

January: "Road to Bali," color by Technicolor; Bing Crosby-Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour starrer; "Thunder in the East," starring Alan Ladd, Deborah Kerr, Charles Boyer and Corinne Calvet; "Tropic Zone," Technicilor, starring Ronald Reagan, Rhonda Fleming and Estelita.

February: "The Stooge," Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis starrer; special pre-release engagements of "Come Back, Little Sheba," starring Shirley Booth, Burt Lancaster, Terry Moore and Richard Jaeckel.

March: "The Stars Are Singing," Technicolor, starring Anna Maria Alberghetti, Rosemary Clooney and Lauritz Melchoir; "Pleasure Island," in Technicolor, starring Don Taylor, Leo Genn and Elsa Lanchester.

April: "Off Limits," starring Bob Hope, Mickey Rooney and Marilyn Maxwell; "Pony Express," in Technicolor, starring Charlton Heston, Rhonda Fleming, Forrest Tucker and Jan Sterling.

May: George Pal's Technicolor production, "War of the Worlds"; "Jamaica," in Technicolor, starring Ray Milland, Arlene Dahl and Wendell Corey.

June: "Alaska Seas," in Technicolor; "Rock Grayson's Women," in Technicolor, satrring John Payne, Coleen Gray, Jan Sterling and Lyle Bettger.

Paramount Sets This Month For Booker-Salesman Drive

Paramount has dedicated this month to its fifth annual "Booker-Salesman's Drive" as a tribute to the booker-salesmen, whom A. W. Schwalberg, drive initiater and president of the distributing company, regards as "the backbone of any film organization."

The drive opened on Nov. 30 and will continue through Jan. 3. The booker-salesmen have re-dedicated the drive to Schwalberg and vice-president E. K. (Ted) O'Shea.

Quotas have been set for the drive, and advertising material has been prepared by a home office committee under the chairmanship of Monroe R. Goodman. The committee includes Harold Beecroft, Joe Bisdale, Sid Blumenstock, Arthur Dunne, Martin Friedman, J. Knox Haddow, Fred Leroy, Sid Mesibov, Jack Roper, George Schur and Joe Walsh.

English Representative Due Dec. 13 for Production Talks

Richard Mealand, Paramount production representative in England, will arrive in New York by plane from London on Dec. 13 to start discussions with company executives about world-wide production problems and overseas shooting locales.

This will be Mealand's first U. S. visit in nearly two years. His first of several meetings with New York executives will be with Russell Holman, Paramount's Eastern production manager. Early in January Mealand will fly to the Coast to meet with Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president in charge of the studio; Don Hartman, in charge of production, and other studio heads.

78,000 RKO Pictures shares. The citation is sought on grounds that the government consent decree forbids officers and directors of split-up exhibition companies from influencing the management of the production-distribution firms. Greene is a director of RKO Theatres.

The show cause order was signed by Judge Sydney Sugarman of U. S. District Court. The hearing date of Dec. 9 is just one day before arguments on the receivership application are scheduled to be heard in New York Supreme Court.

A Greene spokesman, in commenting on the action, said "we intervened as a securities firm on the basis of the feeling that receivership would be unwise." He said that Kipnis' move would be vigorously opposed by Greene.

sound. Gettinger occasionally represents the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. of this city and, it is said, the plan he and Odlum are putting together for a deal which would be acceptable to both the Stolkin group and Hughes calls for the deposit of $1,000,000 with Chemical by Atlas Corp. as an initial payment on the 1,013,420 shares of RKO Pictures common stock, representing a controlling 29 per cent interest, which is presently held by the Stolkin group.

Further Details Not Clear

Further details of the proposal were not clear but it was assumed that thereafter Atlas Corp. would assume the future stock purchase obligations of the Stolkin group to Hughes, on some basis acceptable to both of the latter. The Stolkin group agreed to pay Hughes $7 per share for the stock and made an initial payment last September of $1,500,000. A similar amount is due next year and the balance in 1954. It is assumed the Atlas proposal will call for price and other concessions from both Stolkin and Hughes.

It could not be learned whether the Atlas proposal will include a provision, or agreement, to reinstate Ned E. Depinet as RKO Pictures president and Noah Dietrich as board chairman, as currently proposed by Hughes. Observers believed that Hughes might insist on such a condition in return for any concessions, price or otherwise which he might agree to in a possible modification of the Stolkin group's stock purchase agreement.

Meanwhile, Hughes, Depinet and members of the Stolkin syndicate are continuing their conferences in Hollywood, which are expected to last several days more. It is generally believed that if a deal with Atlas is not consummated in the very near future, Hughes will pick up the reins again and designate Depinet and Dietrich his chief executive officers.

Depinet served as vice-president of RKO Pictures in charge of distribution during the previous Atlas Corp. period of RKO control. N. Peter Rathvon was Odlum's choice for president then.

Theatre Owners of America disclosed here yesterday that its Oklahoma unit, Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, had endorsed in principle the industry's arbitration plan. The Oklahoma unit is the eighth TOA affiliate to approve the tentative formula.

The endorsement by Oklahoma and other TOA units, in effect, is a vote of confidence in arbitration and a gesture that they will go along with the national organization on any formal action it may take on the issue.

UPT Divests Itself of More Than 60 Theatres

United Paramount Theatres has divested itself of over 60 theatres in conformity with its divestiture schedule requiring the sale of, or the end of joint interests in, 184 theatres by Sept. 3, 1953, a company official reported here yesterday.

UPT's report on the divestiture of the theatres came on yesterday's deadline date for divorcement of one-third of its remaining 184 theatres, which cannot be retained, according to the terms of its consent decree. The original deadline of Sept. 3, set last March by the New York Statutory Court, had been extended to Dec. 3.

According to the Statutory Court's ruling, which gave UPT 18 months to divorce itself of the 184 theatres, the next deadline is March 3 for the divestiture of another third. The ruling called for the divestiture of at least one-third of the remaining theatres in each six-month period.

UPT, when it obtained the March ruling, had already fulfilled its com-

Schary's 'Hoaxters' an Expose of Communism

Hollywood, Dec. 3.—"The Hoaxters," a 37-minute documentary produced by Dore Schary for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release, previewed here last night, is composed of expertly selected and juxtaposed footage from many sources, both foreign and domestic, assembled in such a fashion as to trace Russian Communism's course from 1919 to the present. The film, which the producer describes as a personal product more than a year in work, is technically extraordinary, with adroitly matched scenes and utterances combining with crisp off-screen commentary and a dynamic music score to give the material maximum impact. The production is being offered to exhibitors, Schary said at the preview, on a documentary scale of prices, with the company "more interested in having it widely seen than in making money on it."

Management of RKO Is Key To Atlas Plan

Would Provide Cash But Avoid Stock Purchase

The Atlas Corp. proposal for re-entering RKO Pictures is limited to control of management of the latter company and not to acquisition of the controlling stock interest, now held by the Ralph Stolkin syndicate, it was learned yesterday.

The Atlas plan is contained in a report to the board of directors of that company prepared by Floyd B. Odlum, president.

The report suggests that the Atlas board might give consideration to taking over the operation of RKO Pictures and putting it in good condition "as Atlas did before." The procedure suggested for so doing is that Atlas would advance money to RKO Pictures as needed and take new debentures to be issued by RKO in return.

An initial deposit by Atlas of $1,000,000 with Chemical Bank & Trust Co. to RKO Pictures' credit is

Rank Theatre Is Cleared Of Film Quota Default

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The summons against J. Arthur Rank's Circuits Management Association, charging the Haymarket Gaumont Theatre with failure to comply with the 25 per cent supporting film quota law, was dismissed by the Bow Street Magistrate's Court here today.

Rank personally had testified in the case at the hearing last Saturday, contending that there were not enough worthwhile British second features to meet the standard of entertainment expected of West End showplaces.

Dismissing the summons against Rank's theatre, Magistrate Sir Laurence Dunne was highly critical of the Board of Trade, which filed the complaint. In his judgment, the magistrate said, government ministers have a grave responsibility to consider all aspects before launching prosecutions such as this. "Clearly, the Board of Trade has not done that this time," he said.

The magistrate pointed out that the exhibitor's need is for films of sound, commercial practicability.

Exhibitors here are overjoyed at the verdict, saying that by his stand Rank has brought immeasurably nearer a revision of the generally repugnant supporting program quota.

Oct. Tax Income 2nd Highest This Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—General admission tax collections in October, reflecting September business, were the second highest for any 1952 month, running only slightly behind the September high, the Bureau of Internal Revenue reported. The bureau said collections in October amounted to $31,294,629, compared with $32,174,969 in September and $37,302,260 in October, 1951. September and October have been the only two months this year during which collections topped the $30,000,000 mark.

McGee Says Only Congressmen Will See Tax Picture

The short subject which Senator Milliken of Colorado suggested as the best vehicle for telling the industry's tax story is to be shown only to Senators and Congressmen and is not to be made available to exhibitors, it was stressed yesterday by Pat McGee, co-chairman of the National Tax Repeal Campaign Committee.

McGee, who was one of a delegation of Colorado theatremen who conferred last week with Senator Milliken on the industry's tax problems, emphasized in a wire to the Council of Motion Picture Organizations yesterday that the Colorado Senator said that if such a picture could be shown in Washington to groups of Senators and Congressmen it would be of great help in the industry's tax campaign.

"Neither the Senator nor any of those at the conference," McGee wired, "made any mention of making the picture available to exhibitors for screening to the public, since from the beginning of our campaign we have carefully avoided making any appeal to the general public for support. This picture would be shown only to Senators and Congressmen, either in Washington or in their home districts."

TV Promotion

into operation by next summer, is said be the most far-reaching in the so-called "wedding" of TV and the motion picture industry. Turner stressed the point here yesterday that the plan would not be applicable to all pictures, possibly only 10 a year, but that its potentialities would be the means of "harnessing TV" to bring millions of dollars back to the box-office.

Turner said that the power of television as a promotional factor in building theatre patronage was proved in the campaigns he used on "King Kong," "Snow White" and "Sudden Fear." In spots where TV was not used as an advertising medium, the grosses fell below those in areas where television was used, he said.

Preliminary Talks

In preliminary talks with a few distributors, the sales chiefs were receptive to the proposed formula, Turner said. The idea may be tested first on reissues. The plan, in substance, will function like this: Turner will arrange with a distributor to reissue a series of pictures, with the same star, in selected areas, preferably in summer months, when the more important new films are being held back. Affiliated TV stations in the areas will saturate all available air time with specially prepared trailers, using scene clips and announcements as to where a picture is playing. Instead of being paid a flat rate for the "plugs," the stations will receive a percentage of the distributor's percentage of the film's gross in each theatre. There will be no cost to the theatre. The distributor will pay the stations an amount based on the business done by the picture as a result of the television campaign. In other words, the station's arrangement with the distributor would be on a sliding scale, just as the distributor's pact with the theatre calls for a remittance based on the gross.

RKO Radio's television campaign on "King Kong" in five territories—Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh — cost $25,000 for a specific number of trailer announcements. Turner asserted that if the stations had been on a participating arrangement, they would have given a much more intensive drive to the picture, spotting the trailers in all un-sold spot announcement slots.

Turner said the plan would be specially attractive to independent producers whose releasing contracts with national distributors are about to expire. Instead of disposing of the pictures to television, the independent producer will see the opportunity to derive further revenue from theatres, with the theatres cashing in on the TV campaign.

In his contacts with TV stations, Turner said they were all cooperative, as the TV executives are eager to prove the value of the new advertising medium. If the stations can increase business in theatres through TV, they will be happy to do so, especially if they can benefit financially through the upswing in theatre patronage by means of the percentage arrangement.

While all stations in the Mutual network are not committed as yet to the plan, Turner said they will be ready to join when the plan becomes more concrete. Mutual TV outlets are in New York, Hollywood, Boston, Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Buffalo, Syracuse, Cleveland, Detroit, San Antonio, Atlanta, Louisville and Minneapolis.

show spieler as a connective device, the early portion of the film shows the rise and fall of Hitler's Nazism, Mussolini's Fascism, and Japan's Militarism, and likens Russia's Communism to them in essentials.

The latter portion of the picture traces Soviet Russia's seven changes of policy toward the United States since 1919. A great many world figures appear in the footage assembled, and original sound tracks are heard in effective alternation with commentary spoken by various actors and Schary. The over-all effect is an exposure and denouncement of Russian Communism in simple, graphic, dramatic terms, with incidental reference to the dangers of loose accusations and unwarranted condemnation, and with a rousing conclusion extolling freedom and liberty.

Associate producer Herman Hoffman wrote the story for the picture from material compiled and arranged by Victor Lasky and William Herbert, and a fine editing job is credited to Laurie Vejar and Harry Komer.

tional Allied, withdrew from membership in the parent organization two years ago over what was reported at the time to be Samuelson's dissatisfaction with Allied's policy of cooperating in all-industry endeavors. With Allied again in its so-called "militant" role, and its participation in cooperative industry activities curtailed, some Allied figures feel that the national organization may once again be radical enough to conform with Samuelson's requirements, providing acceptable terms for its reinstatement can be agreed upon.

Explore Possibilities

Irving Dollinger, chairman of New Jersey Allied, reportedly was instructed by the national Allied board at its Chicago meeting last month to explore the possibilities of a reinstatement of the Eastern Pennsylvania unit. A similar attempt at the New York national convention last year failed when Samuelson declined the proffered terms covering payment of dues for the period the unit was out of the national organization.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—Sidney Samuelson today claimed he "knows nothing" of any Allied States plan to contact him on the return of Eastern Pennsylvania Allied to membership in the national organization.

Urge Resistance

The convention adopted a resolution condemning increased admission pictures as "detrimental to theatre public relations" and urging exhibitors to resist them. It also passed a resolution calling distributor attention "again" to the "necessity of making a greater number of prints available in the exchange area." The number of situations to be serviced has been increased by the growth of outdoor operations in the past decade, while even fewer prints are available today, it was stated.

A third resolution, providing that Indiana Allied set up a system for the exchange of information on allocation and terms to aid exhibitors who are on their own in outlying situations, was tabled for subsequent action by the board. All three resolutions came out of the film clinics which occupied the convention's morning sessions both days. Attendance was light on account of bad weather.

Tobey, who is now in Paris, cabled the Commission early this week. Langer wrote the FCC expressing opposition to the Commission's decision to ignore anti-trust violations more than three years old. He also argued that the merger would reduce competition in the entertainment industry.

understood to be included in the proposal. The Odlum report sidesteps completely the acquisition by it of the 29 per cent controlling stock interest in RKO Pictures, for which the Stolkin group agreed to pay Howard Hughes in excess of $7,000,000. Presumably, that would be left to members of the Stolkin group to resolve directly with Hughes.

Substantial Profit

Hughes acquired the stock from Atlas, at a substantial profit to the latter, in 1948. Last September Hughes made the deal with the Stolkin group, which made an initial payment to him of $1,500,000. The Stolkin group is endeavoring to get out of the deal now and for the past several weeks has been negotiating with Hughes in Hollywood in an effort to reach some agreement under which it can be relieved of its purchase commitments.

Hughes appears willing, provided acceptable arrangements can be made, particularly with regard to the down payment made by the Stolkin group. In that event, it is reliably reported, RKO Pictures will go back to its pre-Stolkin status of last September, with Ned E. Depinet as president; Noah Dietrich, board chairman, and Hughes as head of production.

The trade regards such an arrangement as a temporary one, designed to ward off the pending petition for appointment of a receiver for the company and to place it in good operating condition once more so that either the Stolkin group or Hughes could obtain an acceptable offer for the controlling stock interest.

There appears to be little immediate prospect of the Odlum proposal fitting into this intention on the part of Hughes and the Stolkin group. Odlum's report is understood to be definitely averse to paying anything like the $7 per share for the controlling block that the Stolkin group is committed to pay.

Doesn't Propose Depinet

Moreover, the Odlum report does not propose Depinet for president in the event Atlas succeeded in reentering RKO Pictures by obtaining management control. Rather, it refers to losses incurred by the company during Depinet's tenure as president. The report also refers to N. Peter Rathvon, Odlum's choice as president of RKO when he acquired control before. Odlum suggests that Rathvon might be enlisted as head of production, particularly in charge of organizing independent production units to release through RKO Radio.

The report does not specify, however, that Rathvon, in that capacity, would also be the chief executive of RKO Pictures.

Not Associated with Odlum

Meanwhile, it was ascertained that Milton Gettinger, New York attorney who sometimes represents the Chemical Bank, and James A. Mulvey, president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, which releases through RKO Radio, are in no way associated with the Odlum report and proposal to the Atlas board, contrary to earlier reports.

Efforts to contact Gettinger and Mulvey on Tuesday concerning the reports were unsuccessful. Yesterday, Gettinger's office said that he is in Florida for a brief visit and, while he, too, is working on a report of RKO Picture's current position, it is not associated in any way with Odlum's. Mulvey also denied any association with the Odlum report.

"Bwana Devil"

(Arch Oboler Production) Hollywood, Dec. 3

THIS is the first feature-length dramatic narrative ever made for three-dimension motion picture purposes. It is therefore automatically the best, the worst and the average production of its kind. As it is not to be exhibited in two-dimensional form, within the predictable future at any rate, it cannot properly be rated on any existing scale of values. A purely personal opinion of it is that it is not so bad as Los Angeles newspaper critics said it is, nor as good as the first picture shot and exhibited by the Natural Vision method should have been; but is adequate for the purpose for which it was made—no more, no less.

"Bwana Devil" was produced in Ansco color by Arch Oboler, who also wrote the story and directed the performances. It is a story about Africa and animals, both of which are suitable subjects for three-dimension treatment, and it has Robert Stack, Barbara Britton and Nigel Bruce as its principal players. The story is based on a historical fact, which concerns a couple of lions which put a stop to the building of a railroad in Africa by devouring the native workmen until killed by an engineer, played by Stack.

The story is a relatively mild chronicle of some not very mild events—lion hunts, attacks, devourings, pursuits, escapes, etc.—and yet it managed to create perceptible suspense, about two thirds of its way through, in an audience seeing three-dimension exhibition for the first time in its life. The newness of the medium, the expectations of the audience, and the overwhelming camera effects inherent in "3-d," all were weighing against Oboler's chances of achieving story suspense. Although he shortly thereafter closes his picture with disappointing suddenness he has proved decisively that dramatic entertainment and "3-d" are compatible.

The picture is 79 minutes long, is obtainable for Natural Vision exhibition only, and is without a Production Code Administration seal due to a clinch sequence that is unnecessary to the story.

SEC Rejects RKO Minority Request

The Securities and Exchange Commission has disclaimed authority to intervene in the RKO Pictures situation as requested by Louis Kipnis, attorney representing three minority stockholders seeking to put the company into receivership.

Kipnis said he received SEC's response in a letter yesterday, which said in part: "Please be advised that the Commission's statutory authority in a situation of the kind indicated by your letters runs only to the solicitation of proxies and matters incidental thereto. The Commission has no power under the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 to intervene in matters of internal management."

Kipnis in two letters sent to the SEC asked the commission to investigate whether Howard Hughes was a bona fide candidate as a director, along with his nominees, when proxies were sent out last May. He also called upon the Commission to stop alleged dealings in the sale of the company's directors' and officers' posts. Kipnis contended that Hughes was negotiating for the sale of his 29 per cent stock interest to the Ralph Stolkin group when the proxies were sent out.

Meanwhile, Kipnis reported he has received no reply to his request for a change in the company's by-laws which was enclosed in a letter to the company. The attorney representing three stockholders, claiming to own 2,525 shares, proposed in his letter that 10 per cent of the stockholders should be granted the authority to call a special meeting of stockholders and that the quorum for the board be increased from two to three directors.

RKO Foreign Post To Edwin Smith

Appointment of Edwin J. Smith, Jr., as assistant foreign sales manager of RKO Radio Pictures, was announced here yesterday by Alfred Crown, foreign manager. The post is a new one, created by the resignations of B. D. Lion and Ned Clarke, division managers in the foreign department. The appointment becomes effective on Monday.

Smith has been with the RKO organization for many years, having joined the domestic sales department in 1931. He rejoined RKO in 1946 after serving three years in the Army Signal Corps, becoming assistant treasurer and assistant secretary.

Crown also announced the promotions of Melvin Danheiser and Arthur Herskovitz to assist Smith with European-Australasian and Latin American-Far Eastern operations, respectively.

Find Giant Synchro Screen Impressive

An impressive demonstration of RCA's giant Synchro-Screen was held here yesterday at the RKO 58th Street Theatre, which will show the screen to the general public tomorrow.

The added dimensions of the screen and the "light surround" intensify the panoramic view of the film. It also heightens the color values of Technicolor. Presented at the demonstration were newsreel shots and scenes from "Way of A Gaucho" and "Lure of the Wilderness."

Sol Schwartz, president of RKO Theatres, who attended the demonstration, said the screen was especially advantageous to balcony viewers, bringing them closer to the picture.

The picture width of the new screen is 30 feet, 7 inches, with 12-foot wings on each side, heightening the effect of bigness. The RKO 58th Street installation is the first in the U. S. The screen, the largest ever made by RCA, filled the theatre's entire proscenium.

'Quiet Man' Boom Saves Doomed House

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Exhibitors Harry Sears and Dick Zazove, owners of the Park Theatre in suburban Austin, who last month were prepared to close the house and end their connection with the industry following a four-day run of Republic's "The Quiet Man," are now solidly entrenched at the Park with no intention of closing up shop. At the same time they are trying to hold their print of the picture.

What happened was this: The projected four-day run that started Nov. 9 is still running strong, with business 300 per cent above normal. But Republic has delivered an ultimatum that the print must be returned by next Tuesday, so that the exchange can service other theatres. The exhibitors feel that the film would be able to hold up until after the first of the year in their predominantly Irish neighborhood, but are now resigned to acceding to the distributor's demands. At the moment a "bicycling" arrangement has been worked out with the Balaban and Katz Senate Theatre.

UPT Divests Itself of More Than 60 Theatres

United Paramount Theatres has divested itself of over 60 theatres in conformity with its divestiture schedule requiring the sale of, or the end of joint interests in, 184 theatres by Sept. 3, 1953, a company official reported here yesterday.

UPT's report on the divestiture of the theatres came on yesterday's deadline date for divorcement of one-third of its remaining 184 theatres, which cannot be retained, according to the terms of its consent decree. The original deadline of Sept. 3, set last March by the New York Statutory Court, had been extended to Dec. 3.

According to the Statutory Court's ruling, which gave UPT 18 months to divorce itself of the 184 theatres, the next deadline is March 3 for the divestiture of another third. The ruling called for the divestiture of at least one-third of the remaining theatres in each six-month period.

The film, which the producer describes as a personal product more than a year in work, is technically extraordinary, with adroitly matched scenes and utterances combining with crisp off-screen commentary and a dynamic music score to give the material maximum impact. The report suggests that the Atlas board might give consideration to taking over the operation of RKO Pictures and putting it in good condition "as Atlas did before." # Rank Theatre Is Cleared Of Film Quota Default

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The summons against J. Arthur Rank's Circuits Management Association, charging the Haymarket Gaumont Theatre with failure to comply with the 25 per cent supporting film quota law, was dismissed by the Bow Street Magistrate's Court here today.

Rank personally had testified in the case at the hearing last Saturday, contending that there were not enough worthwhile British second features to meet the standard of entertainment expected of West End showplaces.

Dismissing the summons against Rank's theatre, Magistrate Sir Laurence Dunne was highly critical of the Board of Trade, which filed the complaint. In his judgment, the magistrate said, government ministers have a grave responsibility to consider all aspects before launching prosecutions such as this. "Clearly, the Board of Trade has not done that this time," he said.

The magistrate pointed out that the exhibitor's need is for films of sound, commercial practicability.

Exhibitors here are overjoyed at the verdict, saying that by his stand Rank has brought immeasurably nearer a revision of the generally repugnant supporting program quota.

Oct. Tax Income 2nd Highest This Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—General admission tax collections in October, reflecting September business, were the second highest for any 1952 month, running only slightly behind the September high, the Bureau of Internal Revenue reported. October collections were far below those for October, 1951, however. The October collections were tops last year.

The bureau said collections in October amounted to $31,294,629, compared with $32,174,969 in September and $37,302,260 in October, 1951. September and October have been the only two months this year during which collections topped the $30,000,000 mark.

Dismiss $1,300,000 Suit vs. Silverman

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Federal Judge Walter La Buy today dismissed the $1,300,000 suit brought by E. Stern and the Sidney Spiegel Estate against Edwin Silverman and associates for alleged "mismanagement" which led to the plaintiff (Stern and the Spiegel Estate) receiving $1,200,000 for the sale to Silverman of their stock in Essaness Theatres instead of the $2,500,000 to which they thought they should have been entitled. Judge La Buy's decision confirmed that of the Illinois court.

Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II were honor guests at a dinner given by the Joint Defense Appeal at the Hotel Pierre last night. They were cited for their outstanding contributions to "the enrichment of America's cultural legacy."

Dinner chairman Harry Brandt, 1951 JDA drive chairman, was presented with a scroll for his "pioneering leadership" of the drive. "Audition for Angels," a dramatic presentation produced by Morton Sunshine and enacted by a cast of notables was the high spot of the event. Proceeds of the affair are to further the programs of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

A full hour documentary radio program devoted to producer Samuel Goldwyn will be broadcast to British listeners on March 1, it was announced by John McMillan of the BBC "light programs" network, who is visiting in New York. The show will dramatize Goldwyn's characteristics, his ideals and his methods of working, he said.

McMillan said this will be the first time a motion picture producer has been the subject of a detailed documentary program on the BBC. McMillan will leave for Hollywood Sunday to work on the show and other projects.

McGee Says Only Congressmen Will See Tax Picture

The short subject which Senator Milliken of Colorado suggested as the best vehicle for telling the industry's tax story is to be shown only to Senators and Congressmen and is not to be made available to exhibitors, it was stressed yesterday by Pat McGee, co-chairman of the National Tax Repeal Campaign Committee.

McGee, who was one of a delegation of Colorado theatremen who conferred last week with Senator Milliken on the industry's tax problems, emphasized in a wire to the Council of Motion Picture Organizations yesterday that the Colorado Senator said that if such a picture could be shown in Washington to groups of Senators and Congressmen it would be of great help in the industry's tax campaign.

"Neither the Senator nor any of those at the conference," McGee wired, "made any mention of making the picture available to exhibitors for screening to the public, since from the beginning of our campaign we have carefully avoided making any appeal to the general public for support. This picture would be shown only to Senators and Congressmen, either in Washington or in their home districts."

TV Promotion

into operation by next summer, is said be the most far-reaching in the so-called "wedding" of TV and the motion picture industry. Turner stressed the point here yesterday that the plan would not be applicable to all pictures, possibly only 10 a year, but that its potentialities would be the means of "harnessing TV" to bring millions of dollars back to the box-office.

Turner said that the power of television as a promotional factor in building theatre patronage was proved in the campaigns he used on "King Kong," "Snow White" and "Sudden Fear." In spots where TV was not used as an advertising medium, the grosses fell below those in areas where television was used, he said.

Preliminary Talks

In preliminary talks with a few distributors, the sales chiefs were receptive to the proposed formula, Turner said. The idea may be tested first on reissues. The plan, in substance, will function like this: Turner will arrange with a distributor to reissue a series of pictures, with the same star, in selected areas, preferably in summer months, when the more important new films are being held back. Affiliated TV stations in the areas will saturate all available air time with specially prepared trailers, using scene clips and announcements as to where a picture is playing. Instead of being paid a flat rate for the "plugs," the stations will receive a percentage of the distributor's percentage of the film's gross in each theatre. There will be no cost to the theatre. The distributor will pay the stations an amount based on the business done by the picture as a result of the television campaign. In other words, the station's arrangement with the distributor would be on a sliding scale, just as the distributor's pact with the theatre calls for a remittance based on the gross.

RKO Radio's television campaign on "King Kong" in five territories—Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh — cost $25,000 for a specific number of trailer announcements. Turner asserted that if the stations had been on a participating arrangement, they would have given a much more intensive drive to the picture, spotting the trailers in all un-sold spot announcement slots.

Turner said the plan would be specially attractive to independent producers whose releasing contracts with national distributors are about to expire. Instead of disposing of the pictures to television, the independent producer will see the opportunity to derive further revenue from theatres, with the theatres cashing in on the TV campaign.

In his contacts with TV stations, Turner said they were all cooperative, as the TV executives are eager to prove the value of the new advertising medium. If the stations can increase business in theatres through TV, they will be happy to do so, especially if they can benefit financially through the upswing in theatre patronage by means of the percentage arrangement.

While all stations in the Mutual network are not committed as yet to the plan, Turner said they will be ready to join when the plan becomes more concrete. Mutual TV outlets are in New York, Hollywood, Boston, Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Buffalo, Syracuse, Cleveland, Detroit, San Antonio, Atlanta, Louisville and Minneapolis.

show spieler as a connective device, the early portion of the film shows the rise and fall of Hitler's Nazism, Mussolini's Fascism, and Japan's Militarism, and likens Russia's Communism to them in essentials.

The latter portion of the picture traces Soviet Russia's seven changes of policy toward the United States since 1919. A great many world figures appear in the footage assembled, and original sound tracks are heard in effective alternation with commentary spoken by various actors and Schary. The over-all effect is an exposure and denouncement of Russian Communism in simple, graphic, dramatic terms, with incidental reference to the dangers of loose accusations and unwarranted condemnation, and with a rousing conclusion extolling freedom and liberty.

Associate producer Herman Hoffman wrote the story for the picture from material compiled and arranged by Victor Lasky and William Herbert, and a fine editing job is credited to Laurie Vejar and Harry Komer.

tional Allied, withdrew from membership in the parent organization two years ago over what was reported at the time to be Samuelson's dissatisfaction with Allied's policy of cooperating in all-industry endeavors. With Allied again in its so-called "militant" role, and its participation in cooperative industry activities curtailed, some Allied figures feel that the national organization may once again be radical enough to conform with Samuelson's requirements, providing acceptable terms for its reinstatement can be agreed upon.

Explore Possibilities

Irving Dollinger, chairman of New Jersey Allied, reportedly was instructed by the national Allied board at its Chicago meeting last month to explore the possibilities of a reinstatement of the Eastern Pennsylvania unit. A similar attempt at the New York national convention last year failed when Samuelson declined the proffered terms covering payment of dues for the period the unit was out of the national organization.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—Sidney Samuelson today claimed he "knows nothing" of any Allied States plan to contact him on the return of Eastern Pennsylvania Allied to membership in the national organization.

Urge Resistance

The convention adopted a resolution condemning increased admission pictures as "detrimental to theatre public relations" and urging exhibitors to resist them. It also passed a resolution calling distributor attention "again" to the "necessity of making a greater number of prints available in the exchange area." The number of situations to be serviced has been increased by the growth of outdoor operations in the past decade, while even fewer prints are available today, it was stated.

A third resolution, providing that Indiana Allied set up a system for the exchange of information on allocation and terms to aid exhibitors who are on their own in outlying situations, was tabled for subsequent action by the board. All three resolutions came out of the film clinics which occupied the convention's morning sessions both days. Attendance was light on account of bad weather.

Tobey, who is now in Paris, cabled the Commission early this week. Both the FCC and Tobey's office refused to discuss the cablegram, but it was reliably reported that he suggested that the Commission withhold further action on the case until he returns late this month and has had a chance to study it in greater detail.

Langer wrote the FCC expressing opposition to the Commission's decision to ignore anti-trust violations more than three years old. He also argued that the merger would reduce competition in the entertainment industry.

understood to be included in the proposal. The Odlum report sidesteps completely the acquisition by it of the 29 per cent controlling stock interest in RKO Pictures, for which the Stolkin group agreed to pay Howard Hughes in excess of $7,000,000. Presumably, that would be left to members of the Stolkin group to resolve directly with Hughes.

Substantial Profit

Hughes acquired the stock from Atlas, at a substantial profit to the latter, in 1948. Last September Hughes made the deal with the Stolkin group, which made an initial payment to him of $1,500,000. The Stolkin group is endeavoring to get out of the deal now and for the past several weeks has been negotiating with Hughes in Hollywood in an effort to reach some agreement under which it can be relieved of its purchase commitments.

Hughes appears willing, provided acceptable arrangements can be made, particularly with regard to the down payment made by the Stolkin group. In that event, it is reliably reported, RKO Pictures will go back to its pre-Stolkin status of last September, with Ned E. Depinet as president; Noah Dietrich, board chairman, and Hughes as head of production.

The trade regards such an arrangement as a temporary one, designed to ward off the pending petition for appointment of a receiver for the company and to place it in good operating condition once more so that either the Stolkin group or Hughes could obtain an acceptable offer for the controlling stock interest.

There appears to be little immediate prospect of the Odlum proposal fitting into this intention on the part of Hughes and the Stolkin group. Odlum's report is understood to be definitely averse to paying anything like the $7 per share for the controlling block that the Stolkin group is committed to pay.

Doesn't Propose Depinet

Moreover, the Odlum report does not propose Depinet for president in the event Atlas succeeded in reentering RKO Pictures by obtaining management control. Rather, it refers to losses incurred by the company during Depinet's tenure as president. The report also refers to N. Peter Rathvon, Odlum's choice as president of RKO when he acquired control before. Odlum suggests that Rathvon might be enlisted as head of production, particularly in charge of organizing independent production units to release through RKO Radio.

The report does not specify, however, that Rathvon, in that capacity, would also be the chief executive of RKO Pictures.

Not Associated with Odlum

Meanwhile, it was ascertained that Milton Gettinger, New York attorney who sometimes represents the Chemical Bank, and James A. Mulvey, president of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, which releases through RKO Radio, are in no way associated with the Odlum report and proposal to the Atlas board, contrary to earlier reports.

Efforts to contact Gettinger and Mulvey on Tuesday concerning the reports were unsuccessful. Yesterday, Gettinger's office said that he is in Florida for a brief visit and, while he, too, is working on a report of RKO Picture's current position, it is not associated in any way with Odlum's. Mulvey also denied any association with the Odlum report.

"Bwana Devil"

(Arch Oboler Production) Hollywood, Dec. 3

THIS is the first feature-length dramatic narrative ever made for three-dimension motion picture purposes. It is therefore automatically the best, the worst and the average production of its kind. As it is not to be exhibited in two-dimensional form, within the predictable future at any rate, it cannot properly be rated on any existing scale of values. A purely personal opinion of it is that it is not so bad as Los Angeles newspaper critics said it is, nor as good as the first picture shot and exhibited by the Natural Vision method should have been; but is adequate for the purpose for which it was made—no more, no less.

"Bwana Devil" was produced in Ansco color by Arch Oboler, who also wrote the story and directed the performances. It is a story about Africa and animals, both of which are suitable subjects for three-dimension treatment, and it has Robert Stack, Barbara Britton and Nigel Bruce as its principal players. The story is based on a historical fact, which concerns a couple of lions which put a stop to the building of a railroad in Africa by devouring the native workmen until killed by an engineer, played by Stack.

The story is a relatively mild chronicle of some not very mild events—lion hunts, attacks, devourings, pursuits, escapes, etc.—and yet it managed to create perceptible suspense, about two thirds of its way through, in an audience seeing three-dimension exhibition for the first time in its life. The newness of the medium, the expectations of the audience, and the overwhelming camera effects inherent in "3-d," all were weighing against Oboler's chances of achieving story suspense. Although he shortly thereafter closes his picture with disappointing suddenness he has proved decisively that dramatic entertainment and "3-d" are compatible.

The picture is 79 minutes long, is obtainable for Natural Vision exhibition only, and is without a Production Code Administration seal due to a clinch sequence that is unnecessary to the story. WILLIAM R. WEAVER

SEC Rejects RKO Minority Request

The Securities and Exchange Commission has disclaimed authority to intervene in the RKO Pictures situation as requested by Louis Kipnis, attorney representing three minority stockholders seeking to put the company into receivership.

Kipnis said he received SEC's response in a letter yesterday, which said in part: "Please be advised that the Commission's statutory authority in a situation of the kind indicated by your letters runs only to the solicitation of proxies and matters incidental thereto. The Commission has no power under the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 to intervene in matters of internal management."

Kipnis in two letters sent to the SEC asked the commission to investigate whether Howard Hughes was a bona fide candidate as a director, along with his nominees, when proxies were sent out last May. He also called upon the Commission to stop alleged dealings in the sale of the company's directors' and officers' posts. Kipnis contended that Hughes was negotiating for the sale of his 29 per cent stock interest to the Ralph Stolkin group when the proxies were sent out.

Meanwhile, Kipnis reported he has received no reply to his request for a change in the company's by-laws which was enclosed in a letter to the company. The attorney representing three stockholders, claiming to own 2,525 shares, proposed in his letter that 10 per cent of the stockholders should be granted the authority to call a special meeting of stockholders and that the quorum for the board be increased from two to three directors.

RKO Foreign Post To Edwin Smith

Appointment of Edwin J. Smith, Jr., as assistant foreign sales manager of RKO Radio Pictures, was announced here yesterday by Alfred Crown, foreign manager. The post is a new one, created by the resignations of B. D. Lion and Ned Clarke, division managers in the foreign department. The appointment becomes effective on Monday.

Smith has been with the RKO organization for many years, having joined the domestic sales department in 1931. He rejoined RKO in 1946 after serving three years in the Army Signal Corps, becoming assistant treasurer and assistant secretary.

Crown also announced the promotions of Melvin Danheiser and Arthur Herskovitz to assist Smith with European-Australasian and Latin American-Far Eastern operations, respectively.

The last dividend, of 10 cents per share, was declared on Sept. 15, 1951.

Find Giant Synchro Screen Impressive

An impressive demonstration of RCA's giant Synchro-Screen was held here yesterday at the RKO 58th Street Theatre, which will show the screen to the general public tomorrow.

The added dimensions of the screen and the "light surround" intensify the panoramic view of the film. It also heightens the color values of Technicolor. Presented at the demonstration were newsreel shots and scenes from "Way of A Gaucho" and "Lure of the Wilderness."

Sol Schwartz, president of RKO Theatres, who attended the demonstration, said the screen was especially advantageous to balcony viewers, bringing them closer to the picture.

The picture width of the new screen is 30 feet, 7 inches, with 12-foot wings on each side, heightening the effect of bigness. The RKO 58th Street installation is the first in the U. S. The screen, the largest ever made by RCA, filled the theatre's entire proscenium.

Roxy Installs Large Size Walker Screen

Installation of a new Walker screen, measuring 32 feet high and 24 feet wide, is underway at the shuttered Roxy Theatre, which will reopen Dec. 22.

'Quiet Man' Boom Saves Doomed House

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Exhibitors Harry Sears and Dick Zazove, owners of the Park Theatre in suburban Austin, who last month were prepared to close the house and end their connection with the industry following a four-day run of Republic's "The Quiet Man," are now solidly entrenched at the Park with no intention of closing up shop. At the same time they are trying to hold their print of the picture.

What happened was this: The projected four-day run that started Nov. 9 is still running strong, with business 300 per cent above normal. But Republic has delivered an ultimatum that the print must be returned by next Tuesday, so that the exchange can service other theatres. The exhibitors feel that the film would be able to hold up until after the first of the year in their predominantly Irish neighborhood, but are now resigned to acceding to the distributor's demands. At the moment a "bicycling" arrangement has been worked out with the Balaban and Katz Senate Theatre.

Hughes Gets RKO Stock; Depinet Again President

Chicago Group Waives $1,250,000 Payment In Return for Release from Commitments And Liabilities; Depinet Given Autonomy

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—The Ralph Stolkin syndicate ended weeks of negotiations here today by forfeiting the $1,250,000 cash payment it made to Howard Hughes in September for the 29 per cent controlling stock interest in RKO Pictures. Hughes resumes ownership of the stock and control of the company in return for a waiver of liability to members of the Stolkin group and their release from all obligations under the stock purchase agreement which called for the further payment to Hughes of $6,000,000 during the next two years with provisions for interest and penalties in event of default.

As a result of the agreement Ned E. Depinet, who participated in the agreements here, again becomes president of RKO Pictures, effective immediately. Hughes has agreed to give Depinet complete autonomy in the management of the company. Presumably, this extends to the designation of a studio head, which accordingly need not necessarily be Hughes,

FCC Replies to Senator Tobey's Letter in Opposition to Early Approval of Merger

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The Federal Communications Commission has assured Senator Tobey that it will give "careful study and consideration" to all of the objections before reaching a final decision on the proposed merger of American Broadcasting Co. and United Paramount Theatres.

Both Tobey, who will head the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee next year, and Senator Langer, who will head the Judiciary Committee, have protested early approval of the merger as recently recommended by FCC hearing examiner Leo Resnick.

Today the FCC made public the letters from Tobey and Langer and also the Commission's replies. It also made public a letter from Senator Robertson, Virginia Democrat, urging the Commission to expedite action on the case. Robertson said he had some constituents operating

The proposed legislation, it is said, would make investments in new the-

Shupert Joining UA-TV Affiliate

George T. Shupert has been appointed vice-president and general manager of United Artists Television Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of United Artists, it was announced by Robert Benjamin, chairman of the board. Shupert succeeds John Mitchell who resigned to join Columbia Pictures' Screen Gems-TV.

Shupert, currently vice-president of Peerless Film Productions, and formerly vice-president and director of commercial operations for Paramount Television Productions, will assume his new posts on Monday. United Artists Television distributes film programs made especially for television and does not handle United Artists' feature pictures, which are exhibited only in theatres, said a company statement.

A Detroit investment banker for 14 years before entering the visual media field, Shupert, in 1940, organized Paramount Pictures' industrial film division and served as its sales director for three years. He began his television activities in 1943 as assistant to Paul Raibourn, president of Paramount Television. In Oct., 1951, Shupert helped set up Peerless Films.

Kansas City Holds Hearings On New Censor Ordinance

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 4.—A City Council committee held a hearing today on a substitute ordinance providing for the review of motion pictures, but also providing that the reviewer may give certificates of approval without reviewing pictures, in cases where the reviewer and welfare director accept the opinion on such pictures of national accredited reviewing organizations or associations.

The reviewer and director may, however, later modify a certificate or after 15 days notice revoke the certificate on further observation or information. Newsreels are exempted from review. A new feature beyond the present censorship ordinance now in force prohibits the offer or exhibition of posters, billboards or similar advertising of motion pictures that are considered objectionable on the same grounds as pictures are judged. Fees for certifiicates are unchanged.

Arthur Cole, president of the Motion Picture Association of Greater Kansas City, Senn Lawler, secretary, and R. R. Biechele, spoke. No major objections against the substitute ordinance was made by any interested group at the hearing except that censorship is itself deplored and that any such ordinance may be unconstitutional. Industry representatives have worked with other groups and city department people for several months developing this proposed ordinance.

Souvaine Position In Suit Explained

The inclusion of Souvaine Selective Pictures as a defendant in Chesapeake Industries' Federal Court suit to exercise a chattel mortgage and promissory note against Lou Bunin Productions, Inc., producers and owners of "Alice in Wonderland," "is purely of a technical nature," explains David P. Wiener, comptroller of Souvaine.

Chesapeake is suing to recover $24,626 balance said to be due from Bunin, which, it is asserted, was advanced to Bunin to cover certain costs of "Alice" before the picture was given to Souvaine to distribute. "This indebtedness," continued Wiener, "is entirely a matter of the alleged liability of Bunin to Chesapeake, and not of Souvaine."

UA Opens Its First Exchange in Albany

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 4.—United Artists has opened a film exchange here in quarters rented from National Screen Service. Established to provide better service for exhibitors of the district, it is the first to be operated by UA in Albany, which heretofore has been serviced out of New York City and Buffalo. Robert Adler, Monogram booker-salesman here for five years, has been appointed UA sales manager. Moe Dudelson, district manager, and Manny Brown, Buffalo branch manager, came here for the opening.

Dale Herman, former supervisor for Smith-Howell Film Delivery Service, succeeds Adler at Monogram.

Says Publicity Aid Of Producers a Must

To assure maximum grosses in the current film market, a producer, along with the stars, must assist actively in publicity and exploitation campaigns, Frederick Brisson, producer, said here yesterday enroute to Washington.

In the Capital, he will discuss plans for the world premiere of Independent Artists' "Never Wave at A WAC," which he produced and is releasing through RKO Pictures. Conferences will be held with General Omar Bradley and Assistant Secretary of Defense Mrs. Anna Rosenberg. The premiere will be held in Washington in late January with President-elect and Mrs. Eisenhower as likely guests of honor, he said.

In order to insure the participation of stars, Brisson noted that he had included a clause in the contracts of Rosalind Russell, Paul Douglas and Marie Wilson, all featured in the film, requiring them to make a minimum of six personal appearances with the picture at key openings.

Delay Col. Minority Bond Counter-action

A postponement until Dec. 15 was granted here yesterday on the show cause order calling upon Columbia minority stockholder William B. Weinberger of New York to post bond in connection with his anti-trust suit against the company.

The action in New York Supreme Court was brought by the company under a section in the general corporation law which requests the plaintiff in a minority suit to post a bond of $75,000 in cash or $50,000 worth of the company's securities to cover legal fees in case the suit is lost by the plaintiff. The minority suit seeks to enjoin the company and its officers from engaging in alleged anti-trust practices in connection with the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures.

Zukor Biography an Industry History

The autobiography of Adolph Zukor, which will be told by biographer Dale Kramer, will also be a history of motion pictures besides conveying reminiscences of many of the famous personalities he encountered in his 50-year career in the industry.

The book will be published by G. P. Putnam's Sons in the fall of 1953, during the "Golden Jubilee" year of the board chairman of Paramount Pictures.

Snaper, Majors in Arbitration Talks

Wilbur Snaper, national Allied president, revealed here yesterday that he had discussed renewal of arbitration talks with both exhibitor and distributor leaders, but no decision had been reached. When asked what the nature of his discussions was, Snaper said, "Our talks were toward the goal of making arbitration a reality." He declined further comment.

Meanwhile, William F. Rodgers, chairman of the distributors' arbitration committee, leaves next week for an extended Florida vacation, which means that a key figure in the arbitration planning board will not be present if exhibitor-distributor negotiations for a mutually approved system should be resumed. Rodgers said here yesterday that he would not delay his trip in view of possible new conferences on the issue.

Exhibit on National Tour

the exposition, will direct the State Fair engagement as well as the tour, assisted by his co-chairmen. He currently is conferring with officials of the American Association of Railroads regarding complete details and plans for the tour. The plans will be presented to the board of directors of national COMPO at its Chicago meeting on Dec. 10-11, by R. J. O'Donnell, national director of "Movietime U.S.A." and co-chairman of Texas COMPO with Col. H. A. Cole.

The streamliner will be designed in white, with a red, white and blue motif, each of the cars bearing the industry's "Movietime" trademark. Twelve of the cars will house Hollywood studio exhibits, which will include historical data, costumes, properties, miniature sets and material showing the growth of the industry from magic lantern days to Cinerama. The exhibits will total approximately 11,000 items.

One of the cars will be especially equipped to carry network radio broadcasts; another will present television programs in which audiences at the various stops of the tour will participate. Two cars will be equipped to serve the press, the executive staff and the crew.

Still another car will be converted into a miniature theatre for the showing of a 20-minute subject covering the history of the industry with much of the material taken from the archives of Hollywood studios which will be assembled by Hollywood writers, directors and producers.

Another car will become a miniature motion picture studio for screen tests to execute the Leonard Goldenson plan for a national talent search, in which all theatres in the United States will have an opportunity to offer contestants and candidates. Tests will be made by noted Hollywood directors and writers who will be aboard for this particular assignment.

One of the features of both the exposition and the tour will be a $5,000 contest in which awards will be made to persons submitting the closest estimates of the number of feet of film used by the industry in producing talking pictures and color pictures. The talking picture footage contest will be confined to the exposition at the Texas State Fair and the color film footage will be covered exclusively by the tour.

"This cavalcade," said a COMPO statement, "regarded as one of the most ambitious efforts to date in the motion picture field of public relations, will have the active cooperation and sponsorship of all Hollywood studios, guilds, organizations, stars and players, all of whom will be an important part of the venture. Fans throughout the entire country will be given the opportunity of meeting personally their favorites in acting, producing, directing, writing and all related fields of the cinema.

"We shall make every effort to visit all communities possible," Short declared. "We hope to cover some of the most remote territories as well as the large cities."

"There is a possibility for the motion picture industry to parade before 2,500,000 persons at the State Fair alone, with an additional 50,000,000 persons being given the opportunity of seeing, inspecting and enjoying the industry's caravan."

It will also launch the world wide Adolph Zukor "Golden Jubilee" celebration marking the film veteran's 50 years in show business, which will be climaxed by a dinner and celebration in New York at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria on March 4, the date on which he opened his first nickelodeon theatre in that city and started his film career.

RKO Radio Pictures will release in the U. S. and some foreign countries an English-dubbed Norwegian feature-length documentary, "Heavy Water," which tells about the battle of Norwegian and British saboteurs to prevent the Germans from developing an atomic bomb in World War II.

The film was photographed in the Norwegian locale where the story is laid.

films dealing with the works and lives of renowned artists will be offered next year. Three of the subjects prereleased this year, "Curtain Call"—art of Degas, "I Rember the Glory"—art of Botticelli, and "Light in the Window"—art of Vermeer, will lead the series. Others are "Birth of Venus"—art of the Rennaissance, "Joy of Living"—art of Renoir, "The Young Immortal"—art of Raphael, and "The Night Watch"—art of Rembrandt. Marilyn Silverstone, as associate producer, headed a production unit that photographed the paintings in European and American art galleries and museums. Jean Oser directed for producer Boris Vermont.

Terrytoons will be represented by 30 in Technicolor. Twenty-six will be new, four will be reissues.

Six sport reels will come from Movietone News, with sportscaster Mel Allen narrating highlights of athletic competitions as well as sidelines of sport. Movietone will introduce a special series of six 10-minute shorts dealing with headline news events. Two Lew Lehr featurettes will be reissued.

Early Test

For example, the experiment on the new picture may be made in the West, while the test on the reissue may be held in the South or East. It may be, he added, that the new picture experiment will be tried with a single Broadway theatre.

Possibly 30 theatres within a 50-mile orbit of a television station will be tied in on the initial tests. Turner said that he had received a number of inquiries from interested distributors after the announcement of the plan was reported yesterday in MOTION PICTURE DAILY. Titles of the pictures to be used in the tests will be revealed shortly.

Under the plan, television stations will saturate their areas with trailers on specific pictures playing at theatres within their orbit. Instead of receiving a flat fee for the time slots, the stations will share in the distributors' percentage of the gross. Eighteen stations, owned by, or affiliated with Mutual will participate in the plan.

radio stations with ABC programs and that they would appreciate an early decision. In reply the Commission said it would handle the case as expeditiously as consistent with the legal requirements and fairness to the various parties.

In his protest, Tobey said he was shocked that Resnick had ignored the recommendations of the FCC staff, who had opposed the merger. He said he hoped the Commission would consider these objections before reaching its decision.

In reply, acting chairman Hyde said that the Commission would give full consideration to all of the recommendations of the examiner and also to all of the exceptions filed by the FCC staff and other parties.

Langer, in his letter, also attacked Resnick's decision and said that he was protesting also to the Attorney General so that the Justice Department could make a thorough study of the anti-trust aspects of the case and submit recommendations both to the FCC and to the Judiciary Committee.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that discussions on production and exhibition plans are continuing here among company executives, including Roberts and Mayer. Joseph Kaufman, director of exhibition and theatre operations for Cinerama Productions, announced that a series of seven special matinees has been scheduled for "This Is Cinerama" at the Broadway Theatre between Christmas and New Year's Day to take care of the heavy demand for tickets.

The extra performances were scheduled following the sell-out of all regular performances for the eight-day period and the denial of more than 100,000 applications for tickets.

The annual meeting of stockholders reelected the following to the board: Frank M. Smith, Paul W. Kesten, Marion C. Cooper, Thomas L. Perkins, Milo Sutliff and Alger B. Chapman.

who was the head of the studio and managing director of production for four years prior to the sale of the Hughes and Depinet stock amounting to some 1,047,000 shares for $7 per share to the Stolkin group.

Whether or not Noah Dietrich will again become chairman of the board of RKO Pictures was not immediately determined. Presumably, that too will be Depinet's decision to make.

It was reported but not confirmed that Hughes accorded the Stolkin group some future rights to re-purchase a part of his RKO Pictures stockholdings at an equitable price, presumably for re-sale in the event the company is re-established on a profitable basis. In that eventuality, members of the Stolkin group would be in a position to dispose of the stock advantageously and thus recoup some part of the $1,250,000 down payment they are sacrificing now.

Lengthy Negotiations

The agreement today came after lengthy negotiations here between the Stolkin group principals and Hughes. Members of the group in addition to Stolkin are A. L. Koolish, Ray Ryan, E. J. Burke and Sherrill Corwin. It was reported that an agreement calling merely for deferment of the syndicate's remaining payments to Hughes, with Hughes re-assuming management control of RKO, might have been reached earlier except for objections by Corwin. The latter, it is said, insisted upon being freed of all continuing obligations to which he was liable under the stock purchase agreement. Unable to swing Corwin, other members of the Stolkin syndicate, it is said, agreed to return the stock to Hughes and made the final agreement. Next week a further payment of $400,000 in interest reportedly was due Hughes from the Stolkin group. A payment of $1,500,000 in principal would come due next year and the balance in 1954.

The settlement permits RKO attorneys to go into court in New York next Wednesday in a strong position to argue against the pending action there for appointment of a receiver for the company.

Depinet may again offer positions to the RKO executives who were dismissed during the abortive two-month regime of Arnold Grant. Grant was installed by the Stolkin group as chief executive officer of RKO following the purchase of the Hughes stock. The replaced RKO executives include: Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution; Robert Mochrie, domestic sales manager; J. Miller Walker, secretary, and a number of department heads. Whether or not all would respond to a recall is unknown. Reisman now is vice-president of Joseph P. Kennedy Industries, Mochrie is sales manager for Samuel Goldwyn Productions, and other former RKO executives are now in other posts. Alfred W. Crown holds the RKO foreign sales post now and Charles Boasberg the post of general sales manager.

Meanwhile, Hughes has obtained government approval for the release of his RKO Theatres stock from trusteeship, in which it was placed as a condition of the company's Federal consent decree prohibiting individual ownership of both picture and theatre interests. The theatre stock again would have to be returned to trusteeship by Hughes.

Brief, Eventful And Unhappy

The Stolkin group's tenure in RKO was a brief, eventful and presumably unhappy one. Shortly after the purchase of the stock, the Wall Street Journal ran an expose of past business activities of Stolkin and Koolish which revealed them to have been cited by Better Business Bureaus, the Federal Trade Commission and the Postoffice Department for allegedly unethical practices in the mail order business and in distribution of punchboards. Ryan was revealed to have figured in the Kefauver Senate crime investigations of a year ago and to have numbered underworld figures among his acquaintances. The expose forced the resignations of Stolkin and Koolish and that of William Gorman, Ryan's representative on the RKO board. Grant, unable to reorganize the RKO board, could not proceed with the operation of the company and resigned last month.

Review

"Meet Me at the Fair"

(Universal-International)

FRESH personalities and the polished song-and-dance-man, Dan Dailey, have combined their talents in an impressive, engaging musical that is geared for strong box-office returns. In color by Technicolor, it has diversified appeal for any audience and is warmly and unpretentiously played by a trio of new performers, and Dailey and Diana Lynn.

Foremost of the trio is Chet Allen, a boy soprano who is well-known to TV viewers for his acclaimed performances in Gian-Carlo Menotti's Christmas opera, "Amahl and the Night Visitors." His beautiful voice is highlighted to fine advantage with "Ave Maria" and in several jazz-type duets. Noteworthy, too, are "Remember the Time," delivered by Dailey and Carole Matthews, and the latter's singing of the title song. Miss Matthews is a very smooth performer who sings, dances and acts a familiar role with surprising attractiveness. Pleasant "Scat Man" Crothers winningly portrays the assistant of Dailey, who plays the owner of a medicine show.

The screenplay, by Irving Wallace, and an adaptation by Martin Berkeley are derived from a Gene Markey novel, "The Great Companions." The story has Dailey pick up Allen, an escaped orphan from a viciously-run, corrupt detention home, and hide him from the incumbent political party which fears an election expose. Miss Lynn portrays an honest welfare representative who rejects her dishonest district attorney suitor for Dailey at the finale after Dailey exposes the graft and is assured of a properly run home.

Douglas Sirk's direction has maintained an even pace and producer Albert J. Cohen cleverly utilized backstage interiors while retaining the opulent facade. Others in the cast are Hugh O'Brian, Rhys Williams, Thomas E. Jackson, Russell Simpson, George Chandler and Doris Packer. Included in the score are "I Was There," "Ezekiel Saw De Wheel," "I Got the Shiniest Mouth in Town," "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home?," "All God's Chillun Got Wings" and "Sweet Genevieve."

Running time, 87 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

THERE is no point in minimizing the significance of the rejection of the distributors' proposed arbitration draft by Western Theatre Owners.

Indeterminate as the organization's executive status (it has been without a president since Rotus V. Harvey resigned last summer) may be at the moment, WTO nevertheless manages to speak for quite a number of very active local and regional exhibitor organizations along the length of the Northern Pacific Coast and inland to the Rockies.

Geographically, WTO picks up where Allied States' affiliates leave off at the Texas, Oklahoma, Rocky Mountain boundaries. Thus, there is the appearance, if not the actuality, of Coast to Coast exhibitor opposition to the distributors' proposed draft. Add to that the fact that WTO again could become a fully organized regional association overnight by the simple expedient of calling a board meeting and electing officers, and you have a formidable appearing opposition bloc when coupled with Allied States as an opponent of the draft.

Numerically, it means two out of five exhibitor organization participants in the industry arbitration conference are opposed to the draft.

This much is clear: Any chance there may have been of obtaining Department of Justice and Federal court approval of an industry arbitration plan without the participation of Allied, has as good as disappeared as a result of WTO's action.

Accordingly, if there is to be an industry arbitration plan, it will have to be one other than that proposed by distributors.

Now is as good a time as any to start working on it.

WHEN the industry arbitration conference was initiated in New York last spring, the Western Theatre Owners' representatives of record at the conference were Rotus Harvey and L. S. Hamm, the latter as WTO counsel.

In view of WTO's veto of the arbitration draft, it is curious now to note that Hamm is, and was, president of California Theatres Association, San Francisco, which is a member of Theatre Owners of America, vigorous champion of industry arbitration.

Review

"Invasion U.S.A."

(American Pictures Corp.-Columbia Pictures)

EXCELLENT newsreel footage of the second world war and the Korean war has been cleverly interjected in this effective propaganda drama that deals with the possibility of the invasion of America in the next global conflict. A large amount of the footage depicts atomic and other destruction of planes, ships and buildings in a most convincing fashion. It is used to shock the audience into the realization of the dangers of an invasion by "the enemy," not otherwise identified but implied by the accents of the actors as Russian.

It is definitely an exploitable film although it suffers from a lack of dramatic plausibility. The screenplay by Robert Smith from a story which he co-authored with Franz Spencer follows the actions of a group of purportedly representative people. After their destruction and the enemy's victory is established at the climax, the trick is used of having it all labelled a dream-like look into the future. The characters were supposedly under the prophetic mass-hypnosis of forecaster Dan O'Herlihy. Given another chance, they vow to do everything possible to avoid such occurrences as the bombing of Alaska, California, and New York; the capturing of Washington, D. C. and New York, and the A-bombing of the Boulder Dam, all of which are shown.

Gerald Mohr and Peggy Castle supply the romantic interest. The cast also includes Robert Bice, Tom Kennedy, Wade Crosby, Erik Blythe, Phyllis Coates, Aram Katcher, Knox Manning and Edward G. Robinson, Jr.

It is a deft and economical production that Albert Zugsmith fashioned for his American Pictures Corp. with Robert Smith. Alfred E. Green directed adequately. It capitalizes on the war problems currently prevailing and exhibitors suitably exploiting it should acquire box-office profits.

Running time, 74 minutes. General audience classification. December release.

the principals merely are engaged in wrapping up details of the agreement, which admittedly involves numerous complexities. However, observers close to the scene are inclined to accept the latter as the most likely explanation in view of the lack of urgency displayed by the principals in adjourning the meetings over the weekend.

The latter believed that legal work involving the preparation of releases of the Stolkin syndicate members from their commitments to Hughes and from liability are being prepared for signing and may be ready for tomorrow's session. Such releases are part of the agreement by which Hughes recovers the stock which was turned over to the syndicate last September, and for which syndicate members waive their $1,250,000 down payment to Hughes.

TV-Radio Content Report Is in Work

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The Harris sub-committee of the House Interstate Commerce Committee wound up its hearings on radio and television program content over the weekend and settled down to writing a report.

Due to come out about Jan. 1, the report will probably say that the broadcasting industry should be given a chance to operate under its recently adopted standards of practice code, without government interference but that the standards adopted could be higher than they are.

Final witness before the committee was Federal Communications Commission chairman Paul A. Walker, who said that it would be dangerous to give a censorship power over radio and television programs to any government agency. He pointed out that the FCC was specifically forbidden by law to exercise any censorship and added that he thought this was "wise."

Walker declared that the public had the responsibility of making its likes and dislikes known to the broadcasters who were licensed to serve it.

One major theatre TV circuit executive said that he currently knows of a number of public relations firms and TV packaging outfits which are working on closed-circuit theatre TV deals. He also mentioned that the sports field is being scouted by persons interested in promoting theatre TV deals.

Theatre Network Television and its subsidiary, Tele-sessions, are working on a number of projects, while Teleconference, Inc., the new agency which broke into the field with a deal for the Dec. 30 Bendix telecast, says that there are a number of other deals coming up. Aaron Feinsot, Teleconference vice-president, told MOTION PICTURE DAILY that following the Bendix announcement his company received "a lot of inquiries" from potential clients.

Meanwhile, circuits with a number of TV installations are holding exploratory talks on individual projects, both in the commercial "off-hour" period and in the entertainment field.

The three TV events this month will be kicked off today by TNT's Lees Carpet telecast, followed by TNT's Wednesday "Carmen" telecast, and Teleconference's Dec. 30 Bendix program.

Mexican Control Law Challenged

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 7.—Enactment of the highly controversial cinematographic law with its publication in the "Diario Oficial" ("Official Gazette"), generally displeases the trade, although the measure was somewhat modified after conferences between industry representatives and officials of the Ministry of the Interior.

Studio operators and some distributors are about the only ones now who like the law. Those opposing it plan to seek injunctions against its enforcement, fearing that the measure will have the same result as a similar law in the Argentine where it practically established government control of the industry.

Besides demanding 50 per cent playing time for Mexican pictures, the law places the Ministry of the Interior in charge of the industry, "to assure its moral, artistic and economic elevation." It gives the Ministry complete charge of national censorship of Mexican and imported pictures, their importation, exportation, distribution and exhibition, and also over the production of all films in Mexico, whether in Spanish or other languages. The Ministry is to have a special budget allowance yearly to help the Mexican trade.

The law also provides for the establishment of a cinematographic library to which all producers in Mexico must donate one copy of every picture they make; prohibits the export of any Mexican film that the Ministry considers unfit in theme and development for exhibition abroad; regulates the distribution of Mexican pictures in the public interest, and classes the trade as being in the public interest, like electrical firms, communications, railroads, mining and oil. Also, Mexican trade disputes must be arbitrated by the National Cinematographic Art Council.

'A-Bomb'

tive subject.

Burton Benjamin supervised the production and wrote a simple commentary that effectively sticks to the basic facts and allows the footage of the explosions to provide the powerful impact. Bob Considine does the narration which aides in depicting the state of mind of the 2,100 Marines in foxholes less than four miles from the explosion.

First, the Marines watch a prior explosion set off for Army troops and there is a delay before their own test, because of wind and rain storms. They are more impressed after the detonation when they view the havoc done to heavy armored equipment.

There are many fine shots, perhaps the most notable being the opening picture of the "mushroom" and the closing one which was taken with the camera aimed directly at the moment of explosion, capturing the initial blinding flash.

The tests prove that only exceedingly deep foxholes and shelter are safeguards against A-bombing. Jay Bonafield has fashioned a compact production. It is a short that is sure to create tremendous attraction wherever it is played. It will be released nationally on Jan. 16. W.P.

By SHERWIN KANE

THERE is no point in minimizing the significance of the rejection of the distributors' proposed arbitration draft by Western Theatre Owners.

Indeterminate as the organization's executive status (it has been without a president since Rotus V. Harvey resigned last summer) may be at the moment, WTO nevertheless manages to speak for quite a number of very active local and regional exhibitor organizations along the length of the Northern Pacific Coast and inland to the Rockies.

Geographically, WTO picks up where Allied States' affiliates leave off at the Texas, Oklahoma, Rocky Mountain boundaries. Thus, there is the appearance, if not the actuality, of Coast to Coast exhibitor opposition to the distributors' proposed draft. Add to that the fact that WTO again could become a fully organized regional association overnight by the simple expedient of calling a board meeting and electing officers, and you have a formidable appearing opposition bloc when coupled with Allied States as an opponent of the draft.

Numerically, it means two out of five exhibitor organization participants in the industry arbitration conference are opposed to the draft.

This much is clear: Any chance there may have been of obtaining Department of Justice and Federal court approval of an industry arbitration plan without the participation of Allied, has as good as disappeared as a result of WTO's action.

Accordingly, if there is to be an industry arbitration plan, it will have to be one other than that proposed by distributors.

Now is as good a time as any to start working on it.

WHEN the industry arbitration conference was initiated in New York last spring, the Western Theatre Owners' representatives of record at the conference were Rotus Harvey and L. S. Hamm, the latter as WTO counsel.

In view of WTO's veto of the arbitration draft, it is curious now to note that Hamm is, and was, president of California Theatres Association, San Francisco, which is a member of Theatre Owners of America, vigorous champion of industry arbitration.

Regular Use Of Theatre TV Seen in Offing

Regularity in theatre television programming, with additional programming agencies such as Theatre Network Television and Teleconference, Inc., being organized, is understood to be in the offing.

The prediction of opening up the floodgates of programming comes at a time when the number of theatre TV installations is approaching 100 or more, with nearly every key area in the country possessing a TV installation. The forecast is also bolstered by the three theatre TV events slated for this month, a milestone for the

"Invasion U.S.A."

(American Pictures Corp.-Columbia Pictures)

EXCELLENT newsreel footage of the second world war and the Korean war has been cleverly interjected in this effective propaganda drama that deals with the possibility of the invasion of America in the next global conflict. A large amount of the footage depicts atomic and other destruction of planes, ships and buildings in a most convincing fashion. It is used to shock the audience into the realization of the dangers of an invasion by "the enemy," not otherwise identified but implied by the accents of the actors as Russian.

It is definitely an exploitable film although it suffers from a lack of dramatic plausibility. The screenplay by Robert Smith from a story which he co-authored with Franz Spencer follows the actions of a group of purportedly representative people. After their destruction and the enemy's victory is established at the climax, the trick is used of having it all labelled a dream-like look into the future. The characters were supposedly under the prophetic mass-hypnosis of forecaster Dan O'Herlihy. Given another chance, they vow to do everything possible to avoid such occurrences as the bombing of Alaska, California, and New York; the capturing of Washington, D. C. and New York, and the A-bombing of the Boulder Dam, all of which are shown.

Gerald Mohr and Peggy Castle supply the romantic interest. The cast also includes Robert Bice, Tom Kennedy, Wade Crosby, Erik Blythe, Phyllis Coates, Aram Katcher, Knox Manning and Edward G. Robinson, Jr.

It is a deft and economical production that Albert Zugsmith fashioned for his American Pictures Corp. with Robert Smith. Alfred E. Green directed adequately. It capitalizes on the war problems currently prevailing and exhibitors suitably exploiting it should acquire box-office profits.

Running time, 74 minutes. General audience classification. December release.

RKO Deal Near

the principals merely are engaged in wrapping up details of the agreement, which admittedly involves numerous complexities. However, observers close to the scene are inclined to accept the latter as the most likely explanation in view of the lack of urgency displayed by the principals in adjourning the meetings over the weekend.

The latter believed that legal work involving the preparation of releases of the Stolkin syndicate members from their commitments to Hughes and from liability are being prepared for signing and may be ready for tomorrow's session. Such releases are part of the agreement by which Hughes recovers the stock which was turned over to the syndicate last September, and for which syndicate members waive their $1,250,000 down payment to Hughes.

Harold Lloyd May Reissue Past Hits

Harold Lloyd may reissue others of his past successful feature comedies if "The Freshman" is favorably received at the Paris Theatre here. Under consideration for re-release are "Grandma's Boy" and "Safety Last."

Lippert Productions is handling the distribution of "The Freshman."

After commending O'Donnell for his part in promoting the tribute, Abram F. Myers, general counsel of national Allied said: "In honoring Adolph Zukor, father of feature films, the industry not only will pay just tribute to a worthy pioneer, but will launch an effective public relations campaign to put the industry in a proper light for all the world to see. I know we can trust you to see to it that there is substance along with the hoop-la, and that attention is fastened on those features of our business which are enduring and good so as to erase from the public mind that which is transient and trivial."

"There is no greater name in show business" than Zukor's, "and all exhibitors everywhere are delighted to have a part in this fine testimonial to him," wired Alfred Starr, president of the Theatre Owners of America.

Emanuel Frisch, president of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, said he is certain that "all segments of our industry will enthusiastically join in paying tribute to one who can truly be called "Mr. Motion Pictures."

TV-Radio Content Report Is in Work

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The Harris sub-committee of the House Interstate Commerce Committee wound up its hearings on radio and television program content over the weekend and settled down to writing a report.

Due to come out about Jan. 1, the report will probably say that the broadcasting industry should be given a chance to operate under its recently adopted standards of practice code, without government interference but that the standards adopted could be higher than they are.

Final witness before the committee was Federal Communications Commission chairman Paul A. Walker, who said that it would be dangerous to give a censorship power over radio and television programs to any government agency. He pointed out that the FCC was specifically forbidden by law to exercise any censorship and added that he thought this was "wise."

Walker declared that the public had the responsibility of making its likes and dislikes known to the broadcasters who were licensed to serve it.

medium as to the number in a 30-day period.

One major theatre TV circuit executive said that he currently knows of a number of public relations firms and TV packaging outfits which are working on closed-circuit theatre TV deals. He also mentioned that the sports field is being scouted by persons interested in promoting theatre TV deals.

Theatre Network Television and its subsidiary, Tele-sessions, are working on a number of projects, while Teleconference, Inc., the new agency which broke into the field with a deal for the Dec. 30 Bendix telecast, says that there are a number of other deals coming up. Aaron Feinsot, Teleconference vice-president, told MOTION PICTURE DAILY that following the Bendix announcement his company received "a lot of inquiries" from potential clients.

Meanwhile, circuits with a number of TV installations are holding exploratory talks on individual projects, both in the commercial "off-hour" period and in the entertainment field.

The three TV events this month will be kicked off today by TNT's Lees Carpet telecast, followed by TNT's Wednesday "Carmen" telecast, and Teleconference's Dec. 30 Bendix program.

Mexican Control Law Challenged

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 7.—Enactment of the highly controversial cinematographic law with its publication in the "Diario Oficial" ("Official Gazette"), generally displeases the trade, although the measure was somewhat modified after conferences between industry representatives and officials of the Ministry of the Interior.

Studio operators and some distributors are about the only ones now who like the law. Those opposing it plan to seek injunctions against its enforcement, fearing that the measure will have the same result as a similar law in the Argentine where it practically established government control of the industry.

Besides demanding 50 per cent playing time for Mexican pictures, the law places the Ministry of the Interior in charge of the industry, "to assure its moral, artistic and economic elevation." It gives the Ministry complete charge of national censorship of Mexican and imported pictures, their importation, exportation, distribution and exhibition, and also over the production of all films in Mexico, whether in Spanish or other languages. The Ministry is to have a special budget allowance yearly to help the Mexican trade.

The law also provides for the establishment of a cinematographic library to which all producers in Mexico must donate one copy of every picture they make; prohibits the export of any Mexican film that the Ministry considers unfit in theme and development for exhibition abroad; regulates the distribution of Mexican pictures in the public interest, and classes the trade as being in the public interest, like electrical firms, communications, railroads, mining and oil. Also, Mexican trade disputes must be arbitrated by the National Cinematographic Art Council.

'A-Bomb'

tive subject.

Burton Benjamin supervised the production and wrote a simple commentary that effectively sticks to the basic facts and allows the footage of the explosions to provide the powerful impact. Bob Considine does the narration which aides in depicting the state of mind of the 2,100 Marines in foxholes less than four miles from the explosion.

First, the Marines watch a prior explosion set off for Army troops and there is a delay before their own test, because of wind and rain storms. They are more impressed after the detonation when they view the havoc done to heavy armored equipment.

There are many fine shots, perhaps the most notable being the opening picture of the "mushroom" and the closing one which was taken with the camera aimed directly at the moment of explosion, capturing the initial blinding flash.

The tests prove that only exceedingly deep foxholes and shelter are safeguards against A-bombing. Jay Bonafield has fashioned a compact production. It is a short that is sure to create tremendous attraction wherever it is played. It will be released nationally on Jan. 16. W.P.

Lees' Toppers Enthusiastic Over Telecast

Lack of Color Noted; Field Reports Good

Executives of James Lees and Sons, Inc., sponsors of the first commercial theatre telecast, expressed satisfaction following yesterday's one-hour telecast here of the carpet manufacturer's national sales convention, according to Theatre Network Television, which booked the event.

Victor Ratner, director of Tele-Sessions, a subsidiary of TNT, said that Lees management was enthusiastic about the new medium and expressed complete satisfaction after the performance, which was seen in 18 theatres in 17 major cities from Coast-to-Coast.

As seen at the Colonial Theatre here, the telecast appeared to carry an effective sales message and was technically almost without fault. Most viewers at the Colonial expressed regret that the carpets on the screen could not be shown in their true colors, rather than in black-and-white. How-

TV WINS OUT IN KOREA COVERAGE

Video Outlets Pool Resources for Eisenhower's Tour and Beat Newsreels in Race to the Public

The newsreel coverage of President-Elect Eisenhower's Korean tour developed into the most heated race between motion pictures and television since the latter medium became a competitive factor. And TV was the winner in bringing the event to the public, nosing out theatres by a 24-hour margin. This was made possible by four TV networks pooling their own resources and working independently of the pooled film industry newsreel's representative, Dave Oliver of Warner-Pathe News, insofar as President-elect Eisenhower's activities on Korean soil was concerned.

When the television companies were informed, a week before the President-elect's departure, that there would be room for only one newsreel camera-

"Hans Christian Andersen" continued its record-breaking pace at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris. For the second week at the Criterion a sturdy $46,500 was registered while the Paris racked up a solid $19,400.

Land-office business is still the rule of the day at the Broadway Theatre, where "This Is Cinerama" is featured. A capacity $40,000 was due there for the 10th week of the Cinerama show. At the Paramount, a pretty good $50,000 was forecast for the third and final week of "Iron Mistress," which will be replaced tomorrow by "Stop, You're Killing Me."

"Because of You" opened to a nice $31,000 for its initial seven days at the Capitol. At the Rivoli, a fair $12,000 is indicated for the 12th week of "Snows of Kilimanjaro," while at Loew's State a moderate $15,000 is seen for the second and final week of "Outpost in Malaya." "Hangman's Knot" will have its premiere there tomorrow.

"Limelight" is still holding up fairly well at the Astor and the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux. The Astor expects $18,000, for the seventh week of the film, while $7,000 is indicated for the 60th Street Trans-Lux. On Friday, "Pony Soldier" will have its premiere at the Globe Theatre, replacing "Kansas City Confidential" which is forecast to bow out at a fair $14,500 for its second and final week.

At the Mayfair, a moderate $15,000 is indicated for the second week of "The Thief of Venice." "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier" dropped somewhat but a more than satisfactory $15,000 is indicated for its fifth week.

Among off-Broadway theatres, a solid $9,600 is predicted for the sixth week of "The Promoter" at the Fine Arts, while a steady $7,100 is seen for the eighth week of "The Fourposter" at the Sutton. "O. Henry's Full House" at the 52nd Street Trans-Lux is expected to register a fine $6,200 for its eighth week. At the Beekman, a satisfactory $4,500 is forecast for the third week of "Under the Red Sea."

"Hiawatha" will have its premiere at the Bijou Theatre, now shuttered, on Christmas Day and "The Importance of Being Earnest" will open at the Baronet on Dec. 22.

Einfeld's agenda at the studios included discussions with Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief, and Harry Brand, studio publicity head, to formulate promotional plans on the films viewed along with other attractions scheduled for release during the new year.

was $749,360, with the deductible items totalling $494,313. To the remaining $255,046 was added $235,966, representing the proportion of undistributed net profits, less the proportion of net losses of companies not owned 100 per cent.

It was pointed out in the consolidated balance sheet that "there are remaining important theatre operations in which the company and its partly-owned companies and major producing companies are interested which are to be terminated as a result of the government's anti-trust litigation brought against certain film producing companies. The effect which these matters may have upon the financial position of the company and its partly-owned companies cannot be determined at this time."

UATC operates 20 theatres in California, Michigan, Oregon and New York. It is interested in, but does not operate, Metropolitan Playhouses which holds an interest in two circuits operating 128 theatres in and around New York City; United California Theatres, with 99 theatres; Rowley United Theatres, 127 theatres, and Penn-Federal Enterprises, seven theatres.

the exclusion of the Square in a move-up of clearances in the area.

It is charged in the complaint that Loew's settled a threatened litigation by Skouras Theatres Corp. for $600,000 at a time when Skouras was in a "straightened financial position."

Until 1950, Skouras operated the Square Theatre which then was taken over by Steinberg and the 1948 Holding Co. The plaintiffs charge that until September of this year, the Square and Skouras' Interboro and Pilgrim Theatres played day-and-date seven days after Loew's American, but that last month the two Skouras houses were moved up by Paramount and United Artists to day-and-date with the American. The Square, it is charged, was excluded from the improvement in clearance. Monroe Stein is attorney for the plaintiffs.

Defendants in the Steinberg suit are Loew's, Parkchester Amusement Co., Number 26 Theatres, Inc., Skouras Theatres Corp., Metropolitan Playhouses, United Artists Theatre Circuit, Paramount, United Artists, George Skouras and Nicholas and Joseph M. Schenck.

DALLAS, Dec. 8.—Trade unions affiliated with the industry in Hollywood are swinging in line behind Variety Clubs International with pledges of support of the all-industry Adolph Zukor 80th Birthday Celebration and Golden Jubilee which Variety is sponsoring in 1953.

Behind the forthcoming event are the executive board of the Motion Picture Industry Council and its affiliated membership, which includes Artists Managers Guild, Association of Motion Picture Producers Association, Independent Office Workers, Screen Actors Guild, Screen Producers Guild, Screen Story Analysts' Guild, Screen Writers' Guild, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, Society of Motion Picture Art Directors and Unit Production Managers' Guild.

It is understood that Noah Dietrich, who served as RKO board chairman in the previous Hughes regime, is interested and may be named president.

The statement scheduled to be issued tomorrow is expected to include the announcement of new directors of the company, as well as the new chief executive officers.

The final agreement on the major phases of the re-transfer of control of the company came late today following nearly four weeks of discussions here between Hughes and members of the Chicago group. The latter include, in addition to Stolkin, A. L. Koolish, E. J. Burke, Ray Ryan and Sherrill Corwin. Depinet was a participant in the talks during the past nine days.

man aboard the planes carrying the party to Korea, the TV firms decided on their own coverage. They drew lots to decide which company would designate a cameraman. National Broadcasting "won" and it selected Julius Zenier, an NBC cameraman in Korea. Zenier shot the scenes of Eisenhower's tour on land, although Oliver's flight footage was available to the video outlets.

Zenier's pooled footage was flown via Pan American Airways from Tokyo and arrived in San Francisco at 6:15 A.M. (EST) Sunday. After two hours in San Franciso, where the film was viewed by security censors, the footage was rushed to New York where prints were made for the TV stations. NBC hit the TV screens at 5:30 Sunday afternoon, with CBS following an hour later. Others in the pool were DuMont and American Broadcasting.

7 'Bali' TV Trailers Set By Paramount

Paramount reports that CBS and NBC networks across the country will carry seven special video trailers to an estimated 60,000,000 persons for "Road to Bali," forthcoming Hope-Crosby-Lamour comedy. This marks the first time, the company claims, that such a saturation campaign designed for television has been devised by a film company.

The trailers do not contain scenes from the picture but are titled "Great Moments in History with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope" and are seven short subjects that were written by Leonard Neubauer and directed by Phil Pemberton, head of Paramount's trailer department.

Father Lareau credited the Legion of Decency with doing a great deal "to clean up motion pictures."

ever, this was compensated somewhat by a carpet display in the lobby, where the multi-colored patterns could be seen.

Initial reports from the field on the telecast, which originated in NBC studios here, were on the whole excellent. Hundreds of carpet dealers, retailers and sales personnel across the nation attended theatres to participate in the event, which kicked off at 12:00 noon (EST).

Many of the United Paramount Theatre managers, whose houses carried the program, also commented on the absence of color, Robert O'Brien, UPT vice-president, said in reporting reactions of representatives canvassed. O'Brien pointed out, however, that the lack of color will be less noticeable in the case of the Bendix sales conference, to be held on theatre TV later, due to the lack of color emphasis and importance in the presentation of Bendix products.

The UPT managers felt, according to a consensus, that the Lees program further demonstrated the practicability and value of off-hours theatre TV. Reception was good, for the most part, marred only infrequently by light fadings. Interest was maintained throughout the telecast and all of the aims of the event were realized, it was said.

Received Well in Chicago

The telecast was well received by the dealers, the salesmen and retailers who attended the Telenews Theatre in Chicago. The only adverse comment was that the pictures of the carpeting were not too effective in black-and-white. Those in attendance at the Telenews felt, however, that it was in some respects better than a regular sales meeting, which does not afford them a chance to meet or see top company executives, as heard and viewed at yesterday's telecast. Quality of the picture itself was marred by what seemed to be poor lighting. The sound was excellent and the engineers seemed to feel that the picture would have been better had the telecast been carried micro-wave rather than cable.

In Boston, the telecast was well received at the Pilgrim Theatre. Many of the 300 dealers who attended the sales meeting termed it a very big success.

In Atlanta, 750 dealers and spectators saw the "off-hour" commercial show at the Paramount Theatre. Transmission on the whole was fair, but at times the picture was too light, making it difficult in certain instances to distinguish the speakers clearly. The sound came over very good, however. Salesmen expressed regret at the lack of color.

TV WINS OUT IN KOREA COVERAGE

Video Outlets Pool Resources for Eisenhower's Tour and Beat Newsreels in Race to the Public

The newsreel coverage of President-Elect Eisenhower's Korean tour developed into the most heated race between motion pictures and television since the latter medium became a competitive factor. And TV was the winner in bringing the event to the public, nosing out theatres by a 24-hour margin. This was made possible by four TV networks pooling their own resources and working independently of the pooled film industry newsreel's representative, Dave Oliver of Warner-Pathe News, insofar as President-elect Eisenhower's activities on Korean soil was concerned.

When the television companies were informed, a week before the President-elect's departure, that there would be room for only one newsreel camera-

A report on the industry's drive for repeal of the 20 per cent Federal admission tax will be the chief topic of discussion at the special meeting of the executive committee and board of directors of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations tomorrow at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago. Nearly 50 are expected to attend the sessions which may extend through Thursday. Col. H. A. Robert J. O'Donnell, national director of "Movietime, U.S.A.," will report on results obtained so far by this COMPO project, and there will be a report on plans for a second industry round table discussion between producers and exhibitors in Hollywood next February.

Arnall to Report

"Hans Christian Andersen" continued its record-breaking pace at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris. For the second week at the Criterion a sturdy $46,500 was registered while the Paris racked up a solid $19,400.

Land-office business is still the rule of the day at the Broadway Theatre, where "This Is Cinerama" is featured. A capacity $40,000 was due there for the 10th week of the Cinerama show. At the Paramount, a pretty good $50,000 was forecast for the third and final week of "Iron Mistress," which will be replaced tomorrow by "Stop, You're Killing Me."

"Because of You" opened to a nice $31,000 for its initial seven days at the Capitol. At the Rivoli, a fair $12,000 is indicated for the 12th week of "Snows of Kilimanjaro," while at Loew's State a moderate $15,000 is seen for the second and final week of "Outpost in Malaya." "Hangman's Knot" will have its premiere there tomorrow.

"Limelight" is still holding up fairly well at the Astor and the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux. The Astor expects $18,000, for the seventh week of the film, while $7,000 is indicated for the 60th Street Trans-Lux. On Friday, "Pony Soldier" will have its premiere at the Globe Theatre, replacing "Kansas City Confidential" which is forecast to bow out at a fair $14,500 for its second and final week.

At the Mayfair, a moderate $15,000 is indicated for the second week of "The Thief of Venice." "Breaking Through the Sound Barrier" dropped somewhat but a more than satisfactory $15,000 is indicated for its fifth week.

Among off-Broadway theatres, a solid $9,600 is predicted for the sixth week of "The Promoter" at the Fine Arts, while a steady $7,100 is seen for the eighth week of "The Fourposter" at the Sutton. "O. Henry's Full House" at the 52nd Street Trans-Lux is expected to register a fine $6,200 for its eighth week. At the Beekman, a satisfactory $4,500 is forecast for the third week of "Under the Red Sea."

"Hiawatha" will have its premiere at the Bijou Theatre, now shuttered, on Christmas Day and "The Importance of Being Earnest" will open at the Baronet on Dec. 22.

The pictures are: "Niagara," which stars Marilyn Monroe, Joseph Cotten, and Jean Peters; "Man on A Tightrope," directed by Elia Kazan in Germany and starring Frederic March, Gloria Grahame, and Terry Moore, and "The Star," a Bert E. Friedlob production starring Bette Davis.

Einfeld's agenda at the studios included discussions with Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief, and Harry Brand, studio publicity head, to formulate promotional plans on the films viewed along with other attractions scheduled for release during the new year.

was $749,360, with the deductible items totalling $494,313. To the remaining $255,046 was added $235,966, representing the proportion of undistributed net profits, less the proportion of net losses of companies not owned 100 per cent.

It was pointed out in the consolidated balance sheet that "there are remaining important theatre operations in which the company and its partly-owned companies and major producing companies are interested which are to be terminated as a result of the government's anti-trust litigation brought against certain film producing companies. The effect which these matters may have upon the financial position of the company and its partly-owned companies cannot be determined at this time."

UATC operates 20 theatres in California, Michigan, Oregon and New York. It is interested in, but does not operate, Metropolitan Playhouses which holds an interest in two circuits operating 128 theatres in and around New York City; United California Theatres, with 99 theatres; Rowley United Theatres, 127 theatres, and Penn-Federal Enterprises, seven theatres.

the exclusion of the Square in a move-up of clearances in the area.

It is charged in the complaint that Loew's settled a threatened litigation by Skouras Theatres Corp. for $600,000 at a time when Skouras was in a "straightened financial position."

Until 1950, Skouras operated the Square Theatre which then was taken over by Steinberg and the 1948 Holding Co. The plaintiffs charge that until September of this year, the Square and Skouras' Interboro and Pilgrim Theatres played day-and-date seven days after Loew's American, but that last month the two Skouras houses were moved up by Paramount and United Artists to day-and-date with the American. The Square, it is charged, was excluded from the improvement in clearance. Monroe Stein is attorney for the plaintiffs.

Defendants in the Steinberg suit are Loew's, Parkchester Amusement Co., Number 26 Theatres, Inc., Skouras Theatres Corp., Metropolitan Playhouses, United Artists Theatre Circuit, Paramount, United Artists, George Skouras and Nicholas and Joseph M. Schenck.

O'Donnell, international chairman, who arrived from Dallas this morning, announced that the event will be followed by similar celebrations later in Dallas, Chicago and other key cities, climaxed by a dinner March 4 at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

Skouras met with studio and industry leaders at a Beverly Hills Hotel luncheon today to formulate plans for the dinner. Among those invited to attend were Steve Broidy, Harry Cohn, Sherrill Corwin, Cecil B. DeMille, Ned Depinet, Walt Disney, Y. Frank Freeman, William Goetz, Samuel Goldwyn, Jesse L. Lasky, L. B. Mayer, Dore Schary, Joseph Schenck, Leo Spitz, Jack Warner, Herbert J. Yates, Darryl F. Zanuck and Eugene Zukor.

Film Trade Unions Behind Zukor Celebration, Jubilee

DALLAS, Dec. 8.—Trade unions affiliated with the industry in Hollywood are swinging in line behind Variety Clubs International with pledges of support of the all-industry Adolph Zukor 80th Birthday Celebration and Golden Jubilee which Variety is sponsoring in 1953.

Behind the forthcoming event are the executive board of the Motion Picture Industry Council and its affiliated membership, which includes Artists Managers Guild, Association of Motion Picture Producers Association, Independent Office Workers, Screen Actors Guild, Screen Producers Guild, Screen Story Analysts' Guild, Screen Writers' Guild, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, Society of Motion Picture Art Directors and Unit Production Managers' Guild.

It is understood that Noah Dietrich, who served as RKO board chairman in the previous Hughes regime, is interested and may be named president.

The statement scheduled to be issued tomorrow is expected to include the announcement of new directors of the company, as well as the new chief executive officers.

The final agreement on the major phases of the re-transfer of control of the company came late today following nearly four weeks of discussions here between Hughes and members of the Chicago group. The latter include, in addition to Stolkin, A. L. Koolish, E. J. Burke, Ray Ryan and Sherrill Corwin. Depinet was a participant in the talks during the past nine days.

man aboard the planes carrying the party to Korea, the TV firms decided on their own coverage. They drew lots to decide which company would designate a cameraman. National Broadcasting "won" and it selected Julius Zenier, an NBC cameraman in Korea. Zenier shot the scenes of Eisenhower's tour on land, although Oliver's flight footage was available to the video outlets.

Zenier's pooled footage was flown via Pan American Airways from Tokyo and arrived in San Francisco at 6:15 A.M. (EST) Sunday. After two hours in San Franciso, where the film was viewed by security censors, the footage was rushed to New York where prints were made for the TV stations. NBC hit the TV screens at 5:30 Sunday afternoon, with CBS following an hour later. Others in the pool were DuMont and American Broadcasting.

Other Stories Excluded

The regular newsreel companies processed their negatives here yesterday and the films reached New York theatre screens late in the afternoon. The Eisenhower-Korea scenes comprise the entire issue, with all other news stories excluded.

Oliver is reported to be on the U.S.S. Helena, covering the sessions between Eisenhower and military leaders.

7 'Bali' TV Trailers Set By Paramount

Paramount reports that CBS and NBC networks across the country will carry seven special video trailers to an estimated 60,000,000 persons for "Road to Bali," forthcoming Hope-Crosby-Lamour comedy. This marks the first time, the company claims, that such a saturation campaign designed for television has been devised by a film company.

The trailers do not contain scenes from the picture but are titled "Great Moments in History with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope" and are seven short subjects that were written by Leonard Neubauer and directed by Phil Pemberton, head of Paramount's trailer department.

Hits Undesirable Films for Children

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 8.—"Millions of American children" are being exposed weekly to undesirable motion pictures, "not only those sexually bad, but those which incite to crime, contain horrible thoughts or terrible fantasies," the Rev. Edward J. Lareau, director of the Catholic Radio Guild of the Albany Diocese, said in a sermon at the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday.

Father Lareau credited the Legion of Decency with doing a great deal "to clean up motion pictures."

ever, this was compensated somewhat by a carpet display in the lobby, where the multi-colored patterns could be seen.

Initial reports from the field on the telecast, which originated in NBC studios here, were on the whole excellent. Hundreds of carpet dealers, retailers and sales personnel across the nation attended theatres to participate in the event, which kicked off at 12:00 noon (EST).

Many of the United Paramount Theatre managers, whose houses carried the program, also commented on the absence of color, Robert O'Brien, UPT vice-president, said in reporting reactions of representatives canvassed. O'Brien pointed out, however, that the lack of color will be less noticeable in the case of the Bendix sales conference, to be held on theatre TV later, due to the lack of color emphasis and importance in the presentation of Bendix products.

The UPT managers felt, according to a consensus, that the Lees program further demonstrated the practicability and value of off-hours theatre TV. Reception was good, for the most part, marred only infrequently by light fadings. Interest was maintained throughout the telecast and all of the aims of the event were realized, it was said.

Received Well in Chicago

The telecast was well received by the dealers, the salesmen and retailers who attended the Telenews Theatre in Chicago. The only adverse comment was that the pictures of the carpeting were not too effective in black-and-white. Those in attendance at the Telenews felt, however, that it was in some respects better than a regular sales meeting, which does not afford them a chance to meet or see top company executives, as heard and viewed at yesterday's telecast. Quality of the picture itself was marred by what seemed to be poor lighting. The sound was excellent and the engineers seemed to feel that the picture would have been better had the telecast been carried micro-wave rather than cable.

In Boston, the telecast was well received at the Pilgrim Theatre. Many of the 300 dealers who attended the sales meeting termed it a very big success.

In Atlanta, 750 dealers and spectators saw the "off-hour" commercial show at the Paramount Theatre. Transmission on the whole was fair, but at times the picture was too light, making it difficult in certain instances to distinguish the speakers clearly. The sound came over very good, however. Salesmen expressed regret at the lack of color.

Controlling Interest In WB Theatres to Fabian

Differences in Arbitration Drafts Are Few

MPAA Releases Texts of Aug., Oct. Proposals

A comparison of the two drafts designed to establish a system of arbitration for the motion picture industry—one prepared by Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, and the other by major companies' lawyers—reveals that the differences chiefly are in verbiage, with some additions by the distributors in various provisions. Neither draft includes provisions for arbitrating film rentals nor a plan for financing the proposed overall arbitration system.

Last summer, a special sub-committee of the Arbitration Conference reached an agreement in principle on a plan and Myers was designated to prepare the draft, which was submitted to the interested parties on Aug. 21. The distributors' lawyers revised the August draft and submitted it on Oct. 21. It was decided by the Conference that both drafts would be withheld from the trade

Loew's Executives To Plan 'Ike' Show

Theatre Deal

THE Warner-Fabian transaction is a development of deep significance to the business of motion pictures. It will add stature and scope to the already highly important exhibition interests of the Fabian enterprises.

The acquisition by the enterprises under the leadership of Mr. Si Fabian and Mr. Samuel Rosen of the theatre holdings of Harry, Albert and Jack Warner constitutes an eloquent pledge of confidence in the future of theatrical entertainment which will have sharp impact upon the amusement world. It will have a stabilizing influence and it will fan out into a broad current of confidence.

Under the judicial decision of divorcement of production and exhibition the Warner brothers were required to abandon either production or exhibition. As they had entered the exhibition field only with reluctance the decision as to where their future efforts would be devoted was a foregone conclusion. They are now left free to devote themselves single-mindedly to the business of producing and distributing motion pictures, which

'Bwana' Booked in 225 Major Cities

Deals for the booking of "Bwana Devil," the three-dimensional Natural Vision feature film, in every major city in the United States was disclosed here yesterday by George J. Schaefer, producer representative who is currently managing the distribution of the film.

Schaefer said that the film has been booked in approximately 230 first-run houses in 225 cities throughout the country. Deals for the bookings have been consummated during the past two weeks, Schaefer added.

Schaefer, who is also a director of

Harry, Jack and Albert Warner Sell Their Personal Stock in Circuit to Group; 300 Theatres Are Involved

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

An agreement with Fabian Enterprses, Inc., for the sale of the Brothers Warner stock in the new exhibition company to be formed for Warner Brothers theatres was disclosed here yesterday.

Under the agreement, the sale of the brothers' stock will be consummated when the parent company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., is reorganized under the consent decree into separate production-distribution and exhibition companies. This reorganization is expected to be effected with a few months.

Si Fabian

Samuel Rosen

The market value of the deal, based on the current market price of Warner Brothers common, runs to approximately $9,000,000. This figure is based on the current quotation of $13.25 for WB common, and the halving of the quotation in consideration of the projected divorcement.

It is understood that the deal would give Fabian Enterprises, which owns and operates about 60 theatres in the East, control of about 25 per cent in the new Warner Brother theatre company. The projected theatre company at the time of its reorganization

Sees Para. Production Plans Hinged on Talent Available

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 9.—Paramount's recently announced 22-picture production schedule for the coming year may swell to as many as 28 or shrink to as few as 12, depending on talent availabilities and other unpredictables, production head Don Hartman told newsmen here today on his return from a European visit.

The executive said the studio's $45,000,000 inventory of finished pictures is large and varied enough so that there is no pressure on production for the sake of release, and for this reason the studio is able to sit back and wait for the best players, favorable circumstances or right market conditions, before starting production.

He also said the company is now in a very comfortable condition as to finances and the present size of the inventory of unreleased pictures is about right in proportion to other fiscal factors.

Concerning the industry's future, Hartman mentioned the remote-control lighting system and other mechanical devices recently applied in production and said, "We have lots of mechanical innovations and production improvements waiting, just around the corner, and our only concern is to get around that corner. Rising production costs is the biggest problem we have."

12 in 1953 from New Coplan, Gould Firm

Formation of a new distribution company which plans to release 12 pictures in 1953 was announced here yesterday by David Coplan and Walter Gould, both formerly associated in the worldwide operations of United Artists. The company, International-United Productions, Inc., is the exclusive American outlet for a group of producers in France, Switzerland, Italy, England and other countries.

Coplan, who has held executive industry posts in the United States and Canada and was UA managing director in Great Britain from 1944 to 1949, is president of the new company. Gould, who joined UA in 1926 and became general foreign manager in 1940, is executive vice-president.

International's entire program of 12 films has already been completed, with the first five available for nationwide distribution starting Feb. 15. "Black Eagle," starring Rossano Brazzi and Maria Canale; "Kill Him for Me!" starring Arturo de Cordova with Leticia Palma; "Swords of the Musketeers," based on the Alexandre Dumas story, with Maria Canale and Peter Trent; "City of Violence," starring Maria Montez and Alan Curtis, with the screenplay by Jesse L. Lasky, Jr., and Louis L. Gittler, and "The Captain's Wife," starring Anne Vernon and Rossano Brazzi.

The balance of the program for 1953 will be: "The Pirate Prince," starring Vittorio Gassmann and Milly Vitale; "High Treason," starring Signe Hasso and Alf Kjellin, known in Hollywood as Christopher Kent; "The Strange Case of Man and Beast," a new production of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"; "The Wicked Lady Anne," another Dumas story, starring Rossano Brazzi and Yvette Lebon; "The Prisoner of Venice," "Son of the Hunchback," starring Rossano Brazzi and Milly Vitale, and "The Man in the Red Mask."

'U' Sales Drive To Honor Feldman

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 9.—Universal will launch an 18-week "Charles J. Feldman Silver Anniversary Drive" on Dec. 28, to go through May 2, to mark Feldman's 25 years with the company, it was announced here by Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president to the company's production, distribution and promotion executives meeting in a week-long series of top level conferences.

Charles Feldman

Upwards of $36,000 will be distributed in prizes to the domestic division, district, branch and office managers, salesmen and bookers. Nine of 12 pictures listed by Daff for release during the period of the drive have color by Technicolor. The remaining three in black and white are highlighted by "Ma and Pa Kettle on Vacation" and "Abbott and Costello Go to Mars."

Urges Insurance On Foreign Trade

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, outlined three specific proposals for consideration in the coming session of the new Congress that would directly affect film industry foreign operations by greatly increasing international trade and protecting private American capital investments abroad, at a luncheon yesterday given by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners at the Hotel Commodore here.

Johnston advocated the creation of a Federal system to insure capital investments abroad against such extraordinary business risks as wars and uprisings, or confiscation through nationalization of industry; extension of present tax incentives to companies doing business in all other areas of the world as well as the Western Hemisphere to which present tax laws apply; and the allowance of reinvestment of a new overseas enterprise's profits without payment of U. S. tax on such profits for branch establishments as well as the presently provided for foreign-organized subsidiary.

Pointing out that foreign economic aid since the war has cost $35,000,000,000 and that "handouts are palliatives that bring no lasting gains" whereas increased trade does, Johnston urged the stimulation of private American industry abroad to replace handouts.

zil, Argentina, Chile and Peru and with national leaders of Uruguay. The prospects of settling various industry problems in those countries are encouraging, Johnston said. While not going into detail on the many points of current conflict, it is understood that those problems involve remittances, import permits, the present exclusion of U. S. newsreels in Brazil and Argentina and the Brazilian plan to have all black-and-white prints processed in that country after Jan. 1.

All meetings were on a friendly basis and "everything augurs well" for the industry down there, Johnston said.

The MPAA president did not take up the question or arbitration at yesterday's meeting. However, he plans to return to New York from his Washington headquarters next week when the arbitration situation may be discussed. Johnston returned to Washington immediately after yesterday's meeting.

Seeks Industry Aid On Overseas Films

Sen. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin predicted yesterday that leading Hollywood film executives will be invited to testify before the special Senate Foreign Relations sub-committee hearings reviewing America's Overseas Information Program, which includes the wide use of motion pictures.

The ranking Republican on the committee announced here that the hearings also will review closer cooperation between the motion picture industry and the government's film program, and closer cooperation with the industry itself in reviewing overseas film exports which might possibly have an adverse effect on foreign opinion of the United States.

Natural Vision, said that "Bwana Devil" grossed $96,000 in its first week at the Paramount Downtown and Hollywood theatres, in Los Angeles, breaking every record of both houses. He said the film will open in San Francisco on Dec. 16 at the St. Francis and on Christmas Day in Philadelphia, Dallas, San Antonio and Houston. He added that 150 prints of the film are expected by Feb. 1.

George Schaefer

Under the terms, it was explained, 50 per cent of the gross accrues to the distributor, with both exhibitor and distributor sharing advertising costs on a 50-50 basis. Ten cents paid by the exhibitor for each pair of Polarized glasses is deducted from the gross before the distributor-exhibitor percentage is divided.

Hearing Today on RKO Receivership Case

A hearing on a move to postpone arguments in the RKO Radio Pictures receivership application will be held before Justice Henry Clay Greenberg in New York Supreme Court today. The notice of postponement until Dec. 17 was filed by RKO Radio Pictures.

According to Louis Kipnis, attorney for three minority stockholders seeking to put the company into receivership, he was informed early Monday that a request for postponement had been granted, only to be informed by the court later that hearings on the request would be held today.

In a separate suit against David J. Greene, who owns about 78,000 shares of RKO Pictures stock, Kipnis withdrew his application to cite Greene for conptempt of court. Kipnis was advised by the U. S. District Court yesterday that the Department of Justice should be apprised of the evidence supporting such application. The contempt citation was sought on the grounds that Greene, who is also a director in RKO Theatres, violated the terms of the consent decree by opposing the RKO Pictures receivership bid at the last court hearing.

Shaeffer to 'Seventeen'

Martha Shaeffer has been appointed press editor in charge of all Seventeen Magazine public relations, effective immediately, succeeding Tess Williams, who has resigned to make her home in Boston, it was disclosed here yesterday by Mrs. Alice Thompson, publisher and editor of the magazine.

N. E. Independents Hit Advanced Prices

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—The New England Independent Exhibitors voted to have their members furnish affidavits and pertinent evidence in an attack on advanced admission prices on pre-released pictures and endorsed the policies of national Allied as outlined at the recent Chicago convention, today, at a meeting here.

The resolutions were passed at a joint session this morning of both conventional and drive-in theatremen to discuss common problems. Further particular problems were discussed later when the group split up into two separate clinics. No election was held and it was decided to defer this action until the annual meeting in January.

Speakers this afternoon included Leon J. Bamberger of RKO Radio Pictures; Burton Robbins, National Screen Service; Stephen L. Saunders, publisher of the magazine Prevue, which is sold in theatre lobbies; Father Joseph A. Pelletier, author of "The Sun Danced at Fatima," which is being sold by theatres playing the "Lady of Fatima" film; Joseph Rifkin, who spoke on Cinerama, and Irving Isaacs, who gave a complete report on the exhibitors' fight to maintain booths with one operator. It was noted a decision from the Massachusetts Supreme Court is expected between now and the middle of February.

Bamberger Sees Need of More News, Cheaper Film Ads

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager for RKO Radio Pictures, outlined for the convention of the Independent Exhibitors of New England today "the cooperation that should exist between you and your newspapers, your greatest ally." He emphasized that by closer relationships with newspaper figures, the exhibitors can attain fairer advertising rates and publication of more news.

Richey Urges Whole Industry To Practice Public Relations

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Henderson Richey, M-G-M director of exhibitor relations, tonight urged the Independent Exhibitors of New England at their Sheraton Plaza Hotel banquet tonight to actively participate in maintaining good public relations and noted this applies "to every single person making his living or who has his future in this great business of ours."

Richey cited the importance and gauged the progress of industry public relations in the past two years.

Marcus Files Suit Vs. Loew's, Para.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 9.—A $300,000 suit against Loew's and Paramount, charging "unreasonable and illegal" control of distribution channels, has been filed in Federal Court here by the Central Avenue Theatre Corp.

First and subsequent-run policies constitute restraint of trade under the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws, according to the action taken on behalf of the Zaring Theatre, Northside neighborhood house, by Mannie Marcus, president of Central.

"HONOLULU LOONY" is the title of a tale of Jerry Lewis' (Martin and Lewis) Hawaiian vacation; it appears in Modern Screen's January issue. The Honolulu vacation was born by a sudden impulse. Jerry, his wife Patty, his press agent, Jack Keller, Mrs. Keller, and Jerry's doctor, Martin Levy, were sitting in Lewis's living room when the phone rang for the 12th time. Jerry said, "If that phone rings again I'm going someplace where no one will find me." Keller answered the phone. "He's not here. I think he went to Honolulu." Jerry said, "That's it, Patty pack the bags, we're going to Honolulu. Let's leave before the phone rings again." Keller said, "You've got to make reservations and get tickets." Jerry said, "Then go ahead and do it, and you and your wife come along too. It was all your idea." Dr. Levy said, "You're supposed to take it easy." "Okay," said Jerry to Keller, "get him a ticket so he can see that I take it easy." Within eight hours all four were aboard a trans-Pacific plane headed for Honolulu. Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin's latest picture, the Paramount release, "The Stooge," is scheduled for multiple bookings starting New Year's Day.

Arbitration

press, which meant that only members of the Conference would be aware of the progress. As is now known, Allied rejected the distributors' plan at its Chicago convention last month.

The Motion Picture Association of America here yesterday released the texts of both drafts on the premise that it was desirable to make the plans available to the industry because of further joint discussions being under consideration.

Basically, the summary printed herewith is from the Oct. 17 draft, with modifications of the August proposals. According to the distributors' version, the purpose of a system would be "to serve as an expeditious and inexpensive means of settling controversies." This is a slight variation from the Myers draft which would make the plan "serve as an auxiliary enforcement procedure" under the anti-trust judgments and consent decrees.

Article I* specifies that arbitration would be available for 18 months as a test to "qualified exhibitors," who are defined as actual operators, operators of temporarily closed theatres or of new theatres about to open. If the system were not renewed after the 18-month test, awards made during that period would continue to be binding.

Article II, dealing with the scope of arbitration, is in five sections—clearance, runs, bidding, conditioned licensing and violations. Under Section 1, exhibitor complaints asserting that a distributor or distributors maintained a system of clearance, or granted clearance to a theatre or theatres not in substantial competition or granted unreasonable clearance would be subject to arbitration. Arbitrators would have the power to dismiss the complaint, order a distributor to cease and desist or eliminate or reduce clearance.

They also would be empowered to grant damages for the period that the complained of clearance was in effect, subject to the provisions of Article III. As to Section 2, dealing with runs, the arbitrators would be empowered to dismiss the complaint or to order a distributor to grant the exhibitor the opportunity to obtain the run, equal to a competing exhibitor or exhibitors. If conditions are alleged to have changed since an award was made, the exhibitor, distributor or intervening exhibitors may seek new arbitration. The burden of proving such change would be upon the party asserting it.

Section 3—competitive bidding—provides for arbitrating complaints that awards allegedly were made in competitive bidding not on a theatre-by-theatre basis, solely on the merits and without discrimination; when competitive bidding was established without written request of one or more exhibitors, and to comply with a court order or decree, in good faith to protect the distributor against collusion among exhibitors. Arbitration also could be requested if an exhibitor alleged that a distributor broke the rules for conducting bidding. There is nothing in this section that would compel a distributor to accept an offered bid which he considered inadequate. A provision in the October draft covers the right of a distributor to negotiate with an exhibitor who made the best offer, after all bids had been rejected or to negotiate with other exhibitors after rejecting the initial bids. This provision is not in the August draft.

In regard to conditioning one license upon another, covered by Section 4, this point could be arbitrated, but the exhibitor would have to make a claim to the distributor within 10 days after receipt of the license alleged to include the conditioning of one sale on another. Contract violations, Section 5, may be arbitrated if the exhibitor claims that provisions of a licensing agreement have been violated by the distributor.

Article III deals with damages. If damages are claimed in the original complaint, arbitrators may award an amount equal to the proven loss, or more if it is found that the damages were a result of "the deliberate purpose to injure the complainant or in wilful disregard of the probable harmful consequences to the complainant." If arbitrators find that other exhibitors are involved in the circumstances that resulted in damages to the complainant, an amount equal to the arbitrators' judgment of damages caused by the non-intervening exhibitors may be deducted from the damages to be paid by the distributor. When damages are claimed by the complainant exhibitor, such claim shall be limited to the damages sustained during the period of four years preceding the filing of the complaint, or subject to the state's statute of limitations.

Section 1 of Article IV, dealing with the system itself, concerns the National Administrative Committee. This section proposes that the arbitration system would be run by 12 persons composed of three each from Allied, the Theatre Owners of America and the distributors, one from the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, one from the Independent Theatre Owners Association and one from Western Theatre Owners. The chairman would be elected by the group on a rotating basis.

Section 2 provides for a regional tribunal in each exchange city. The tribunal would be supervised by a local committee made up of representatives of exhibitor associations picked by exhibitor members of the national administrator and an equal number of distributors chosen by the administrator's distributor members. The August draft does not give the national body the right to select local members of the arbitration committee. A national appeals board of three non-industry members is provided in Section 3.

Article V* concerns rules of practice and procedure. Under Section 1, arbitration proceedings would be instituted by an exhibitor filing a prescribed form with the tribunal's clerk. The complaint would be filed with the form and interested exhibitors and distributors would have the right to intervene. Selection of arbitrators is provided in Section. 2. In cases were the only parties are the complainant exhibitor and the respondent distributor or intervening distributors, each party would appoint an arbitrator and the two would designate the third, or neutral, arbitrator. In the event of disagreement on the neutral arbitrator, the local arbitration committee would name one. If there are more parties to the case than mentioned above and there is disagreement on arbitrators, the local arbitration committee would select three neutral ones.

Five other sections in Article V concern more or less routaine rules. The only significant difference here between the October and August drafts is that the former defines a lawyer in broad terms to include even those who have law degrees but have never been admitted to the bar. If the exhibitor does not use a lawyer, the distributor may not use one either.

Article VI contains routine provisions on appeals. In effect, an appeal may be taken only in connection with the awarding or denying of damages.

The October draft proposes conciliation in Article VII, which does not appear in the August proposals. This section provides for conciliation of all controversies in a procedure intended to dispose "of such controversies amicably, informally and quickly." In order to institute a conciliation proceeding, an exhibitor would have to file a written request for a meeting with the branch manager involved. The exhibitor could be accompanied to the meeting by one assistant or consultant, the same privilege applying to the branch manager. If the controversy is not settled at the meeting, the exhibitor may write to the distributor's general sales manager for a meeting at the home office, although by mutual agreement the meeting could be held anywhere. Here again the exhibitor could have an assistant, with the distributor being represented by the sales manager or an assistant designated by him. Conciliation meetings would be confidential and without prejudice and would not bar an exhibitor from going to arbitration or litigation.

A draft of a court order providing for the establishment of the arbitration system was proposed in the August draft only.

Interest in WB Theatres

is expected to own and operate approximately 300 WB theatres.

Harry M. Warner, president of WB, Albert Warner and Jack L. Warner, vice-presidents, together own about 18 per cent of WB's outstanding stock. Members of their family own roughly another seven per cent.

Si H. Fabian, president of Fabian Enterprises, a family corporation operating the Fabian Circuit, said that only Samuel Rosen, secretary-treasurer of the company, himself an associate of Fabian Enterprises, are participants in the purchase at this time. Fabian added, however, that other persons outside the industry may be included in the deal later. He declined to elaborate.

Neither Fabian nor WB would comment on the purchase price. Fabian said that Serge Semenenko, president of the First National Bank of Boston, was instrumental in bringing about the deal. He declined to state whether the bank figured in the financing of the purchase.

Negotiations which led to the successful conclusion of the agreement had gone on for three to four months both on the East and West coasts, Fabian said.

The Warner brothers will remain with the picture company and will devote all their time to the production and distribution of motion pictures and its other activities, a WB statement declared.

It was explained that reorganization of the parent company will take place sometime following the annual meeting of stockholders in Wilmington on Feb. 17. Under the Jan. 5, 1951, consent judgment, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., was required to separate its theatre business from its production and distribution enterprises, and the brothers were personally required to either sell or trustee their holdings in either one or the other branch.

WB stated that "It is expected that the new theatre company will be headed by Si Fabian and his associates, and the Warner brothers are happy that their stock is to be acquired by such well known veterans in the exhibition of motion pictures, and feel that under this arrangement the best interests of the stockholders and employes of the new theatre company will be preserved."

Under the plan for reorganization, the directors and officers of the new theatre company may be designated by the parent company, it was explained.

Fabian commented, "Samuel Rosen and I are very happy to have been able to make this deal with the three Warner brothers. It evidences our complete faith and confidence in the future of the motion picture exhibition industry. A substantial number of the men associated with the operation of the theatres are friends of many years standing. Under these circumstances, we are not strangers to them and they are not strangers to us. We are sure that the relationship will be an effective and happy one for all concerned."

The new theatre company will own and operate approximately 300 WB theatres in 16 states, including California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and the District of Columbia. The 60-theatre Fabian Circuit operates in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Virginia.

Controlling Interest In WB Theatres to Fabian

Harry, Jack and Albert Warner Sell Their Personal Stock in Circuit to Group; 300 Theatres Are Involved

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

An agreement with Fabian Enterprses, Inc., for the sale of the Brothers Warner stock in the new exhibition company to be formed for Warner Brothers theatres was disclosed here yesterday.

Under the agreement, the sale of the brothers' stock will be consummated when the parent company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., is reorganized under the consent decree into separate production-distribution and exhibition companies. This reorganization is expected to be effected with a few months.

Si Fabian

Samuel Rosen

The market value of the deal, based on the current market price of Warner Brothers common, runs to approximately $9,000,000. This figure is based on the current quotation of $13.25 for WB common, and the halving of the quotation in consideration of the projected divorcement.

It is understood that the deal would give Fabian Enterprises, which owns and operates about 60 theatres in the East, control of about 25 per cent in the new Warner Brother theatre company. The projected theatre company at the time of its reorganization

Theatre Deal

THE Warner-Fabian transaction is a development of deep significance to the business of motion pictures. It will add stature and scope to the already highly important exhibition interests of the Fabian enterprises.

The acquisition by the enterprises under the leadership of Mr. Si Fabian and Mr. Samuel Rosen of the theatre holdings of Harry, Albert and Jack Warner constitutes an eloquent pledge of confidence in the future of theatrical entertainment which will have sharp impact upon the amusement world. It will have a stabilizing influence and it will fan out into a broad current of confidence.

Under the judicial decision of divorcement of production and exhibition the Warner brothers were required to abandon either production or exhibition. As they had entered the exhibition field only with reluctance the decision as to where their future efforts would be devoted was a foregone conclusion. They are now left free to devote themselves single-mindedly to the business of producing and distributing motion pictures, which

MPAA Releases Texts of Aug., Oct. Proposals

A comparison of the two drafts designed to establish a system of arbitration for the motion picture industry—one prepared by Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, and the other by major companies' lawyers—reveals that the differences chiefly are in verbiage, with some additions by the distributors in various provisions. Neither draft includes provisions for arbitrating film rentals nor a plan for financing the proposed overall arbitration system.

Last summer, a special sub-committee of the Arbitration Conference reached an agreement in principle on a plan and Myers was designated to prepare the draft, which was submitted to the interested parties on Aug. 21. The distributors' lawyers revised the August draft and submitted it on Oct. 21. It was decided by the Conference that both drafts would be withheld from the trade

Sees Para. Production Plans Hinged on Talent Available

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 9.—Paramount's recently announced 22-picture production schedule for the coming year may swell to as many as 28 or shrink to as few as 12, depending on talent availabilities and other unpredictables, production head Don Hartman told newsmen here today on his return from a European visit.

The executive said the studio's $45,000,000 inventory of finished pictures is large and varied enough so that there is no pressure on production for the sake of release, and for this reason the studio is able to sit back and wait for the best players, favorable circumstances or right market conditions, before starting production.

He also said the company is now in a very comfortable condition as to finances and the present size of the inventory of unreleased pictures is about right in proportion to other fiscal factors.

Concerning the industry's future, Hartman mentioned the remote-control lighting system and other mechanical devices recently applied in production and said, "We have lots of mechanical innovations and production improvements waiting, just around the corner, and our only concern is to get around that corner. Rising production costs is the biggest problem we have."

12 in 1953 from New Coplan, Gould Firm

Formation of a new distribution company which plans to release 12 pictures in 1953 was announced here yesterday by David Coplan and Walter Gould, both formerly associated in the worldwide operations of United Artists. The company, International-United Productions, Inc., is the exclusive American outlet for a group of producers in France, Switzerland, Italy, England and other countries.

Coplan, who has held executive industry posts in the United States and Canada and was UA managing director in Great Britain from 1944 to 1949, is president of the new company. Gould, who joined UA in 1926 and became general foreign manager in 1940, is executive vice-president.

International's entire program of 12 films has already been completed, with the first five available for nationwide distribution starting Feb. 15. "Black Eagle," starring Rossano Brazzi and Maria Canale; "Kill Him for Me!" starring Arturo de Cordova with Leticia Palma; "Swords of the Musketeers," based on the Alexandre Dumas story, with Maria Canale and Peter Trent; "City of Violence," starring Maria Montez and Alan Curtis, with the screenplay by Jesse L. Lasky, Jr., and Louis L. Gittler, and "The Captain's Wife," starring Anne Vernon and Rossano Brazzi.

The balance of the program for 1953 will be: "The Pirate Prince," starring Vittorio Gassmann and Milly Vitale; "High Treason," starring Signe Hasso and Alf Kjellin, known in Hollywood as Christopher Kent; "The Strange Case of Man and Beast," a new production of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"; "The Wicked Lady Anne," another Dumas story, starring Rossano Brazzi and Yvette Lebon; "The Prisoner of Venice," "Son of the Hunchback," starring Rossano Brazzi and Milly Vitale, and "The Man in the Red Mask."

Urges Insurance On Foreign Trade

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, outlined three specific proposals for consideration in the coming session of the new Congress that would directly affect film industry foreign operations by greatly increasing international trade and protecting private American capital investments abroad, at a luncheon yesterday given by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners at the Hotel Commodore here.

Johnston advocated the creation of a Federal system to insure capital investments abroad against such extraordinary business risks as wars and uprisings, or confiscation through nationalization of industry; extension of present tax incentives to companies doing business in all other areas of the world as well as the Western Hemisphere to which present tax laws apply; and the allowance of reinvestment of a new overseas enterprise's profits without payment of U. S. tax on such profits for branch establishments as well as the presently provided for foreign-organized subsidiary.

Pointing out that foreign economic aid since the war has cost $35,000,000,000 and that "handouts are palliatives that bring no lasting gains" whereas increased trade does, Johnston urged the stimulation of private American industry abroad to replace handouts.

zil, Argentina, Chile and Peru and with national leaders of Uruguay. The prospects of settling various industry problems in those countries are encouraging, Johnston said. While not going into detail on the many points of current conflict, it is understood that those problems involve remittances, import permits, the present exclusion of U. S. newsreels in Brazil and Argentina and the Brazilian plan to have all black-and-white prints processed in that country after Jan. 1.

All meetings were on a friendly basis and "everything augurs well" for the industry down there, Johnston said.

The MPAA president did not take up the question or arbitration at yesterday's meeting. However, he plans to return to New York from his Washington headquarters next week when the arbitration situation may be discussed. Johnston returned to Washington immediately after yesterday's meeting.

Seeks Industry Aid On Overseas Films

Sen. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin predicted yesterday that leading Hollywood film executives will be invited to testify before the special Senate Foreign Relations sub-committee hearings reviewing America's Overseas Information Program, which includes the wide use of motion pictures.

The ranking Republican on the committee announced here that the hearings also will review closer cooperation between the motion picture industry and the government's film program, and closer cooperation with the industry itself in reviewing overseas film exports which might possibly have an adverse effect on foreign opinion of the United States.

He added that 150 prints of the film are expected by Feb. 1.

Hearing Today on RKO Receivership Case

A hearing on a move to postpone arguments in the RKO Radio Pictures receivership application will be held before Justice Henry Clay Greenberg in New York Supreme Court today. The notice of postponement until Dec. 17 was filed by RKO Radio Pictures.

According to Louis Kipnis, attorney for three minority stockholders seeking to put the company into receivership, he was informed early Monday that a request for postponement had been granted, only to be informed by the court later that hearings on the request would be held today.

In a separate suit against David J. Greene, who owns about 78,000 shares of RKO Pictures stock, Kipnis withdrew his application to cite Greene for conptempt of court. Kipnis was advised by the U. S. District Court yesterday that the Department of Justice should be apprised of the evidence supporting such application. The contempt citation was sought on the grounds that Greene, who is also a director in RKO Theatres, violated the terms of the consent decree by opposing the RKO Pictures receivership bid at the last court hearing.

Shaeffer to 'Seventeen'

Martha Shaeffer has been appointed press editor in charge of all Seventeen Magazine public relations, effective immediately, succeeding Tess Williams, who has resigned to make her home in Boston, it was disclosed here yesterday by Mrs. Alice Thompson, publisher and editor of the magazine.

N. E. Independents Hit Advanced Prices

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—The New England Independent Exhibitors voted to have their members furnish affidavits and pertinent evidence in an attack on advanced admission prices on pre-released pictures and endorsed the policies of national Allied as outlined at the recent Chicago convention, today, at a meeting here.

The resolutions were passed at a joint session this morning of both conventional and drive-in theatremen to discuss common problems. Further particular problems were discussed later when the group split up into two separate clinics. No election was held and it was decided to defer this action until the annual meeting in January.

Speakers this afternoon included Leon J. Bamberger of RKO Radio Pictures; Burton Robbins, National Screen Service; Stephen L. Saunders, publisher of the magazine Prevue, which is sold in theatre lobbies; Father Joseph A. Pelletier, author of "The Sun Danced at Fatima," which is being sold by theatres playing the "Lady of Fatima" film; Joseph Rifkin, who spoke on Cinerama, and Irving Isaacs, who gave a complete report on the exhibitors' fight to maintain booths with one operator. It was noted a decision from the Massachusetts Supreme Court is expected between now and the middle of February.

Bamberger Sees Need of More News, Cheaper Film Ads

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager for RKO Radio Pictures, outlined for the convention of the Independent Exhibitors of New England today "the cooperation that should exist between you and your newspapers, your greatest ally." He emphasized that by closer relationships with newspaper figures, the exhibitors can attain fairer advertising rates and publication of more news.

Richey Urges Whole Industry To Practice Public Relations

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Henderson Richey, M-G-M director of exhibitor relations, tonight urged the Independent Exhibitors of New England at their Sheraton Plaza Hotel banquet tonight to actively participate in maintaining good public relations and noted this applies "to every single person making his living or who has his future in this great business of ours."

Richey cited the importance and gauged the progress of industry public relations in the past two years.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 9.—A $300,000 suit against Loew's and Paramount, charging "unreasonable and illegal" control of distribution channels, has been filed in Federal Court here by the Central Avenue Theatre Corp.

"HONOLULU LOONY" is the title of a tale of Jerry Lewis' (Martin and Lewis) Hawaiian vacation; it appears in Modern Screen's January issue. The Honolulu vacation was born by a sudden impulse. Jerry, his wife Patty, his press agent, Jack Keller, Mrs. Keller, and Jerry's doctor, Martin Levy, were sitting in Lewis's living room when the phone rang for the 12th time. Jerry said, "If that phone rings again I'm going someplace where no one will find me." Keller answered the phone. "He's not here. I think he went to Honolulu." Jerry said, "That's it, Patty pack the bags, we're going to Honolulu. Let's leave before the phone rings again." Keller said, "You've got to make reservations and get tickets." Jerry said, "Then go ahead and do it, and you and your wife come along too. It was all your idea." Dr. Levy said, "You're supposed to take it easy." "Okay," said Jerry to Keller, "get him a ticket so he can see that I take it easy." Within eight hours all four were aboard a trans-Pacific plane headed for Honolulu. Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin's latest picture, the Paramount release, "The Stooge," is scheduled for multiple bookings starting New Year's Day.

Arbitration

press, which meant that only members of the Conference would be aware of the progress. As is now known, Allied rejected the distributors' plan at its Chicago convention last month.

The Motion Picture Association of America here yesterday released the texts of both drafts on the premise that it was desirable to make the plans available to the industry because of further joint discussions being under consideration.

Basically, the summary printed herewith is from the Oct. 17 draft, with modifications of the August proposals. According to the distributors' version, the purpose of a system would be "to serve as an expeditious and inexpensive means of settling controversies." This is a slight variation from the Myers draft which would make the plan "serve as an auxiliary enforcement procedure" under the anti-trust judgments and consent decrees.

Article I* specifies that arbitration would be available for 18 months as a test to "qualified exhibitors," who are defined as actual operators, operators of temporarily closed theatres or of new theatres about to open. If the system were not renewed after the 18-month test, awards made during that period would continue to be binding.

Article II, dealing with the scope of arbitration, is in five sections—clearance, runs, bidding, conditioned licensing and violations. Under Section 1, exhibitor complaints asserting that a distributor or distributors maintained a system of clearance, or granted clearance to a theatre or theatres not in substantial competition or granted unreasonable clearance would be subject to arbitration. Arbitrators would have the power to dismiss the complaint, order a distributor to cease and desist or eliminate or reduce clearance.

They also would be empowered to grant damages for the period that the complained of clearance was in effect, subject to the provisions of Article III. As to Section 2, dealing with runs, the arbitrators would be empowered to dismiss the complaint or to order a distributor to grant the exhibitor the opportunity to obtain the run, equal to a competing exhibitor or exhibitors. If conditions are alleged to have changed since an award was made, the exhibitor, distributor or intervening exhibitors may seek new arbitration. The burden of proving such change would be upon the party asserting it.

Section 3—competitive bidding—provides for arbitrating complaints that awards allegedly were made in competitive bidding not on a theatre-by-theatre basis, solely on the merits and without discrimination; when competitive bidding was established without written request of one or more exhibitors, and to comply with a court order or decree, in good faith to protect the distributor against collusion among exhibitors. Arbitration also could be requested if an exhibitor alleged that a distributor broke the rules for conducting bidding. There is nothing in this section that would compel a distributor to accept an offered bid which he considered inadequate. A provision in the October draft covers the right of a distributor to negotiate with an exhibitor who made the best offer, after all bids had been rejected or to negotiate with other exhibitors after rejecting the initial bids. This provision is not in the August draft.

In regard to conditioning one license upon another, covered by Section 4, this point could be arbitrated, but the exhibitor would have to make a claim to the distributor within 10 days after receipt of the license alleged to include the conditioning of one sale on another. Contract violations, Section 5, may be arbitrated if the exhibitor claims that provisions of a licensing agreement have been violated by the distributor.

Article III deals with damages. If damages are claimed in the original complaint, arbitrators may award an amount equal to the proven loss, or more if it is found that the damages were a result of "the deliberate purpose to injure the complainant or in wilful disregard of the probable harmful consequences to the complainant." If arbitrators find that other exhibitors are involved in the circumstances that resulted in damages to the complainant, an amount equal to the arbitrators' judgment of damages caused by the non-intervening exhibitors may be deducted from the damages to be paid by the distributor. When damages are claimed by the complainant exhibitor, such claim shall be limited to the damages sustained during the period of four years preceding the filing of the complaint, or subject to the state's statute of limitations.

Section 1 of Article IV, dealing with the system itself, concerns the National Administrative Committee. This section proposes that the arbitration system would be run by 12 persons composed of three each from Allied, the Theatre Owners of America and the distributors, one from the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, one from the Independent Theatre Owners Association and one from Western Theatre Owners. The chairman would be elected by the group on a rotating basis.

Section 2 provides for a regional tribunal in each exchange city. The tribunal would be supervised by a local committee made up of representatives of exhibitor associations picked by exhibitor members of the national administrator and an equal number of distributors chosen by the administrator's distributor members. The August draft does not give the national body the right to select local members of the arbitration committee. A national appeals board of three non-industry members is provided in Section 3.

Article V* concerns rules of practice and procedure. Under Section 1, arbitration proceedings would be instituted by an exhibitor filing a prescribed form with the tribunal's clerk. The complaint would be filed with the form and interested exhibitors and distributors would have the right to intervene. Selection of arbitrators is provided in Section. 2. In cases were the only parties are the complainant exhibitor and the respondent distributor or intervening distributors, each party would appoint an arbitrator and the two would designate the third, or neutral, arbitrator. In the event of disagreement on the neutral arbitrator, the local arbitration committee would name one. If there are more parties to the case than mentioned above and there is disagreement on arbitrators, the local arbitration committee would select three neutral ones.

Five other sections in Article V concern more or less routaine rules. The only significant difference here between the October and August drafts is that the former defines a lawyer in broad terms to include even those who have law degrees but have never been admitted to the bar. If the exhibitor does not use a lawyer, the distributor may not use one either.

Article VI contains routine provisions on appeals. In effect, an appeal may be taken only in connection with the awarding or denying of damages.

The October draft proposes conciliation in Article VII, which does not appear in the August proposals. This section provides for conciliation of all controversies in a procedure intended to dispose "of such controversies amicably, informally and quickly." In order to institute a conciliation proceeding, an exhibitor would have to file a written request for a meeting with the branch manager involved. The exhibitor could be accompanied to the meeting by one assistant or consultant, the same privilege applying to the branch manager. If the controversy is not settled at the meeting, the exhibitor may write to the distributor's general sales manager for a meeting at the home office, although by mutual agreement the meeting could be held anywhere. Here again the exhibitor could have an assistant, with the distributor being represented by the sales manager or an assistant designated by him. Conciliation meetings would be confidential and without prejudice and would not bar an exhibitor from going to arbitration or litigation.

A draft of a court order providing for the establishment of the arbitration system was proposed in the August draft only.

Interest in WB Theatres

is expected to own and operate approximately 300 WB theatres.

Harry M. Warner, president of WB, Albert Warner and Jack L. Warner, vice-presidents, together own about 18 per cent of WB's outstanding stock. Members of their family own roughly another seven per cent.

Si H. Fabian, president of Fabian Enterprises, a family corporation operating the Fabian Circuit, said that only Samuel Rosen, secretary-treasurer of the company, himself an associate of Fabian Enterprises, are participants in the purchase at this time. Fabian added, however, that other persons outside the industry may be included in the deal later. He declined to elaborate.

Neither Fabian nor WB would comment on the purchase price. Fabian said that Serge Semenenko, president of the First National Bank of Boston, was instrumental in bringing about the deal. He declined to state whether the bank figured in the financing of the purchase.

Negotiations which led to the successful conclusion of the agreement had gone on for three to four months both on the East and West coasts, Fabian said.

The Warner brothers will remain with the picture company and will devote all their time to the production and distribution of motion pictures and its other activities, a WB statement declared.

It was explained that reorganization of the parent company will take place sometime following the annual meeting of stockholders in Wilmington on Feb. 17. Under the Jan. 5, 1951, consent judgment, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., was required to separate its theatre business from its production and distribution enterprises, and the brothers were personally required to either sell or trustee their holdings in either one or the other branch.

WB stated that "It is expected that the new theatre company will be headed by Si Fabian and his associates, and the Warner brothers are happy that their stock is to be acquired by such well known veterans in the exhibition of motion pictures, and feel that under this arrangement the best interests of the stockholders and employes of the new theatre company will be preserved."

Under the plan for reorganization, the directors and officers of the new theatre company may be designated by the parent company, it was explained.

Fabian commented, "Samuel Rosen and I are very happy to have been able to make this deal with the three Warner brothers. It evidences our complete faith and confidence in the future of the motion picture exhibition industry. A substantial number of the men associated with the operation of the theatres are friends of many years standing. Under these circumstances, we are not strangers to them and they are not strangers to us. We are sure that the relationship will be an effective and happy one for all concerned."

The new theatre company will own and operate approximately 300 WB theatres in 16 states, including California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and the District of Columbia. The 60-theatre Fabian Circuit operates in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Virginia.

Kalmine to Remain Head of Circuit

Harry M. Kalmine, president of Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corp., will continue as head of the new theatre company, Si Fabian, president of Fabian Enterprises, Inc., said here yesterday.

Hughes-Stolkin Talks on RKO Future Collapse

All Deals Are Called Off as Coast Negotiations Break Up; Chicago Group Keeps Stock; Next Move Is Up to Them

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 10.—Negotiations between the Ralph Stolkin syndicate and Howard Hughes which have been under way here for nearly four weeks were terminated today, for the time being at least, with no agreements of any kind having been reached.

In consequence of the collapse of all proposals for reorganization of RKO Pictures' management, reconstitution of its board of directors and revision or cancellation of the Stolkin syndicate's agreement to purchase Hughes' 29 per cent controlling stock interest in the company, the ownership and management status remains the same as it was on Nov. 13 when Arnold Grant resigned as board chairman and chief executive officer of RKO Pictures for the Stolkin syndicate.

Sherrill Corwin, a member of the syndicate, was named acting chairman of the board at that time and presumably continues in the same capacity. Corwin and Edward J. Burke are the only members of the syndicate still on RKO Pictures' board. Elected with them to the RKO Radio board following Grant's resignation were William Zimmerman, Charles Boasberg and Ross Hastings, executives of the company. Three vacancies on the board remain unfilled.

The earlier board vacancies occurred Oct. 22 when Stolkin, A. L. Koolish and William Gorman, the latter the representative of Ray Ryan, the fifth member of the syndicate, re-

20% Tax Fight Highlights COMPO Meet

First Stage of Fight Seen Advancing Satisfactorily

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The major topic discussed today at the first day's meeting of the executive committee and board of directors of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations at the Blackstone Hotel, was the report of the national tax repeal campaign committee, headed by H. A. Cole, and Pat McGee.

Declaring that the first stage of the campaign, the enlistment of Senators and Congressman to support repeal, has progressed most satisfactorily, the report stated that the next step called for the securing of information from distressed theatres which would show the hardship inflicted by the tax. This information, it was asserted, will be used by the tax repeal committee in its arguments for repeal before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Recognizing the importance of personalized experiences with the operations of the tax, the meeting, which

NPA to Lift Ban On Building Jan. 1

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. — The National Production Authority announced today it would end its two-year old ban on theatre construction Jan. 1, with one major modification.

Self-certification privileges for aluminum, however, won't be effective until May 1, when theatre builders will be able to self-authorize up to 300 pounds of aluminum per project, per quarter.

NPA originally had scheduled May 1 as the date for lifting the prohibition on new theatre construction.

RKO Talks

signed following a series of expose articles in the Wall Street Journal which concerned the three.

The calling off of all deals between Hughes and the Stolkin syndicate today resulted, according to reports, from Hughes' unwillingness to make concessions or deferments to the Stolkin group on their stock purchase agreement with him without Ned E. Depinet returning to the RKO Pictures presidency.

Depinet had been called here 10 days ago by Hughes to participate in the final conferences. Shortly after his arrival an agreement was reached under which the Stolkin group was to return the 1,048,012 shares which it contracted to purchase from Hughes and Depinet at $7 per share. The Stolkin group was to have waived its $1,250,000 down payment for the stock in return for waivers of liability under the purchase agreement and during its administration of RKO Pictures. Depinet was to have returned as president with complete autonomy.

Hitch Occurred

A hitch occurred late last week in effecting the agreement, some reports having it that Corwin balked at taking the loss of the down payment, leading to differences among the members of the syndicate.

On Monday of this week syndicate members reached a new agreement with Hughes under which their stock purchase commitments would be deferred, but Hughes would assume responsibility for RKO Pictures' management until such time as the Stolkin group had found a purchaser for its 29 per cent controlling stock interest. Hughes reportedly rejected this agreement the following day upon learning that Depinet would not return to the RKO Pictures presidency without an unequivocal guaranty of complete autonomy. Hughes is said to have balked at the guaranty with the result that Depinet declined to accept the presidency and a place on the board of directors.

Depinet to New York

Depinet was scheduled to leave here for New York by plane tonight.

Collapse of the negotiations here obviously leaves the next move up to the Stolkin group. They are back in the saddle, apparently against their wishes, and are confronted with the problem of providing management and a complete board of directors for the company before next Wednesday, when a hearing is scheduled in New York Supreme Court on a stockholders' application for appointment of a receiver for the company. The hearing was postponed for one week today, largely on company representations to the court that a settlement of the management and board problems was expected "momentarily."

Members Liable

Members of the Stolkin syndicate are liable individually and as a group to Hughes for performance of the stock purchase contract, under which they are committed to pay a $6,000,000 balance on the purchase price, plus interest, and with provisions for penalties, before October, 1954.

Court Expresses Concern

senting the company, informed the court that meetings are continuing on the Coast for reconstitution of the board and the selection of a president. Connelly added that a decision on these problems may come "momentarily." He referred to the series of meetings between Howard Hughes, members of the Ralph Stolkin group, which purchased Hughes' 29 per cent controlling interest in the company, and Ned E. Depinet, former RKO president and now company consultant. The attorney of the law firm of Cravath, Swaine and Moore, expressed regret that the Coast conferences had not as yet culminated.

William Zimmerman, RKO general counsel, told the court that there was "no real emergency" as to the solvency of the company. He said the losses currently being sustained by the company are "in effect liquidation of high cost pictures" which were completed last year. "Our real problem" Zimmerman continued, "is the accumulation of pictures." He said he saw no conflict of interest between the 29 per cent group represented by Stolkin and the remaining stockholders.

This brought a rejoinder from Justice Greenberg, who said that "Howard Hughes probably can lose $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 while others can't lose $200 or $300."

Justice Greenberg also took judicial notice of the fact that more than 50 per cent of the company's current income is derived from independent producers releasing through RKO. Contracts of independent producers, according to company affidavits, provide for termination of distribution rights if a receiver is appointed.

Judge Samuel J. Rosenman, representing Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Inc., questioned the jurisdiction of the court as to RKO assets outside New York State. Supporting the company's bid for a delay, Judge Rosenman said RKO's distribution set-up is now operating in a normal and profitable manner.

Whitney Seymour, of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, who represented the Atlas Corp. and Walt Disney Productions, expressed no objection to postponing the hearing as requested by RKO. He said he had no comment as to the operations of the company.

Isadore J. Kresel, counsel for David J. Greene, who claims to own and control more than 78,000 shares of RKO Pictures stock, supported the application for adjournment.

Louis Kipnis, attorney for the plaintiff minority stockholders, said he could not consent to an adjournment. The three minority stockholders seeking to put the company in receivership are Eli B. Castleman and his wife, Marion V. Castleman of Detroit and Louis Feuerman of this city, claiming to own a total of 2,525 shares.

The hearing on the delaying motion also brought to light a cross-motion by the company to to dismiss the receivership aplication. In support of this cross-motion were the affidavits of Zimmerman, William H. Clark, treasurer of RKO Radio Pictures, and Garrett Van Wagner, comptroller.

Zimmerman, in his affidavit, said that experienced key employees of the company who are in great demand by "our competitors have given indication of the possibility of their leaving" the company in the event of a court-appointed receiver.

The company's motion to dismiss the receivership application claimed that the complaint did not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action, that the plaintiffs have no legal capacity to sue and that the court should decline jurisdiction of the action because it involves the internal affairs and management of a solvent foreign corporation.

Clark, in his affidavit, pointed up the importance of such producers as Goldwyn, Disney and Sol Lesser to the company. He said of approximately $39,000,000 of film rentals in the 39 weeks ending Sept. 27, 1952, about $21,000,000 was realized from features and short subjects produced by others releasing through RKO. "The effect upon the company of having these distributor contracts cancelled by reason of the appointment of a receiver is obvious," he added.

Van Wagner's deposition said, without exception, the basic operating organization of the company is intact and fully capable of carrying out its production and distribution commitments. He said that approximately 1,000 persons are employed at the studio and currently one picture is being filmed and five others being cut and edited. Preparatory work, he went on, is underway on 13 additional feature pictures under the supervision of six producers employed by the studio.

was attended by 50 representatives of all the organizations making up COMPO, authorized Cole and McGee to take whatever steps may be necessary to obtain this information. It was indicated that a simple questionaire would be put in the hands of all distressed exhibitors and that, if necessary, salesmen of the various distributing companies would be used in the work.

The meeting adopted a resolution commending the tax campaign committee for its work.

Sam Pinanski, one of the three co-chairmen now directing the affairs of COMPO, read a report covering the activities of the co-chairmen since their ascension of office last June. The report emphasized that Al Lichtman, Trueman T. Rembusch and Pinanski, the triumvirate, had thrown all of COMPO's resources and facilities behind the campaign and that this policy would be pursued until the tax is repealed.

Sam Pinanski

The report of the membership drive conducted in August and September, read by Rembusch, as chairman of the finance committee, stated that nearly 14,000 exhibitors had paid their COMPO dues.

Herman Robbins, treasurer, read a report of COMPO's financial condition and policies.

The Theatre Owners of Washington, Idaho and Alaska were admitted to membership and the membership committee was instructed to approach equipment manufacturers and other industries allied with the picture business to enlist them as members.

The committee voted to give further consideration to a proposal by Mrs. Mary Lasker, widow of Albert D. Lasker, that motion picture theatres conduct a national health week for the benefit of charities in need of money for medical research.

Reporting on the Movietime, U.S.A. projects, Robert J. O'Donnell, national director, said that since the tours were started a year ago, 330 Hollywood personalities had made 8,000 personal appearances in 1,500 cities and towns in nearly all of the 48 states. O'Donnell, who was commended for his work, emphasized that the tours must be continued because of their great value in promoting industry good-will and because they have perfected an organization for future industry action on other problems that might arise.

R. J. O'Donnell

The committee heard a proposal from Steve Broidy, president of the Motion Picture Industry Council of Hollywood, that COMPO cooperate in an extension of the MPIC's public relations service through exhibitors. It was referred to the finance committee.

After a presentation by O'Donnell of the plans of Texas COMPO for an exposition and touring train, the committee adopted a resolution approving the presentation and instructing the COMPO co-chairmen to prepare a report on the project.

The session was presided over by Rembusch and will resume tomorrow morning.

"Hiawatha"

(Allied Artists) Hollywood, Dec. 10

PRODUCER Walter Mirisch has presented the story of the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow American poetic classic in terms of straightaway action with fine dramatic values and without loss of the tale's charm.

Filmed in CineColor, this held a capacity preview audience composed principally of press and profession at the Academy Awards Theatre in Hollywood completely in its spell, and drew sustained applause at the closing.

The production is a notable achievement to be credited to Mirisch and to his associate producer, Richard Heermance, his director, Kurt Neumann, his writers, Arthur Strawn and Dan Ullman, and his cinematographer, Harry Neumann.

The filming of the Longfellow poem presented problems of various kinds. The measured narration of the poet had to be enlivened, and Mirisch made it a point to throw in a hot-tempered killing at almost the very beginning of the film. How to write dialogue that would convey the Longfellow story without falling into the rhythm of the poem was no simple question. It was answered by giving the Indians plain every-day English lines to speak in every-day fashion, with no poetic phrases or expression undertaken. Only at the start and close of the picture are a few lines of the poem spoken, by an off-screen narrator.

The story of Hiawatha is too well known, for repetition in synopsis here. The important fact is that it comes out in the Mirisch production a story of Indian life, customs and conflicts in the America of the Ojolbways, the Illinois and the Dacotahs, before the coming of the whites, and that it retains the charm of the poem without utilizing the devices of poetry, and in spite of the swift and sometimes bloody melodrama contained in it.

Vincent Edwards portrays the title character, and Yvette Dugay plays Minnehaha. Others in the cast are Keith Larsen, Gene Iglesias, Armando Silvestre, Stuart Randall, Michael Tolan, Ian MacDonald, Katherine Emery, Morris Ankrum and Stephen Chase.

Running time, 80 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 28.

"Babes In Bagdad"

(Edward J. and Harry L. Danziger-United Artists)

PAULETTE GODDARD and Gypsy Rose Lee are the two lasses referred to in the title of this harum-scarum satire that occasionally is humorous and often is opulent. It is especially attractive when the two very amply endowed actresses are dazzlingly displayed in a variety of revealing costumes in a bright color process titled Exoticolor.

The emphasis on glamor undoubtedly can be exploited and the marquee lure of the cast is of value. Richard Ney and John Boles are further aids.

Edward J. and Harry L. Danziger have provided lavish interior settings and utilized Spanish backgrounds. The screenplay by Felix Feist and Joe Anson includes harum gags and intersperses modern colloquialisms with pseudo-Arabian dialogue. Director Edgar G. Ulmer has allowed the performers to cavort freely and the mixture of serious playing and broad acting is quite ludicrous.

Richard Ney is the godson of a Caliph whose monogamous viewpoint results in his investigating a complaint filed by Miss Lee and other harum members against Kadi John Boles. At the same time he looks into the Bagdad corruption carried on by the tax collector, villainously portrayed by Thomas Gallagher. It takes a few days for Ney to get the goods on Gallagher, trick Boles into letting him marry Miss Goddard and turn Boles into a tractable ruler, who accepts Miss Lee as his sole wife.

Others in the cast are Sebastian Cabot, Macdonald Parke, Natalie Benesh, Hugh Dempster, and Peter Bathurst.

Running time, 79 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 7.

Hughes-Stolkin Talks on RKO Future Collapse

All Deals Are Called Off as Coast Negotiations Break Up; Chicago Group Keeps Stock; Next Move Is Up to Them

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 10.—Negotiations between the Ralph Stolkin syndicate and Howard Hughes which have been under way here for nearly four weeks were terminated today, for the time being at least, with no agreements of any kind having been reached.

In consequence of the collapse of all proposals for reorganization of RKO Pictures' management, reconstitution of its board of directors and revision or cancellation of the Stolkin syndicate's agreement to purchase Hughes' 29 per cent controlling stock interest in the company, the ownership and management status remains the same as it was on Nov. 13 when Arnold Grant resigned as board chairman and chief executive officer of RKO Pictures for the Stolkin syndicate.

Sherrill Corwin, a member of the syndicate, was named acting chairman of the board at that time and presumably continues in the same capacity. Corwin and Edward J. Burke are the only members of the syndicate still on RKO Pictures' board. Elected with them to the RKO Radio board following Grant's resignation were William Zimmerman, Charles Boasberg and Ross Hastings, executives of the company. Three vacancies on the board remain unfilled.

The earlier board vacancies occurred Oct. 22 when Stolkin, A. L. Koolish and William Gorman, the latter the representative of Ray Ryan, the fifth member of the syndicate, re-

First Stage of Fight Seen Advancing Satisfactorily

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The major topic discussed today at the first day's meeting of the executive committee and board of directors of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations at the Blackstone Hotel, was the report of the national tax repeal campaign committee, headed by H. A. Cole, and Pat McGee.

Declaring that the first stage of the campaign, the enlistment of Senators and Congressman to support repeal, has progressed most satisfactorily, the report stated that the next step called for the securing of information from distressed theatres which would show the hardship inflicted by the tax. This information, it was asserted, will be used by the tax repeal committee in its arguments for repeal before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Recognizing the importance of personalized experiences with the operations of the tax, the meeting, which signed following a series of expose articles in the Wall Street Journal which concerned the three.

RKO Talks

The calling off of all deals between Hughes and the Stolkin syndicate today resulted, according to reports, from Hughes' unwillingness to make concessions or deferments to the Stolkin group on their stock purchase agreement with him without Ned E. Depinet returning to the RKO Pictures presidency.

Depinet had been called here 10 days ago by Hughes to participate in the final conferences. Shortly after his arrival an agreement was reached under which the Stolkin group was to return the 1,048,012 shares which it contracted to purchase from Hughes and Depinet at $7 per share. The Stolkin group was to have waived its $1,250,000 down payment for the stock in return for waivers of liability under the purchase agreement and during its administration of RKO Pictures. Depinet was to have returned as president with complete autonomy.

Hitch Occurred

A hitch occurred late last week in effecting the agreement, some reports having it that Corwin balked at taking the loss of the down payment, leading to differences among the members of the syndicate.

On Monday of this week syndicate members reached a new agreement with Hughes under which their stock purchase commitments would be deferred, but Hughes would assume responsibility for RKO Pictures' management until such time as the Stolkin group had found a purchaser for its 29 per cent controlling stock interest. Hughes reportedly rejected this agreement the following day upon learning that Depinet would not return to the RKO Pictures presidency without an unequivocal guaranty of complete autonomy. Hughes is said to have balked at the guaranty with the result that Depinet declined to accept the presidency and a place on the board of directors.

Depinet to New York

Depinet was scheduled to leave here for New York by plane tonight.

Collapse of the negotiations here obviously leaves the next move up to the Stolkin group. They are back in the saddle, apparently against their wishes, and are confronted with the problem of providing management and a complete board of directors for the company before next Wednesday, when a hearing is scheduled in New York Supreme Court on a stockholders' application for appointment of a receiver for the company. The hearing was postponed for one week today, largely on company representations to the court that a settlement of the management and board problems was expected "momentarily."

Members Liable

Members of the Stolkin syndicate are liable individually and as a group to Hughes for performance of the stock purchase contract, under which they are committed to pay a $6,000,000 balance on the purchase price, plus interest, and with provisions for penalties, before October, 1954.

Court Expresses Concern

senting the company, informed the court that meetings are continuing on the Coast for reconstitution of the board and the selection of a president. Connelly added that a decision on these problems may come "momentarily." He referred to the series of meetings between Howard Hughes, members of the Ralph Stolkin group, which purchased Hughes' 29 per cent controlling interest in the company, and Ned E. Depinet, former RKO president and now company consultant. The attorney of the law firm of Cravath, Swaine and Moore, expressed regret that the Coast conferences had not as yet culminated.

William Zimmerman, RKO general counsel, told the court that there was "no real emergency" as to the solvency of the company. He said the losses currently being sustained by the company are "in effect liquidation of high cost pictures" which were completed last year. "Our real problem" Zimmerman continued, "is the accumulation of pictures." He said he saw no conflict of interest between the 29 per cent group represented by Stolkin and the remaining stockholders.

This brought a rejoinder from Justice Greenberg, who said that "Howard Hughes probably can lose $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 while others can't lose $200 or $300."

Justice Greenberg also took judicial notice of the fact that more than 50 per cent of the company's current income is derived from independent producers releasing through RKO. Contracts of independent producers, according to company affidavits, provide for termination of distribution rights if a receiver is appointed.

Judge Samuel J. Rosenman, representing Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Inc., questioned the jurisdiction of the court as to RKO assets outside New York State. Supporting the company's bid for a delay, Judge Rosenman said RKO's distribution set-up is now operating in a normal and profitable manner.

Whitney Seymour, of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, who represented the Atlas Corp. and Walt Disney Productions, expressed no objection to postponing the hearing as requested by RKO. He said he had no comment as to the operations of the company.

Isadore J. Kresel, counsel for David J. Greene, who claims to own and control more than 78,000 shares of RKO Pictures stock, supported the application for adjournment.

Louis Kipnis, attorney for the plaintiff minority stockholders, said he could not consent to an adjournment. The three minority stockholders seeking to put the company in receivership are Eli B. Castleman and his wife, Marion V. Castleman of Detroit and Louis Feuerman of this city, claiming to own a total of 2,525 shares.

The hearing on the delaying motion also brought to light a cross-motion by the company to to dismiss the receivership application. In support of this cross-motion were the affidavits of Zimmerman, William H. Clark, treasurer of RKO Radio Pictures, and Garrett Van Wagner, comptroller.

Zimmerman, in his affidavit, said that experienced key employees of the company who are in great demand by "our competitors have given indication of the possibility of their leaving" the company in the event of a court-appointed receiver.

The company's motion to dismiss the receivership application claimed that the complaint did not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action, that the plaintiffs have no legal capacity to sue and that the court should decline jurisdiction of the action because it involves the internal affairs and management of a solvent foreign corporation.

Clark, in his affidavit, pointed up the importance of such producers as Goldwyn, Disney and Sol Lesser to the company. He said of approximately $39,000,000 of film rentals in the 39 weeks ending Sept. 27, 1952, about $21,000,000 was realized from features and short subjects produced by others releasing through RKO. "The effect upon the company of having these distributor contracts cancelled by reason of the appointment of a receiver is obvious," he added.

Van Wagner's deposition said, without exception, the basic operating organization of the company is intact and fully capable of carrying out its production and distribution commitments. He said that approximately 1,000 persons are employed at the studio and currently one picture is being filmed and five others being cut and edited. Preparatory work, he went on, is underway on 13 additional feature pictures under the supervision of six producers employed by the studio.

The organization will devote itself to the utilization of its crafts members by the makers of television films. These crafts include cameramen, studio mechanics, film editors, laboratory technicians, assistant directors, wardrobe personnel, makeup artists and hair stylists.

The basic agreement will include base scales and conditions for each union. was attended by 50 representatives of all the organizations making up COMPO, authorized Cole and McGee to take whatever steps may be necessary to obtain this information. It was indicated that a simple questionaire would be put in the hands of all distressed exhibitors and that, if necessary, salesmen of the various distributing companies would be used in the work.

The meeting adopted a resolution commending the tax campaign committee for its work.

Sam Pinanski, one of the three co-chairmen now directing the affairs of COMPO, read a report covering the activities of the co-chairmen since their ascension of office last June. The report emphasized that Al Lichtman, Trueman T. Rembusch and Pinanski, the triumvirate, had thrown all of COMPO's resources and facilities behind the campaign and that this policy would be pursued until the tax is repealed.

Sam Pinanski

The report of the membership drive conducted in August and September, read by Rembusch, as chairman of the finance committee, stated that nearly 14,000 exhibitors had paid their COMPO dues.

Herman Robbins, treasurer, read a report of COMPO's financial condition and policies.

The Theatre Owners of Washington, Idaho and Alaska were admitted to membership and the membership committee was instructed to approach equipment manufacturers and other industries allied with the picture business to enlist them as members.

The committee voted to give further consideration to a proposal by Mrs. Mary Lasker, widow of Albert D. Lasker, that motion picture theatres conduct a national health week for the benefit of charities in need of money for medical research.

Reporting on the Movietime, U.S.A. projects, Robert J. O'Donnell, national director, said that since the tours were started a year ago, 330 Hollywood personalities had made 8,000 personal appearances in 1,500 cities and towns in nearly all of the 48 states. O'Donnell, who was commended for his work, emphasized that the tours must be continued because of their great value in promoting industry good-will and because they have perfected an organization for future industry action on other problems that might arise.

R. J. O'Donnell

The committee heard a proposal from Steve Broidy, president of the Motion Picture Industry Council of Hollywood, that COMPO cooperate in an extension of the MPIC's public relations service through exhibitors. It was referred to the finance committee.

After a presentation by O'Donnell of the plans of Texas COMPO for an exposition and touring train, the committee adopted a resolution approving the presentation and instructing the COMPO co-chairmen to prepare a report on the project.

The session was presided over by Rembusch and will resume tomorrow morning.

"Hiawatha"

(Allied Artists) Hollywood, Dec. 10

PRODUCER Walter Mirisch has presented the story of the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow American poetic classic in terms of straightaway action with fine dramatic values and without loss of the tale's charm.

Filmed in CineColor, this held a capacity preview audience composed principally of press and profession at the Academy Awards Theatre in Hollywood completely in its spell, and drew sustained applause at the closing.

The production is a notable achievement to be credited to Mirisch and to his associate producer, Richard Heermance, his director, Kurt Neumann, his writers, Arthur Strawn and Dan Ullman, and his cinematographer, Harry Neumann.

The filming of the Longfellow poem presented problems of various kinds. The measured narration of the poet had to be enlivened, and Mirisch made it a point to throw in a hot-tempered killing at almost the very beginning of the film. How to write dialogue that would convey the Longfellow story without falling into the rhythm of the poem was no simple question. It was answered by giving the Indians plain every-day English lines to speak in every-day fashion, with no poetic phrases or expression undertaken. Only at the start and close of the picture are a few lines of the poem spoken, by an off-screen narrator.

The story of Hiawatha is too well known, for repetition in synopsis here. The important fact is that it comes out in the Mirisch production a story of Indian life, customs and conflicts in the America of the Ojolbways, the Illinois and the Dacotahs, before the coming of the whites, and that it retains the charm of the poem without utilizing the devices of poetry, and in spite of the swift and sometimes bloody melodrama contained in it.

Vincent Edwards portrays the title character, and Yvette Dugay plays Minnehaha. Others in the cast are Keith Larsen, Gene Iglesias, Armando Silvestre, Stuart Randall, Michael Tolan, Ian MacDonald, Katherine Emery, Morris Ankrum and Stephen Chase.

Running time, 80 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 28.

"Babes In Bagdad"

(Edward J. and Harry L. Danziger-United Artists)

PAULETTE GODDARD and Gypsy Rose Lee are the two lasses referred to in the title of this harum-scarum satire that occasionally is humorous and often is opulent. It is especially attractive when the two very amply endowed actresses are dazzlingly displayed in a variety of revealing costumes in a bright color process titled Exoticolor.

The emphasis on glamor undoubtedly can be exploited and the marquee lure of the cast is of value. Richard Ney and John Boles are further aids.

Edward J. and Harry L. Danziger have provided lavish interior settings and utilized Spanish backgrounds. The screenplay by Felix Feist and Joe Anson includes harum gags and intersperses modern colloquialisms with pseudo-Arabian dialogue. Director Edgar G. Ulmer has allowed the performers to cavort freely and the mixture of serious playing and broad acting is quite ludicrous.

Richard Ney is the godson of a Caliph whose monogamous viewpoint results in his investigating a complaint filed by Miss Lee and other harum members against Kadi John Boles. At the same time he looks into the Bagdad corruption carried on by the tax collector, villainously portrayed by Thomas Gallagher. It takes a few days for Ney to get the goods on Gallagher, trick Boles into letting him marry Miss Goddard and turn Boles into a tractable ruler, who accepts Miss Lee as his sole wife.

Others in the cast are Sebastian Cabot, Macdonald Parke, Natalie Benesh, Hugh Dempster, and Peter Bathurst.

Running time, 79 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 7.

Meet on Hartford 'Times' Symposium

Commendations continue for the two motion picture industry and newspaper symposiums sponsored at Hartford during the year by the Hartford Times.

Both Robert M. Weitman, vice-president, and Robert H. O'Brien, secretary-treasurer of United Paramount Theatres, addressing a meeting here this week in the Paramount Building, of UPT and Hartford Times executives, stated that the two sessions of motion picture-newspaper personnel held by the Gannett daily "went far" in discussions of common ailments of the film business, as related to the press.

Weitman said, "There's a new feeling of optimism in Hollywood. This is based not only on better industry relations, as seen in the two Hartford Times symposiums, but also in stepped-up interest on the part of top executives in better story selection, improved production technique and the disappearance of those 'Doubting Thomases' of a year or two ago who proclaimed that the movies were done and finished."

O'Brien observed: "Millions of new dollars have been invested in Hollywood productions. New methods of production not only are welcomed and tried, but the production community itself is ever-searching for new talent, new scripts."

In attendance, in addition to Weitman and O'Brien were Leonard H. Goldenson, UPT president; Walter Gross, vice-president and general counsel; M. J. Mullin and Harry Browning, New England Theatres; F. S. Murphy, David R. Daniel and Allen M. Widem, Hartford Times.

Stress Exploitation At AMPA's Clinic

Practical ways to put exploitation to the best uses of the exhibitor highlighted last night's Showmanship Class of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the Woodstock Hotel here. Speakers were Dan S. Terrell, exploitation-publicity director of M-G-M; Sid Meisbov, exploitation manager of Paramount Pictures; Edgar Goth, director of advertising-publicity-exploitation for Fabian Theatres, and Don A. Brennan, an executive of Curtis Publishing Co.

Terrell pointed up the value of "off-the-amusement page" ads in newspapers in stimulating public interest, emphasizing the potentialities of co-operative advertising pages and classified ad tieups. It is necessary, he said, to attract the attention of persons who ordinarily do not read the amusement pages.

"Any theatre that neglects the opportunity for extra "off-amusement-page" publicity provided by the right sort of commercial tieups is making a serious omission in campaigns to bring attractions to the widest possible audience," Terrell said.

Mesibov stressed the "stunt" exploitation of all forms of retail or point-of-sale advertising that falls in the jurisdiction of exploitation activities. The so-called "stunt," he said, can be head and shoulders above retail advertising in any other business. Regardless of product, even when pre-sold, the "stunt" by its very nature can be the ace-in-the-hole, he asserted.

Goth played up the so-called "attendance stunts," such as jitterbug contests, giving case histories of successful promotions of this type. He also presented advertising "roughs" to illustrate his point.

ITS FAME WILL GROW AND GROW!

RKO Pictures

prior to his departure for New York today that he had decided not to return to the company, it was believed that under the presently reported plan Noah Dietrich, former RKO board chairman, would be named president and a director.

In addition, it is believed that Hughes will invite J. Miller Walker, former RKO secretary, general counsel and board member, to return to the company in those capacities. Walker was among the RKO Radio executives who were let out during the brief tenure of Arnold Grant, as chief executive officer of the company for the Stolkin group. The appointment of a Hughes financial associate as an officer, probably chairman, and member of the board, also was said to be in readiness.

Court Hearing

Should these appointments meterialize, the present board vacancies would be filled in advance of the hearing next Wednesday in New York Supreme Court on the petition of some RKO Pictures' stockholders for the appointment of a receiver for the company. That hearing was adjourned from last Wednesday, largely on representations that the management and board vacancies would be settled "momentarily."

The presently reported development followed close on the heels of what appeared yesterday to be a stand-off for both the Hughes and Stolkin sides. A number of earlier plans having been kicked over for one reason or another, it appeared definite last night that all deals were being called off, with Hughes holding the Stolkin group to its original stock purchase agreement, carrying with it the management and board responsibilities.

However, that stalemate today appeared to have been broken as further talks ensued, leading to the board-management responsibility going to Hughes who, presumably, is granting the Stolkin group additional time in which to seek a purchaser for its stock.

FCC Lets Mt. Hood Amend TV Petition

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Federal Communications Commission has agreed to let Mt. Hood Radio and Television Broadcasting Corp. amend its application for a television station to show that Ralph Stolkin, Sherril Corwin and Edward G. Burke, Jr., had sold their stock in the company

Mt. Hood, applicant for a Portland, Ore., station, is owned 43.5 per cent by Ted Gamble. Stolkin, Corwin and Burke owned another 43.5 per cent but some weeks ago sold out to more than 30 employes of station KOIN, Mt. Hood's Portland AM station.

Hearings were then underway on Mt. Hood's application but when the company petitioned to amend its application to show the changed ownership, the hearing examiner ruled against the petition and the hearing was recessed while Mt. Hood appealed to the full Commission.

The FCC decision, which set aside the examiner's ruling, opens the way for an immediate resumption of the hearing.

CDA Considers 2 Theatre Telecasts

Washington, Dec. 11.—Federal Civil Defense Administration officials said they hoped to send two training programs over closed circuit theatre television early next year.

One would be aimed at plant managers and the other at union officials. Full details are still to be worked out. The CDA pioneered in the use of theatre television as a government information and training device.

'Carmen'

being a prime draw in many localities. Other negative factors were the proximity to the holiday season, and in some places, inclement weather which precluded last-minute drop-in trade.

In San Francisco, the 400-seat Telenews sold out at $6.00 per seat. Considering the opposition, Dancers Bali at the local opera house, district manager John Parsons said there is definately an audience for this type of attraction. He said out of 20,000 names on the San Francisco opera list, certainly 400 would pay to see this type of entertainment. However, beyond the 400, the appeal is definitely limited, he said.

Fabian's Grand

In Albany the telecast in Fabian's Grand drew an audience of 950 in the 1500-seat theatre, at $3.60 top. Manager Paul Wallen said that the weather—heavy rain fell during the entire day—and the time of year—near Christmas—were adverse factors. He thought that at a more favorable period, an opera might attract a larger crowd.

The fact that the higher priced seats did not sell too well indicated that the house might have been over-scaled. The orchestra was about 50 percent of capacity. First balcony had a larger percentage of patrons, while second balcony was reported full. Seats went at $3.60, $3, $2.40, $1.80 and $1.20. It was not a cream crop audience, in money and in dress, but it was attentiv and responsive. A surprising number of young men and young women attended. Souvenir program sales totalled 175. The concession stand did a fair candy, ice cream and cigarette business. Popcorn was not sold.

The picture thrown on the screen, during the first act, was clear. Sound occasionally was too loud, although this was corrected.

Met Poll

Patrons were asked to rate—on an official ballot, mailable to the Metropolitan Opera Association—the picture and sound, with their reaction to "Carmen" and their willingness "to see other operas here." Twelve works were listed for choice.

Thirty State Teachers College students, the girls in evening clothes, served as ushers. Manager Wallen and his assistants wore tuxedos. Palms decorated the outer lobby. Fabian upstate general manager Saul J. Ullman observed the telecast.

In Baltimore, the State Theatre, with 1,820 seats, was slightly over half filled for "Carmen." While owner Frank Durkee declined to report the gross, he declared the box-office was just about out of the red.

The audience reaction at intermission was completely enthusiastic, which prompted Durkee to state "perhaps the public can be sold on this form of entertainment." At what intervals he hesitated to state. However, Durkee added the idea would be undoubtedly excellent if something of mass appeal such as "South Pacific" were offered. He blamed some of last night's half-filled house on the uncooperative local press rather than the lack of interest by the music loving public. The reception and sound came through with exceptional clarity. Numerous theatres executives from Washington came over to witness the performance.

Chicago

The telecast at the Telenews Theatre in Chicago was a virtual sell-out, with only a few seats in the back row of the balcony vacant as the opera started. In contrast to the poor visual reception for the Lees telecast the "Carmen" picture was excellent on the close-ups although fuzzy on the long shots. The sound was excellent. Prices charged at the Telenews, the only theatre in Chicago to carry the telecast of the opera, were $6, including tax, for all seats.

In Kansas City, Mo., "Carmen" on the Ashland screen drew much more than half of the capacity, which is 1,200, with the event priced at $2.44, reserved seats leading in advance sales, and $1.22 and $3.66 priced seats about equally divided.

Kansan regular opera goers and music lovers were enthusiastic over the event, with many small parties both in advance sales and buying tickets at the door. The head usher and the staff of the Kansas City Music Hall were in tuxedos, providing a familiar atmosphere for patrons of the Philharmonic and similar musical events. The management says the project was well worth while and will put on such events when feasible, educating the public to the high value of the television screen presentation and also as to the location of this Eastside neighborhood theatre.

Denver

In Denver, "Carmen" was well received. Reception and sound were fine. The gross was about $3,500, with half going to the Met and the arranging company. The audience reaction was good and those talked to indicated they would like to see more of the same.

In Omaha, the telecast of "Carmen" drew a 1,400 house at the Orpheum, with $3.85 top and $1.20 low. Tri-States district manager William Miskell said the crowd was about 50 per cent of the 3,000 seating capacity but it was enthusiastic. He said he feels pre-Christmas period was a poor time for presentation.

In Boston, the Pilgrim reported a sell-out, while the Hippodrome in Cleveland reported only a fair advance sale.

To Raze Baltimore Rivoli

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11.—The Rivoli Theatre here, one of Baltimore's deluxe first-runs a generation ago, is to be torn down to make way for a parking lot. Present plans are for closing Christmas Eve. Bob Houseman is manager. When the house originally opened it marked the introduction to the public of Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians.

1951-52 fiscal year, which ended a few weeks ago, "was one of the most successful in Universal-International's history. Therefore, plans for the coming year will follow closely the pattern set during the preceding 12 months."

As already announced, U-I will make 36 pictures, 26 of them in Technicolor, during 1952-53.

The meetings were attended by Milton R. Rackmil, president; N. J. Blumberg, chairman of the board; William Goetz, in charge of production; Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president; Edward Muhl, vice-president and general manager; Charles J. Feldman, general sales manager; David A. Lipton, vice-president in charge of advertising-publicity, and sales executives from all over the country.

Emphasis was placed on plans for "The Glenn Miller Story," based on the life of the orchestra leader. James Stewart will star and Anthony Mann will direct the picture, which will be produced by Aaron Rosenberg.

Four of the pictures, all in Technicolor, already are before the cameras. They are: "The Golden Blade," starring Rock Hudson and Piper Laurie; "Prince of Bagdad," starring Victor Mature and Mari Blanchard; "East of Sumatra," starring Jeff Chandler, Marilyn Maxwell, Anthony Quinn and Suzan Ball, and "The Stand at Apache River."

Other Technicolor productions include "Walkin' My Baby Back Home," a musical starring Donald O'Connor; "Bengal Rifle," "Fort Laramie," "Wings of the Hawk," starring Glenn Ford, "Outlaw Haven," "King of the Wind," "Port Royal," "Devil's Canyon," "The Long Hunters," "Smoke Signal," "Streets of Cairo," "Men of Iron," "Saskatchewan," "Sun Mountain" and "Comanche Sky."

Black and white films include: "You Belong to Me," starring Barbara Stanwyck and Richard Carlson; "Drifting," starring Tony Curtis, Joanne Dru and Lyle Bettger; "It Happens Every Thursday," starring Loretta Young and John Forsythe. "Abbott and Costello Meet Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Bonzo, Private Eye," "The Man from Outer Space," "All-American," "Black Lagoon," "Spin the Glass Web" and "Francis Joins the Wacs."

weeks considerable speculation as to my position in a new RKO executive set-up and numerous stories have been published implying that I might return to the presidency of the company. It is true that Mr. Howard Hughes asked me to return to the board of directors of RKO and to again become the president. I deeply appreciated this expression of confidence in me by Mr. Hughes.

"However, due to existing circumstances it was my considered decision that it would serve no useful purpose for me to re-enter the management of RKO at this time. I therefore declined, with thanks, Mr. Hughes' request. I am sure Mr. Hughes intends to do whatever is necessary to give RKO good management and I hope with all my heart that he succeeds."

that he cold be preparing to engage in a proxy fight for next year's annual meeting.

The cumulative voting method is used in 20th Century-Fox board elections and if Green gained representation on the board, he would be in a position to demand a voice in management, observers point out.

Green's holdings of 20th- Fox stock are reportedly around 20,000 shares, owned personally. However, it is believed he may control much more than that, which would be voted his way in the event of a proxy fight.

Green's proxy battles have been the subject of national magazine attention in the past year and a half, in suchs publications as Collier's and Time. He is said to have sued Collier's subsequently and the case was settled out of court.

In its issue of Oct. 15, 1951, Time described him as having "a sharp eye for a quick profit. He buys stock in companies that make money, but pay small dividends, or none, then pressures the management into shelling out."

Of Green's invasion of United Cigar-Whelan Stores Co., Time said: "Green started his attack by charging that President Walter G. Baumbogger and his associates 'haven't the faintest idea how to run the business profitably.'

Green's Career

"President Baumhogger and associates then reopened a chapter in Green's career that he would like to forget—a stormy 16 months when he was president of Minneapolis and St. Paul's Twin City Rapid Transit Co.," Time relates. "Green had won that job after threatening a proxy fight. In November, 1949, he had gone to Minnesota armed with 19,200 shares of T.C.R.T. and complaints about no dividends. As an ally in his fight, he picked up Nightclub Proprietor Isadore Blumenfeld, alias Kid Cann, a wealthy Minneapolis underworld character with a record of 30 arrests (two for murder) and three liquor convictions.

"Green won and got the $40,000-a-year president's job. While car riders howled bitterly, Green won approval of a fare hike from 12c to 15c. He fired 800 employes, curtailed schedules, abandoned unprofitable trolley and bus lines.

"Green's lawyer, Fred A. Ossanna and other associates became so alarmed at the publicity that they quarreled with Green," the Time account continues.

"In July 1950 the Ossanna group had helped buy up Green's shares. Green was eased out last March, and Ossanna put in as board chairman. Charlie Green hastened back to New York a wiser and richer (by about $100,000) man.

"In all this," Time said, "United Cigar-Whelan's management saw a baleful parallel to Green's present maneuvering. But Green mustered enough votes to force his foes to hold a special stockholders' meeting.

"This week (October, 1951) the ballot count was announced. Green polled more votes than the management 1,010,000 to 598,000) but lacked the majority of all common shares (2,307,000) needed to unseat the management at a special meeting. Faced with probable defeat at the next regular meeting (where only a majority of those present would be needed), the management 'compromised.' It apparently planned to give Green a majority of directors on a new board."

The turnover of 20th-Fox stock yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange was 18,600 shares, closing at 14, a gain of three-quarters of a point on the day for a new high for this year.

Green also is said to have engaged in several successful proxy fights in the steel industry.

that the Chicago resolution barred any formal Allied participation and he reaffirmed this today.

His statement began by pointing out that the recent Chicago board meeting and the convention itself voted to take Allied officials out of all cooperative activities which did not give direct and immediate benefits to exhibitors. He said that the rejection of the distributors' arbitration draft was based on dissatisfaction with the draft itself and also on the belief that Allied leaders working on arbitration could spend their time better in other activities. He pointed out that arbitration was the only cooperative activity "deemed to be expendable" by the board. He said that the "necessary effect" of the board's action was to terminate Allied's arbitration negotiating committee and the activities in this field of Myers himself.

BRADENTON, Fla., Dec. 11.—Two officials of the company operating the Trail Drive-in have been ordered to appear in Federal Court in Tampa on a charge of failing to report $11,000 in amusement taxes. Mose L. Waller of Lenior City, Tenn., is president and F. H. Thomas of Sarasota, Fla., is secretary-treasurer of the Waller and Thomas Amusement Co. operating the drive-in. Seven counts charge them with "wilfully failing to make returns of collected taxes."

affairs since they took office last June.

At the conclusion of the committee's two-day meeting here, the group approved a budget including all estimated expenses for the tax repeal campaign. A proposal that COMPO cooperate with the Motion Picture Industry Council of Hollywood in an extension of MPIC public relations work was referred to the organization's finance committee for further study.

A committee report on a "National Health Week" project, calling for theatres to collect funds for charities needing money for medical research, was accepted and referred to COMPO's constituent organization members with the proviso that if they approve the report a committee will be appointed to put the plan into effect.

Because of a conflict of dates with other meetings scheduled by exhibitor organizations, it was decided to postpone the industry "round table" in Hollywood which had been tentatively set for Feb. 2-6. A date in April or May will be fixed later, depending on the needs of the tax repeal campaign.

The committee went on record as favoring production of a new series of short subjects similar to the "Movies and You" series released a few years ago. An effort will be made to obtain from the trustees of the residual funds the use of $44,000 surplus remaining from the income of the previous series.

Because of the cost, a plan for an industry radio program was voted down. The plan, submitted by Robert J. O'Donnell, called for five recorded broadcasts each week, the subject matter to be devoted to promoting industry causes.

Part of the session was given over to further discussion of the tax repeal campagn, with emphasis being laid on procedures to be followed after Congress convenes. The committee approved the work of the tax repeal campaign committee and gave it a vote of confidence in its plans for the second phase of the campaign.

MixedReaction By Exhibitors To 'Carmen'

Theatre Men Divided As To Future of Opera TV

Exhibitor reaction to the first large screen telecast of an operatic performance, the Metropolitan Opera's production of "Carmen" last Thursday night, was mixed but might fairly be described as an artistic success, while something less than that, financially, to the exhibitor.

However, virtually all theatres operators contacted agreed that the telecast was a showmanly experience which they would be interested in repeating if the operatic attraction selected is a good one and the price for it is "right."

Fewer than a half-dozen of the 31 theatres in 27 cities which took the "Carmen" telecast reported sell-outs. Even after allowing for inclement weather in many cities, which held down drop-in trade, and for the proximity of the date to the Christmas holiday, the traditionally slow show business season, attendance was less

GettingerRKOPlan Calls for Three SeparateCompanies

A plan for the reorganization of RKO Pictures calling for the creation of a new studio company, a new reissue company and the conversion of the present company into a distribution organization physically consolidated with some existing company, "like United Artists," has been prepared by Milton M. Gettinger, attorney, who sometimes represents the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. of this city.

Gettinger said he had been asked to prepare the plan by several groups interested in purchasing control of RKO Pictures, whom he did not identify.

Salient provisions of Gettinger's plan are as follows:

A new "Studio Corporation" would be formed and would issue 4,000,000 shares to RKO Pictures in exchange for the Hollywood studio properties and the entire inventory of currently released and new product, which he says has an estimated cost of approximately $35,000,000. The 4,000,000

RKO Plan

shares of the new company would be turned over as a stock dividend to RKO Pictures stockholders.

A new "Library Corporation" would be formed and would receive title to all old shorts and features in RKO Pictures' vaults, in exchange for 4,000,000 shares of the new corporation, these shares also to be declared as a stock dividend to RKO Pictures stockholders. It is contemplated that the pictures out of release would be turned over for reissue by a company such as Realart, under a deal similar to that by which Realart distributes reissues for Universal.

RKO Pictures would be continued solely as a distributor of independent product, including that made at the new Studio Corporation's plant. Such product, the plan contemplates, would consist of a minimum of 26 pictures annually, each budgeted between $300,000 and $500,000.

As an integral part of the conversion of the present RKO company to an exclusively distributing organization, Gettinger's plan contemplates a consolidation of its distribution facilities, worldwide, with those of United Artists, primarily to effect operating and executive economies.

Gettinger said he had asked Arthur Krim, U.A. president, if he would be interested in the plan and received an affirmative answer. Krim is now in Europe. Other U.A. officials here said they knew nothing of the plan and had no interest in it.

Gettinger's plan for consolidation of distribution of the two companies proposes that U.A. transfer its present distribution contracts to RKO, retaining all other assets, in exchange for a block of RKO Pictures common stock, the number of shares to be determined by the ratio of RKO and U.A. distribution gross for the past several years. U.A.'s is estimated at $24,000,000 annually, RKO's at $36,000,000.

Gettinger sees an annual profit on this operation of between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 on a gross of $60,000,000, in which the new consolidated distribution company would share at the rate of 30 to 35 per cent in distribution fees. He estimates the overhead of the company at $10,000,000 per year maximum.

The new studio company, it is suggested in the plan, would attract independent producers by offering, through banks, estimated production loans of about 60 per cent of the approved budget. Production would be on a "cooperative" basis to provide studio facilities at actual cost as well as release arrangements through RKO. The independent producers would pay the studio an agree-on percentage of profits after negative cost has been recovered.

In addition, it is contemplated that RKO also would distribute product of "outside" independents.

The plan envisions a distribution to stockholders by the studio company of "between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 over the next several years" after repayment of bank loans. It also suggests "that there should be freed to stockholders between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 of working capital as liquidating dividends during the next 18 months."

The plan estimates the RKO studio's worth at $4,000,000 and the backlog of old pictures at between $10,000,000 and $15,000,00. There is no proposal to sell the latter to television.

with the State Department and foreign embassies in Washington.

Under the reorganization plan, Johnston is setting up three geographical divisions — Europe and Africa, the Western Hemisphere and Asia. Responsibility for each of these areas will be assigned to a representative in the New York headquarters. Johnston personally will take over active direction of all of the association's international affairs.

European-African Desk

Hetzel, in addition to his over-all duties, will be in acting charge of the European-African desk, with George R. Canty as assistant director. Robert J. Corkery, who accompanied Johnston on his recent trip to South America, will handle the Western Hemisphere desk. The head of the Asiatic desk will be named shortly.

The changes, Johnston explained, are designed to attune the association to the growing importance of the overseas business to the industry. In virtually every country, he said, new and complicated problems that are constantly developing require specialized attention and action. He felt the new division setup would facilitate the successful handling of these problems.

To keep the association currently abreast of economic developments in the different countries, Johnston has assigned the association's economist, G. Griffith Johnson, to devote his time to international affairs.

'Carmen' Telecast Reaction

than anticipated in many theatres.

The experience, exhibitors said, demonstrated that some cities have sufficient opera enthusiasts to draw a good house and others haven't. Those that have, apparently, are Boston, San Francisco, New York and Los Angeles. The latter did not have sell-outs but attendance was, on the whole, better than in some other cities much farther from the "Met's" home base, and where smaller theatres and fewer of them took the telecast.

Exhibitor reaction to the reception of the telecast also was mixed. There were numerous criticisms of an indistinct picture and excessive sound volume. Other exhibitors found the reception good, on the whole, and pointed out that TV, as a medium, simply will not accommodate crowd scenes such as the opera's massed choruses, even when on large screens.

The lack of color also was mentioned frequently, many stating that it would add tremendously to an operatic telecast.

Complain of Costs

The recurring complaint of exhibitors, though, was the cost of booking the attraction, which virtually everyone contacted referred to as "too high." Several pointed out that even allowing for 20 additional theatres which Theatre Network Television said wanted the program but were unable to get because of unavailability of A. T. & T. lines, half of the TV-equipped theatres were uninterested. They attributed this solely to the terms asked, which were a guaranty of 40 cents per seat against 50 per cent of the gross, whichever was higher. Some newspapers reported that half of this went to the Metropolitan and half to TNT. The estimated gross for the 31 theatres was in excess of $100,000.

Following are individual city reports on the telecast, in addition to those published in Motion Picture Daily last Friday.

CHICAGO—Local critics blasted the theatre television presentation of "Carmen," which was marred here by the failure of an electronic control that overheated, distorting the picture, particularly on the long shots. Critics Janet Kern of the Herald-American and Sam Lesner of the Daily News were more critical, however, of the production which they felt should have originated in a studio.

Hit Admission Price

They agreed that the sound was "excellent at times" although the volume was overpowering in certain arias. Both remarked that the admission price of $6 was out of line and that some method should be devised to bring opera to the public at a more reasonable price and with greater visual and auditory fidelity.

Jack McPaul, Sun-Times reporter, rated the performance a "click," saying that although the picture left something to be desired, the sound was excellent and audience reaction was good. The picture, while better in many respects than that for the Lees telecast, was not up to what has been experienced with fight telecasts here.

CLEVELAND—There was a small attendance of 1,500 at the 3,500-seat Hippodrome here for the "Carmen" theatre telecast. About 1,000 patrons occupied the $2.40 balcony seats and the other 500 the $3.60 orchestra seats. There were no takers for the upper balcony, priced at $1.25. The gross for the performance was approximately $4,200.

Theatre manager Jack Silverthorne believes audience enthusiasm, as evidenced by generous applause, justifies an occasional repeat presentation of TV operas selected for popular appeal.

Sound was perfect and there were no continuity breaks. Picture clarity varied from gray to clear and was not comparable to motion picture standards. A representative of the Northern Ohio Metropolitan Opera Company, which sponsors annual Metropolitan Cleveland engagements, thought the presentation interesting, with room for mechanical improvement and that it should be repeated. They do not see it as a threat to live opera because of limited screen area, lack of color and loss of audience excitement.

Repeat Called For

BUFFALO—The "Carmen" telecast was practically a sell-out at the Center Theatre. Only a few hundred seats were unsold in the orchestra. No seats were reserved. The price scale was: balcony, $1.80, which was sold out several days in advance; orchestra, $2.40; and loges, $2.80. Business was around $3,500 net. Management reaction was very good, believing that opera should be repeated several times annually on a reserved seat basis.

Press reaction here was very good, the Courier-Express declaring: "On the whole, reception and sound were good at the Center. Several times the audience, although 400 miles from the proceedings, applauded arias. Unlike the New York assemblage, Buffalo opera-goers were not in formal dress, but their sense of communion with the big city production was unmistakable."

Said the Evening News: "Buffalo's first theatre telecast was a qualified success. As a musical event it was first class. As a telecast it was imaginative, dramatic and exciting. But due to unexplained transmission difficulties that resulted in a picture something less than perfect, it did not fully realize the tremendous potentialities of the video medium. That this fault did not detract overly from the show was indicated by many comments of praise from persons in the near-capacity audicence. By and large the viewers seemed enthusiastic over this initial Buffalo presentation and the future of large screen telecast entertainment."

Big Scene Comment

DETROIT—Approximately 2,500 people paid $1.20 to $3.60 for reserved seats to see the large screen telecast of "Carmen" at the 3,500-seat Hollywood Theatre here.

The regular screen of the theatre was used. It is 22 feet by 16 feet high. The picture looked like a TV movie, especially in the distance shots. An A. T. & T. representative explained that as the picture size increased its clarity was reduced. Quality of close-ups was good and contained clear detail, but when scenes shifted to a panorama of the stage, it was like looking down at a group of people from a great height. Sound was excellent.

MINNEAPOLIS—A near-capacity audience of almost 1,000 braved a snowstorm for the telecast of the Metropolitan Opera's "Carmen" at the Gopher here. The Minneapolis symphony Orchestra played in opposition at the University of Minnesota Auditorium, splitting the carriage trade. Sound reception was good with the music lovers applauding vigorously. Reaction to the picture was mixed as the long shots turned fuzzy and had insufficient light. Most often heard comment was, "If it had only been in color." The house was scaled from $1.80 to $3.60.

BOSTON—According to a report from Lynn, Mass., the Paramount Theatre there grossed approximately $1,500 for the telecast of "Carmen" last Thursday night. Capacity of the house is 2,500. It was scaled at $2.40 orchestra and $1.25 balcony, both reserved.

MILWAUKEE—Bad weather here on the night of the "Carmen" theatre telecast held down box office sales of tickets somewhat, in contrast to a very good advance sale for the performance at Standard's Riverside Theatre. The management stated, however, that it would definitely be interested in scheduling another operatic telecast should one be made available.

CINCINNATI — "Carmen" did less than two-thirds capacity at the 3,300-seat RKO Albee here. Audience reception was excellent and sound, perfect. The house was scaled at $1.19 to $3.59, including tax. Gross was about $3,300. The consensus of theatre men here was that opera telecasts will not pay off.

HOLLYWOOD—The telecast was just slightly less than a sell-out at both the Warner Hollywood and the Los Angeles Orpheum theatres despite the 5:30 P.M. starting time which obviously prevented many interested persons from attending.

Trade circles on the Coast displayed uniformly favorable reaction to the first such telecast, expressing the opinion that future events of a similar nature will fare as well or better financially. The newspaper critics gave the telecast extensive coverage, almost totally favorable.

Boston Wants More Opera Theatre TV

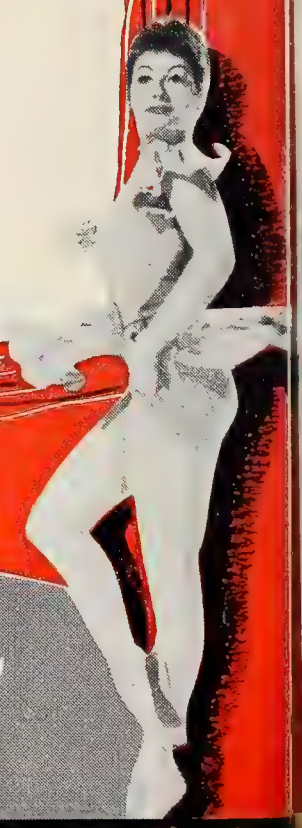
Dear Sam:

As a long-time admirer of the art and showmanship of Samuel Goldwyn, I am delighted to seize this first moment of a new business day to express pleasure and gratification over my happy experience last evening in seeing "Hans Christian Andersen."



I feel a deep sense of obligation to you for this rare experience—an obligation which I believe I shall eventually be sharing with countless millions of people the whole world over.

"Hans Christian Andersen," as you have brought the subject to the screen, is, in my opinion, a living, vibrant work of art--an achievement of classic significance in its beauty, melody, humor, movement and sentiment. It represents to me the Screen in the full bloom of the maturity of the art. This production alone would insure for its producer a permanent place in the hall of fame of theatrical entertainment.

Yours sincerely,

MixedReaction By Exhibitors To 'Carmen'

Theatre Men Divided As To Future of Opera TV

Exhibitor reaction to the first large screen telecast of an operatic performance, the Metropolitan Opera's production of "Carmen" last Thursday night, was mixed but might fairly be described as an artistic success, while something less than that, financially, to the exhibitor.

However, virtually all theatres operators contacted agreed that the telecast was a showmanly experience which they would be interested in repeating if the operatic attraction selected is a good one and the price for it is "right."

Fewer than a half-dozen of the 31 theatres in 27 cities which took the "Carmen" telecast reported sell-outs. Even after allowing for inclement weather in many cities, which held down drop-in trade, and for the proximity of the date to the Christmas holiday, the traditionally slow show business season, attendance was less

Cinerama May Open In Chicago in March

CHICAGO, Dec. 14. — Papers are being drawn up for the official consummation next week of a contract between Cinerama and Eitel's Palace Theatre, which will lead to Cinerama opening in Chicago around the beginning of March.

Following the run of "Stars and Stripes Forever" at the Palace, which opens Christmas day, the house will go dark for about six weeks for installation of the Cinerama equipment. The Palace has been run under joint management of Arthur Wirtz, James Coston, and the landlord, Otto K. Eitel, since last spring when RKO gave it up after many years.

GettingerRKOPlan Calls for Three Separate Firms

A plan for the reorganization of RKO Pictures calling for the creation of a new studio company, a new reissue company and the conversion of the present company into a distribution organization physically consolidated with some existing company, "like United Artists," has been prepared by Milton M. Gettinger, attorney, who sometimes represents the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. of this city.

Gettinger said he had been asked to prepare the plan by several groups interested in purchasing control of RKO Pictures, whom he did not identify.

Salient provisions of Gettinger's plan are as follows:

A new "Studio Corporation" would be formed and would issue 4,000,000 shares to RKO Pictures in exchange for the Hollywood studio properties and the entire inventory of currently released and new product, which he says has an estimated cost of approximately $35,000,000. The 4,000,000

Hughes, Dietrich, Brent, Walker, Burke Named; See Dietrich President

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 14.—Election of four new directors and the resignation of Sherrill C. Corwin as chairman of the board of RKO Pictures were announced by the company at the weekend. The new board now consists of Howard Hughes, Noah Dietrich, J. Miller Walker, Maurice H. Brent and Edward G. Burke, Jr. The latter is the only member of the directorate who likewise was a member of the board in existence at the start of the executive meeting on Friday.

Brent is a senior member of the investment firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane. Walker previously was a vice-president, general counsel and a director of the corporation and had been with RKO for 21 years. Dietrich long has been associated with Hughes in his various enterprises.

Corwin asked to be permitted to resign as an officer and director of RKO in order to devote his time to other business interests. For that reason, the board announced that his resignation was accepted.

The new directorate is expected to meet immediately to elect Dietrich president of RKO Pictures and RKO Radio, and Walker to the executive posts he held previously.

Brent, who has handled special assignments of a financial nature in RKO before, is regarded as the designee to the board of the Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh, which is associated with the Bankers Trust Co. of New York in RKO financing.

The move this weekend marks the return of Hughes to a position of management responsibility in RKO, which he relinquished last September with the sale of his stock to the Stolkin group. As reported by MOTION shares of the new company would be turned over as a stock dividend to RKO Pictures stockholders.

RKO Plan

A new "Library Corporation" would be formed and would receive title to all old shorts and features in RKO Pictures' vaults, in exchange for 4,000,000 shares of the new corporation, these shares also to be declared as a stock dividend to RKO Pictures stockholders. It is contemplated that the pictures out of release would be turned over for reissue by a company such as Realart, under a deal similar to that by which Realart distributes reissues for Universal.

RKO Pictures would be continued solely as a distributor of independent product, including that made at the new Studio Corporation's plant. Such product, the plan contemplates, would consist of a minimum of 26 pictures annually, each budgeted between $300,000 and $500,000.

Gettinger said he had asked Arthur Krim, U.A. president, if he would be interested in the plan and received an affirmative answer. Krim is now in Europe. Other U.A. officials here said they knew nothing of the plan and had no interest in it.

Talked to Krim

Gettinger's plan for consolidation of distribution of the two companies proposes that U.A. transfer its present distribution contracts to RKO, retaining all other assets, in exchange for a block of RKO Pictures common stock, the number of shares to be determined by the ratio of RKO and U.A. distribution gross for the past several years. U.A.'s is estimated at $24,000,000 annually, RKO's at $36,000,000.

Gettinger sees an annual profit on this operation of between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 on a gross of $60,000,000, in which the new consolidated distribution company would share at the rate of 30 to 35 per cent in distribution fees. He estimates the overhead of the company at $10,000,000 per year maximum.

'Cooperative' Basis

The new studio company, it is suggested in the plan, would attract independent producers by offering, through banks, estimated production loans of about 60 per cent of the approved budget. Production would be on a "cooperative" basis to provide studio facilities at actual cost as well as release arrangements through RKO. The independent producers would pay the studio an agree-on percentage of profits after negative cost has been recovered.

The plan envisions a distribution to stockholders by the studio company of "between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 over the next several years" after repayment of bank loans. It also suggests "that there should be freed to stockholders between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 of working capital as liquidating dividends during the next 18 months."

The plan estimates the RKO studio's worth at $4,000,000 and the backlog of old pictures at between $10,000,000 and $15,000,00. There is no proposal to sell the latter to television.

RKO Board

PICTURE DAILY on Friday, Hughes is granting deferments to the Stolkin group of maturity dates on their future payments due him under their stock purchase agreement. They paid $1,250,000 down in September and have approximately $6,000,000 more to pay in the next two years.

Ends Negotiations

The agreement on the new board culminates weeks of negotiations between Hughes and the Stolkin group here, during which one solution after another was discarded after having been tentatively agreed upon. This final agreement was reported substantially in MOTION PICTURE DAILY on Friday. It permits RKO to go into New York Supreme Court next Wednesday with a complete board and chief executive officers to combat the pending stockholders' application there for appointment of a receiver for the company.

It is believed that Hughes will again assume direction of studio operations and production, although the official statement said nothing on that subject.

Depinet Declined

Ned E. Depinet announced on Friday that he had been invited, but declined, to become president and a member of the board of the company.

In prepared statements by Hughes and Ralph Stolkin, head of the syndicate which purchased Hughes' 29 per cent interest in RKO Pictures, each explained the events leading up to the selection of the new board. Hughes said that on Nov. 22, he had received a call from Stolkin asking for a meeting between his group and Hughes concerning the company. One of the points of discussion, he said, was a review of the names of men who were being considered by the directors as possible candidates to fill existing vacancies. Following these discussions, the board met and elected the new members.

Stolkin Statement

Stolkin's statement was similar, pointing out that the purchase of Hughes' stock was motivated by a "sincere confidence in the future of the motion picture business and the potential resources of RKO." He said his group's confidence in the investment and RKO's future had not diminished. Stolkin said the "feeling of responsibility impelled us to do everything within our power to reconstitute the board with stature, dignity and integrity." He added that at the same time, the group felt that new board members should have to be familiar with RKO and its problems. He declared that he was certain the men elected to the board would immediately focus their attention and effort upon the revitalization of RKO.

It is understood here that Hughes has granted the Stolkin group a deferment of obligations under its stock purchase agreement in order to allow more time for the disposition of the stock or the acquisition of capital to make the subsequent payments.

Carthy, managing director of the international division, was announced at the meeting. The resignation became effective immediately. It was stated that McCarthy had several new affiliations under consideration and would announce future plans after a vacation.

Ralph D. Hetzel, Jr., will serve directly under Johnston in New York in the conduct of foreign business. Joyce O'Hara will handle contacts with the State Department and foreign embassies in Washington.

Under the reorganization plan, Johnston is setting up three geographical divisions — Europe and Africa, the Western Hemisphere and Asia. Responsibility for each of these areas will be assigned to a representative in the New York headquarters. Johnston personally will take over active direction of all of the association's international affairs.

Hetzel, in addition to his over-all duties, will be in acting charge of the European-African desk, with George R. Canty as assistant director. Robert J. Corkery, who accompanied Johnston on his recent trip to South America, will handle the Western Hemisphere desk. The head of the Asiatic desk will be named shortly.

The changes, Johnston explained, are designed to attune the association to the growing importance of the overseas business to the industry. In virtually every country, he said, new and complicated problems that are constantly developing require specialized attention and action. He felt the new division setup would facilitate the successful handling of these problems.

To keep the association currently abreast of economic developments in the different countries, Johnston has assigned the association's economist, G. Griffith Johnson, to devote his time to international affairs.

'Carmen' Telecast Reaction

than anticipated in many theatres.

The experience, exhibitors said, demonstrated that some cities have sufficient opera enthusiasts to draw a good house and others haven't. Those that have, apparently, are Boston, San Francisco, New York and Los Angeles. The latter did not have sell-outs but attendance was, on the whole, better than in some other cities much farther from the "Met's" home base, and where smaller theatres and fewer of them took the telecast.

Exhibitor reaction to the reception of the telecast also was mixed. There were numerous criticisms of an indistinct picture and excessive sound volume. Other exhibitors found the reception good, on the whole, and pointed out that TV, as a medium, simply will not accommodate crowd scenes such as the opera's massed choruses, even when on large screens.

The lack of color also was mentioned frequently, many stating that it would add tremendously to an operatic telecast.

Complain of Costs

The recurring complaint of exhibitors, though, was the cost of booking the attraction, which virtually everyone contacted referred to as "too high." Several pointed out that even allowing for 20 additional theatres which Theatre Network Television said wanted the program but were unable to get because of unavailability of A. T. & T. lines, half of the TV-equipped theatres were uninterested. They attributed this solely to the terms asked, which were a guaranty of 40 cents per seat against 50 per cent of the gross, whichever was higher. Some newspapers reported that half of this went to the Metropolitan and half to TNT. The estimated gross for the 31 theatres was in excess of $100,000.

Following are individual city reports on the telecast, in addition to those published in Motion Picture Daily last Friday.

CHICAGO—Local critics blasted the theatre television presentation of "Carmen," which was marred here by the failure of an electronic control that overheated, distorting the picture, particularly on the long shots. Critics Janet Kern of the Herald-American and Sam Lesner of the Daily News were more critical, however, of the production which they felt should have originated in a studio.

Hit Admission Price

They agreed that the sound was "excellent at times" although the volume was overpowering in certain arias. Both remarked that the admission price of $6 was out of line and that some method should be devised to bring opera to the public at a more reasonable price and with greater visual and auditory fidelity.

Jack McPaul, Sun-Times reporter, rated the performance a "click," saying that although the picture left something to be desired, the sound was excellent and audience reaction was good. The picture, while better in many respects than that for the Lees telecast, was not up to what has been experienced with fight telecasts here.

CLEVELAND—There was a small attendance of 1,500 at the 3,500-seat Hippodrome here for the "Carmen" theatre telecast. About 1,000 patrons occupied the $2.40 balcony seats and the other 500 the $3.60 orchestra seats. There were no takers for the upper balcony, priced at $1.25. The gross for the performance was approximately $4,200.

Theatre manager Jack Silverthorne believes audience enthusiasm, as evidenced by generous applause, justifies an occasional repeat presentation of TV operas selected for popular appeal.

Sound was perfect and there were no continuity breaks. Picture clarity varied from gray to clear and was not comparable to motion picture standards. A representative of the Northern Ohio Metropolitan Opera Company, which sponsors annual Metropolitan Cleveland engagements, thought the presentation interesting, with room for mechanical improvement and that it should be repeated. They do not see it as a threat to live opera because of limited screen area, lack of color and loss of audience excitement.

Repeat Called For

BUFFALO—The "Carmen" telecast was practically a sell-out at the Center Theatre. Only a few hundred seats were unsold in the orchestra. No seats were reserved. The price scale was: balcony, $1.80, which was sold out several days in advance; orchestra, $2.40, and loges, $2.80. Business was around $3,500 net. Management reaction was very good, believing that opera should be repeated several times annually on a reserved seat basis.

Press reaction here was very good, the Courier-Express declaring: "On the whole, reception and sound were good at the Center. Several times the audience, although 400 miles from the proceedings, applauded arias. Unlike the New York assemblage, Buffalo opera-goers were not in formal dress, but their sense of communion with the big city production was unmistakable."

Said the Evening News: "Buffalo's first theatre telecast was a qualified success. As a musical event it was first class. As a telecast it was imaginative, dramatic and exciting. But due to unexplained transmission difficulties that resulted in a picture something less than perfect, it did not fully realize the tremendous potentialities of the video medium. That this fault did not detract overly from the show was indicated by many comments of praise from persons in the near-capacity audicence. By and large the viewers seemed enthusiastic over this initial Buffalo presentation and the future of large screen telecast entertainment."

Big Scene Comment

DETROIT—Approximately 2,500 people paid $1.20 to $3.60 for reserved seats to see the large screen telecast of "Carmen" at the 3,500-seat Hollywood Theatre here.

The regular screen of the theatre was used. It is 22 feet by 16 feet high. The picture looked like a TV movie, especially in the distance shots. An A. T. & T. representative explained that as the picture size increased its clarity was reduced. Quality of close-ups was good and contained clear detail, but when scenes shifted to a panorama of the stage, it was like looking down at a group of people from a great height. Sound was excellent.

MINNEAPOLIS—A near-capacity audience of almost 1,000 braved a snowstorm for the telecast of the Metropolitan Opera's "Carmen" at the Gopher here. The Minneapolis symphony Orchestra played in opposition at the University of Minnesota Auditorium, splitting the carriage trade. Sound reception was good with the music lovers applauding vigorously. Reaction to the picture was mixed as the long shots turned fuzzy and had insufficient light. Most often heard comment was, "If it had only been in color." The house was scaled from $1.80 to $3.60.

BOSTON—According to a report from Lynn, Mass., the Paramount Theatre there grossed approximately $1,500 for the telecast of "Carmen" last Thursday night. Capacity of the house is 2,500. It was scaled at $2.40 orchestra and $1.25 balcony, both reserved.

MILWAUKEE—Bad weather here on the night of the "Carmen" theatre telecast held down box office sales of tickets somewhat, in contrast to a very good advance sale for the performance at Standard's Riverside Theatre. The management stated, however, that it would definitely be interested in scheduling another operatic telecast should one be made available.

CINCINNATI — "Carmen" did less than two-thirds capacity at the 3,300-seat RKO Albee here. Audience reception was excellent and sound, perfect. The house was scaled at $1.19 to $3.59, including tax. Gross was about $3,300. The consensus of theatre men here was that opera telecasts will not pay off.

HOLLYWOOD—The telecast was just slightly less than a sell-out at both the Warner Hollywood and the Los Angeles Orpheum theatres despite the 5:30 P.M. starting time which obviously prevented many interested persons from attending.

Trade circles on the Coast displayed uniformly favorable reaction to the first such telecast, expressing the opinion that future events of a similar nature will fare as well or better financially. The newspaper critics gave the telecast extensive coverage, almost totally favorable.

Boston Wants More Opera Theatre TV

Dear Sam:

As a long-time admirer of the art and showmanship of Samuel Goldwyn, I am delighted to seize this first moment of a new business day to express pleasure and gratification over my happy experience last evening in seeing "Hans Christian Andersen."

I feel a deep sense of obligation to you for this rare experience--an obligation which I believe I shall eventually be sharing with countless millions of people the whole world over.

"Hans Christian Andersen," as you have brought the subject to the screen, is, in my opinion, a living, vibrant work of art--an achievement of classic significance in its beauty, melody, humor, movement and sentiment. It represents to me the Screen in the full bloom of the maturity of the art. This production alone would insure for its producer a permanent place in the hall of fame of theatrical entertainment.

Yours sincerely,

'Ike' and Johnston Hold Meeting Here

President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower and Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, conferred briefly yesterday in New York, but the nature of the discussions was not revealed. It is reported that Eisenhower asked Johnston to call on him.

Because of recurring reports that Johnston may be asked to take a diplomatic post, yesterday's parley stirred up conjectures in the trade here. Some basis for the conjectures stems from th fact that Johnston is not well acquainted with the President-elect and that a meeting between the two would not be a social visit.

Bent, Designee ToRKOBoard, May Not Serve

Burke Says Officers To Be Elected Later

Whether Maurice H. Bent is or is not a member of the new RKO Pictures board of directors remained an unanswered question here yesterday. RKO announced from the Coast over the weekend that Bent had been elected to the board, but subsequent events indicated that Bent can't, or is unwilling, to accept the post. Bent was identified as a senior partner in the investment firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane, but according to Winthrop H. Smith, managing director of the brokerage house, Bent is an employe in its underwriting division.

Bent, himself, would make no comment on his reported election, but it was said that he would make a clarifying announcement shortly. There was a hint that he wold make the announcement late yesterday, but he left his office in the mid-afternoon without commenting on the situation.

AMENT HOLDS 'REELS BEAT TV WITH FOOTAGE OF IKE'S TRIP

Editor, MOTION PICTURE DAILY:

Your issue of Tuesday, December 9, 1952, carried an article on its first page, which I feel conveyed several improper and inaccurate expressions.

The facts are these:

All of the motion picture film, including the film made available by TV's own correspondent in Korea, arrived at La Guardia Field at 6:30 A. M. Sunday, December 7th. In accordance with arrangements made by the theatrical newsreel companies the film was instantly picked up by Army Signal Corps representatives and rushed to the Astoria Signal Corps Studio. There it was met by Mr. Jack Le Vien, representing the theatrical newsreels, and Mr. Ted Genock, representing the TV reels, and immediately distributed.

The film was forthwith developed and the neecssary prints processed for all theatrical newsreels and all TV reels with all possible dispatch. This shipment of film contained the only film of any sort received by the theatrical newsreels and the TV newsreels on Eisenhower's trip to Korea. This was in accordance with the careful forehanded planning of the theatrical newsreels and only by virtue of that did the TV reels have any film to show. The theatrical newsreels had three cameramen in Korea with Eisenhower: Dave Oliver, who was the only motion picture cameraman to travel with General Eisenhower, Gene Zenier and Kim Wee. The film made by all three of these men was made available to the TV reels in accordance with an arrangement imposed by the authorities in the Korean Theater. To the best of our knowledge the TV reels had only one man covering for them in Korea. Therefore, it was the theatrical newsreels who won out in Korea.

Albany TOA to Meet On TV, Legislation

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 15.—The Theatre Owners Association of this area will meet at Keeler's Restaurant on Jan. 13 to consider an agenda consisting of a talk on theatre television by an RCA representative from Camden, a discussion of a proposed amendment to the Labor Law Code No. 36 covering theatres and other places of public assembly, and bills affecting the industry that may be pending before the state legislature, executive director Lewis A. Sumberg reports to members.

'Not Too Harmful'

Sumberg expressed the opinion that based on a study of the latest draft of the code "you will find the code as now constituted not too harmful due in a large part to the fact that the Board of Standards and Appeals has made concessions at the request of this organization." As counsel, he attended and participated in discussions at various board hearings.

"I think you should also know," Sumberg stated, "that in some small measure your executive director cooperated with Saul Ullman, chairman of COMPO in this area, with regard to enlisting the support of Congressman O'Brien of Albany in the tax repeal campaign. I think also that recognition and thanks for work well done should go to Ullman since he also enlisted the support of U. S. Senator Irving M. Ives and Congressmen Dean Taylor of Troy and Bernard W. Kearney of Gloversville.

by Mayer, will be produced by Cinerama as its next.

Currently, deals are being set for the showing of Cinerama in Los Angeles and Detroit, Roberts said, adding that Eitel's Palace in Chicago has already been set for the next Cinerama installation.

The target of other installations, Roberts explained, is to have at least 15 theatres from Coast-to-Coast equipped by Nov. 1953. The Cinerama president said the theatres would be leased, not bought, stating "we're not in the real estate business."

Three projectors, the number currently being used at the Broadway Theatre in New York, will be necessary for the showing of Cinerama for at least another year or two, Roberts forecast.

As to structural changes necessary in future theatres, Roberts estimated that the costs would be less than the estimated $75,000 for the Broadway Theatre here. He said the Chicago situation would cost from $25,000 to $50,000 to alter. Orders to completely equip 20 theatres have now been placed by Cinerama, Roberts stated.

N. Y. Visitors Told About Cinerama

That Cinerama has made the Broadway Theatre here an "international institution" is acknowledged by the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau in a special listing which says, "Cinerama, the new motion picture medium that creates a startling illusion of three dimensional reality, is at the Broadway Theatre."

The publication goes to 4,000,000 of New York's visitors each year. No entertainment has ever had a listing of this kind, it was said.

Italy Slashes Film Production Subsidy

By ARGEO SANTUCCI

ROME, Dec. 15.—The government committee charged with reducing budget expenditures has approved a formula which lowers government contributions to native motion picture production from $9,000,000 to $3,500,000. Half of the achieved economies effected by the committee will be used for defense and half for reducing the deficit. Members of the committee, established in 1948, are representative of the Treasury Ministry and of Parliament.

Since 1948 the government has granted $35,000,000 to the film production industry.

"Member of the Wedding"

(Stanley Kramer-Columbia Pictures)

CARSON McCULLERS' sensitive portrait of a girl's painful entrance into adolescence that made a noted book and a hit Broadway play has been filmed with reverential awe by Stanley Kramer in a virtually verbatim fashion.

It is a difficult theme to present to a large general audience. The production employs the talents of the outstanding Broadway cast stars, Ethel Waters, Julie Harris and Brandon De Wilde. Its greatest appeal will be to the ultra-intellectual audience. It can be merchandised via a prestige approach and may be well received in urban areas and specialized houses.

There is a modicum of motion as Miss Harris portrays the girl who is too old for her younger playmates and too tomboyish for her more feminine friends. Close-ups have been used excessively so that the girl's dream world has not been established sympathetically and the hiatus of the adult world is not definitively shown.

The story is largely the thoughts and emotions of Miss Harris as she identifies herself in the universe for the first time by "belonging" to her brother, Arthur Franz, his fiance, Nancy Gates, and their wedding. She cannot comprehend, despite Miss Waters' warnings, that she cannot accompany the two on their honeymoon. Her attempts to do so are roughly foiled by her father, William Hansen. Rejected, she does not respond to kind treatment by Miss Waters and her younger child friend De Wilde, but goes on a telescoped tour of the sleazier section of the town. She enters a cafe and talks to drunken soldier Dick Moore who attempts to kiss her and is hit over the head with a bottle. She returns home to find De Wilde dead of an illness. Soon after Miss Harris has "recovered" from the wedding and the death, and fallen into the usual adolescent ways.

Fred Zinnemann directed and has allowed the principals full sway in the exhibition of ultra-realistic histrionics. Edna and Edward Anhalt are credited with the screenplay. Others in the cast are James Edwards, Harry Bolden, Danny Mummert, June Hedin and Ann Carter.

This is a pretentious, Art with a capital A, film. Exhibitors should see it for proper evaluation of merchandising possibilities for their situations.

Running time, 91 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

cided to forget about contempt charges and instead concentrate on getting the Nashville District Court to toughen the original Crescent consent decree.

In 1950, the anti-trust division brought civil and criminal contempt charges against Crescent, four allied theatre circuits and three circuit officers. The Nashville District Court threw out the contempt charges but reserved jurisdiction on several Justice requests to broaden some of the theatre acquisition provisions in the earlier consent decree.

Justice appealed the criminal contempt decision to the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals and the civil contempt decision directly to the Supreme Court.

Department spokesmen today said the criminal contempt appeal had been quietly withdrawn some weeks back, and the civil contempt appeal action followed. They said the Department felt that "as a matter of tactics it was better to prosecute what's still left in the District Court." They indicated they did not yet know the date for further proceedings in the District Court.

N.Y. State Censor Sees Difficulties if Censorship Ends

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 15.—Dr. Charles A. Brind, Jr., counsel to the State Education Department and the Board of Regents, predicted "chaos" in the motion picture industry if film censorship were declared unconstitutional.

Speaking before the Men's Club of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Dr. Brind declared that different cities would take different positions on what is censorable within their police power whereas now producers are "set" once a picture is licensed in New York State. Emphasizing that "someone will have to keep a watch on things," he pointed out that "enforcement under the penal law" had been tried before the present licensing statute was enacted and "did not work." To meet the situation that might develop with the invalidation of censorship, Dr. Brind projected, as he had recently in a speech in Washington, the possibility of theatre licensing.

Brind stated that "it is not true to say that the motion picture industry has cleaned house when 50 per cent of the pictures presented to the motion picture division of the State Education Department are foreign-made or produced by fly-by-night companies" that do not subscribe to the Production Code. He said that the major Hollywood producing companies do not give the motion picture division any "trouble."

House Group Sees No Good in TV, Radio Censorship

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—A House investigating committee said today it thought Congress could, if necessary, enact Federal censorship of radio and television broadcasting, but that no good might come from such legislation.

The conclusion came from a House Commerce sub-committee headed by Rep. Harris (D., Ark.), which has been investigating the moral standards of radio and TV programs. The sub-committee held hearings from June into December, and today issued its final report.

The report said the question had been raised whether Congress could legislate in this field. Quoting from the Supreme Court decision in "The Miracle" motion picture censorship case, the sub-committee said the court had clearly found that under some circumstances some form of community control over films was constitutional and that the same thought could be applied to broadcasting.

"The sub-committee believes, however, that the potential evils inherent in such governmental controls might be even greater than the evils that such controls might be designed to remedy," the report stated. "Furthermore, the sub-committee feels that there appears to be no good reason why such controls should be imposed at this time before the industry has had an opportunity to explore fully whether effective self-regulation is feasible."

Welcomes TV Code

The sub-committee welcomed the television industry's recent code of standards and said that "self-regulation is making substantial progress in this field, and, so long as the public interest is served, is preferable to government-imposed regulation." It urged, however, that Congress continue to keep an eye on the subject and that the new Congress "continue and expand" the investigation.

Other conclusions in the report:

There is still entirely too much emphasis upon crime programs;

Television reaches a different audience from other media, and performances or discussions which might be okay in motion picture theatres, on the stage or in books or magazines might be considered offensive on television, especially when presented during periods when children are watching;

While networks have some responsibility for program standards, individual licensees still bear the final responsibility;

One method for improving program standards is for the public to express its criticisms freely and fully;

Poor taste has been displayed in advertising many products;

Television is trying to get more cultural and educational programs, and should continue to do so.

RKO Board Designee

MOTION PICTURE DAILY was told by the Merrill Lynch firm that by virtue of the firm's policy it would not be possible for a member of the company to be on the board of any organization. It also was stated that the brokerage company had no connections whatsoever with RKO Pictures.

Bent, however, served on the RKO Pictures board for about a year in 1949-'50, presumably as a Hughes' nominee, shortly after Hughes purchased the Atlas Corp. controlling stock interest in RKO.

Edward G. Burke, Jr., a member of the new RKO board, who arrived here from the Coast yesterday, could not clarify the confusion over Bent. He said that he presumed an official statement would be issued by the board this week. It is believed that a new director will be elected to replace Bent, if the latter is definitely off the directorate.

Burke said there had been no election of RKO officers over the weekend, as had been scheduled. He said he believed an election would be held later this week. Because the other three directors are on the Coast, he said the election would be held in Hollywood. Burke will be in New York for two or three days.

It is generally anticipated in the trade that Noah Dietrich, one of the new members of the board, will be named president when the election is held. Dietrich was chairman of the board of RKO Pictures prior to the sale of Hughes' stock to the Ralph Stolkin syndicate last September.

The other new members of the board, as announced by the company in Hollywood on Saturday, are Hughes and J. Miller Walker. The latter was a board member, secretary and general counsel of RKO prior to the sale to Stolkin, and resigned at that time.

It was reported from Hollywood that in addition to granting the Stolkin group deferments on maturity dates of the stock purchase payments due him, Hughes also waived a provision of the agreement holding the members of the Stolkin group "jointly and severally" liable for performance of the contract. In consequence of such a waiver, it was said, members of the Stolkin group could, if they so desired, sell their RKO stock holdings individually, rather than in a block.

However, three of the five members, Stolkin, A. L. Koolish and Ray Ryan, are said to hold 90 per cent of the block, with Burke and Sherrill Corwin owning the other 10 per cent.

Meanwhile, a hearing is scheduled in New York Supreme Court here tomorrow on a petition by a stockholders' group for appointment of a receiver for RKO, an adjunct of an action for recovery which they have brought against Hughes.

Burke Says Officers To Be Elected Later

Whether Maurice H. Bent is or is not a member of the new RKO Pictures board of directors remained an unanswered question here yesterday. ## AMENT HOLDS 'REELS BEAT TV WITH FOOTAGE OF IKE'S TRIP

Editor, MOTION PICTURE DAILY:

Your issue of Tuesday, December 9, 1952, carried an article on its first page, which I feel conveyed several improper and inaccurate expressions.

The facts are these:

All of the motion picture film, including the film made available by TV's own correspondent in Korea, arrived at La Guardia Field at 6:30 A. M. Sunday, December 7th. In accordance with arrangements made by the theatrical newsreel companies the film was instantly picked up by Army Signal Corps representatives and rushed to the Astoria Signal Corps Studio. There it was met by Mr. Jack Le Vien, representing the theatrical newsreels, and Mr. Ted Genock, representing the TV reels, and immediately distributed.

The film was forthwith developed and the neecssary prints processed for all theatrical newsreels and all TV reels with all possible dispatch. This shipment of film contained the only film of any sort received by the theatrical newsreels and the TV newsreels on Eisenhower's trip to Korea. This was in accordance with the careful forehanded planning of the theatrical newsreels and only by virtue of that did the TV reels have any film to show. The theatrical newsreels had three cameramen in Korea with Eisenhower: Dave Oliver, who was the only motion picture cameraman to travel with General Eisenhower, Gene Zenier and Kim Wee. The film made by all three of these men was made available to the TV reels in accordance with an arrangement imposed by the authorities in the Korean Theater. To the best of our knowledge the TV reels had only one man covering for them in Korea. Therefore, it was the theatrical newsreels who won out in Korea.

Albany TOA to Meet On TV, Legislation

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 15. — The Theatre Owners Association of this area will meet at Keeler's Restaurant on Jan. 13 to consider an agenda consisting of a talk on theatre television by an RCA representative from Camden, a discussion of a proposed amendment to the Labor Law Code No. 36 covering theatres and other places of public assembly, and bills affecting the industry that may be pending before the state legislature, executive director Lewis A. Sumberg reports to members.

'Not Too Harmful'

Sumberg expressed the opinion that based on a study of the latest draft of the code "you will find the code as now constituted not too harmful due in a large part to the fact that the Board of Standards and Appeals has made concessions at the request of this organization." As counsel, he attended and participated in discussions at various board hearings.

"I think you should also know," Sumberg stated, "that in some small measure your executive director cooperated with Saul Ullman, chairman of COMPO in this area, with regard to enlisting the support of Congressman O'Brien of Albany in the tax repeal campaign. I think also that recognition and thanks for work well done should go to Ullman since he also enlisted the support of U. S. Senator Irving M. Ives and Congressmen Dean Taylor of Troy and Bernard W. Kearney of Gloversville.

by Mayer, will be produced by Cinerama as its next.

Currently, deals are being set for the showing of Cinerama in Los Angeles and Detroit, Roberts said, adding that Eitel's Palace in Chicago has already been set for the next Cinerama installation.

The target of other installations, Roberts explained, is to have at least 15 theatres from Coast-to-Coast equipped by Nov. 1953. The Cinerama president said the theatres would be leased, not bought, stating "we're not in the real estate business."

Three projectors, the number currently being used at the Broadway Theatre in New York, will be necessary for the showing of Cinerama for at least another year or two, Roberts forecast.

As to structural changes necessary in future theatres, Roberts estimated that the costs would be less than the estimated $75,000 for the Broadway Theatre here. He said the Chicago situation would cost from $25,000 to $50,000 to alter. Orders to completely equip 20 theatres have now been placed by Cinerama, Roberts stated.

N. Y. Visitors Told About Cinerama

That Cinerama has made the Broadway Theatre here an "international institution" is acknowledged by the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau in a special listing which says, "Cinerama, the new motion picture medium that creates a startling illusion of three dimensional reality, is at the Broadway Theatre."

The publication goes to 4,000,000 of New York's visitors each year. No entertainment has ever had a listing of this kind, it was said.

Italy Slashes Film Production Subsidy

By ARGEO SANTUCCI

ROME, Dec. 15.—The government committee charged with reducing budget expenditures has approved a formula which lowers government contributions to native motion picture production from $9,000,000 to $3,500,000. Half of the achieved economies effected by the committee will be used for defense and half for reducing the deficit. Members of the committee, established in 1948, are representative of the Treasury Ministry and of Parliament.

Since 1948 the government has granted $35,000,000 to the film production industry.

"Member of the Wedding"

(Stanley Kramer-Columbia Pictures)

CARSON McCULLERS' sensitive portrait of a girl's painful entrance into adolescence that made a noted book and a hit Broadway play has been filmed with reverential awe by Stanley Kramer in a virtually verbatim fashion.

It is a difficult theme to present to a large general audience. The production employs the talents of the outstanding Broadway cast stars, Ethel Waters, Julie Harris and Brandon De Wilde. Its greatest appeal will be to the ultra-intellectual audience. It can be merchandised via a prestige approach and may be well received in urban areas and specialized houses.

There is a modicum of motion as Miss Harris portrays the girl who is too old for her younger playmates and too tomboyish for her more feminine friends. Close-ups have been used excessively so that the girl's dream world has not been established sympathetically and the hiatus of the adult world is not definitively shown.

The story is largely the thoughts and emotions of Miss Harris as she identifies herself in the universe for the first time by "belonging" to her brother, Arthur Franz, his fiance, Nancy Gates, and their wedding. She cannot comprehend, despite Miss Waters' warnings, that she cannot accompany the two on their honeymoon. Her attempts to do so are roughly foiled by her father, William Hansen. Rejected, she does not respond to kind treatment by Miss Waters and her younger child friend De Wilde, but goes on a telescoped tour of the sleazier section of the town. She enters a cafe and talks to drunken soldier Dick Moore who attempts to kiss her and is hit over the head with a bottle. She returns home to find De Wilde dead of an illness. Soon after Miss Harris has "recovered" from the wedding and the death, and fallen into the usual adolescent ways.

Fred Zinnemann directed and has allowed the principals full sway in the exhibition of ultra-realistic histrionics. Edna and Edward Anhalt are credited with the screenplay. Others in the cast are James Edwards, Harry Bolden, Danny Mummert, June Hedin and Ann Carter.

This is a pretentious, Art with a capital A, film. Exhibitors should see it for proper evaluation of merchandising possibilities for their situations.

Running time, 91 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

Crescent Appeal

cided to forget about contempt charges and instead concentrate on getting the Nashville District Court to toughen the original Crescent consent decree.

In 1950, the anti-trust division brought civil and criminal contempt charges against Crescent, four allied theatre circuits and three circuit officers. The Nashville District Court threw out the contempt charges but reserved jurisdiction on several Justice requests to broaden some of the theatre acquisition provisions in the earlier consent decree.

Justice appealed the criminal contempt decision to the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals and the civil contempt decision directly to the Supreme Court.

Department spokesmen today said the criminal contempt appeal had been quietly withdrawn some weeks back, and the civil contempt appeal action followed. They said the Department felt that "as a matter of tactics it was better to prosecute what's still left in the District Court." They indicated they did not yet know the date for further proceedings in the District Court.

U. A. Will Release Three in January

Produced and directed by John Christian, it stars Helmut Dantine and introduces a new screen actress, Mariana. On Jan. 30 U.A. will release "Luxury Girls," filmed on location in Europe.

N.Y. State Censor Sees Difficulties if Censorship Ends

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 15.—Dr. Charles A. Brind, Jr., counsel to the State Education Department and the Board of Regents, predicted "chaos" in the motion picture industry if film censorship were declared unconstitutional.

Speaking before the Men's Club of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Dr. Brind declared that different cities would take different positions on what is censorable within their police power whereas now producers are "set" once a picture is licensed in New York State. Emphasizing that "someone will have to keep a watch on things," he pointed out that "enforcement under the penal law" had been tried before the present licensing statute was enacted and "did not work." To meet the situation that might develop with the invalidation of censorship, Dr. Brind projected, as he had recently in a speech in Washington, the possibility of theatre licensing.

Brind stated that "it is not true to say that the motion picture industry has cleaned house when 50 per cent of the pictures presented to the motion picture division of the State Education Department are foreign-made or produced by fly-by-night companies" that do not subscribe to the Production Code. He said that the major Hollywood producing companies do not give the motion picture division any "trouble."

House Group Sees No Good in TV, Radio Censorship

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—A House investigating committee said today it thought Congress could, if necessary, enact Federal censorship of radio and television broadcasting, but that no good might come from such legislation.

The conclusion came from a House Commerce sub-committee headed by Rep. Harris (D., Ark.), which has been investigating the moral standards of radio and TV programs. The sub-committee held hearings from June into December, and today issued its final report.

The report said the question had been raised whether Congress could legislate in this field. Quoting from the Supreme Court decision in "The Miracle" motion picture censorship case, the sub-committee said the court had clearly found that under some circumstances some form of community control over films was constitutional and that the same thought could be applied to broadcasting.

"The sub-committee believes, however, that the potential evils inherent in such governmental controls might be even greater than the evils that such controls might be designed to remedy," the report stated. "Furthermore, the sub-committee feels that there appears to be no good reason why such controls should be imposed at this time before the industry has had an opportunity to explore fully whether effective self-regulation is feasible."

Welcomes TV Code

The sub-committee welcomed the television industry's recent code of standards and said that "self-regulation is making substantial progress in this field, and, so long as the public interest is served, is preferable to government-imposed regulation." It urged, however, that Congress continue to keep an eye on the subject and that the new Congress "continue and expand" the investigation.

Other conclusions in the report:

There is still entirely too much emphasis upon crime programs;

Television reaches a different audience from other media, and performances or discussions which might be okay in motion picture theatres, on the stage or in books or magazines might be considered offensive on television, especially when presented during periods when children are watching;

While networks have some responsibility for program standards, individual licensees still bear the final responsibility;

One method for improving program standards is for the public to express its criticisms freely and fully;

Poor taste has been displayed in advertising many products;

Television is trying to get more cultural and educational programs, and should continue to do so.

RKO Board Designee

MOTION PICTURE DAILY was told by the Merrill Lynch firm that by virtue of the firm's policy it would not be possible for a member of the company to be on the board of any organization. It also was stated that the brokerage company had no connections whatsoever with RKO Pictures.

Bent, however, served on the RKO Pictures board for about a year in 1949-'50, presumably as a Hughes' nominee, shortly after Hughes purchased the Atlas Corp. controlling stock interest in RKO.

Edward G. Burke, Jr., a member of the new RKO board, who arrived here from the Coast yesterday, could not clarify the confusion over Bent. He said that he presumed an official statement would be issued by the board this week. It is believed that a new director will be elected to replace Bent, if the latter is definitely off the directorate.

Burke said there had been no election of RKO officers over the weekend, as had been scheduled. He said he believed an election would be held later this week. Because the other three directors are on the Coast, he said the election would be held in Hollywood. Burke will be in New York for two or three days.

It is generally anticipated in the trade that Noah Dietrich, one of the new members of the board, will be named president when the election is held. Dietrich was chairman of the board of RKO Pictures prior to the sale of Hughes' stock to the Ralph Stolkin syndicate last September.

The other new members of the board, as announced by the company in Hollywood on Saturday, are Hughes and J. Miller Walker. The latter was a board member, secretary and general counsel of RKO prior to the sale to Stolkin, and resigned at that time.

It was reported from Hollywood that in addition to granting the Stolkin group deferments on maturity dates of the stock purchase payments due him, Hughes also waived a provision of the agreement holding the members of the Stolkin group "jointly and severally" liable for performance of the contract. In consequence of such a waiver, it was said, members of the Stolkin group could, if they so desired, sell their RKO stock holdings individually, rather than in a block.

However, three of the five members, Stolkin, A. L. Koolish and Ray Ryan, are said to hold 90 per cent of the block, with Burke and Sherrill Corwin owning the other 10 per cent.

Meanwhile, a hearing is scheduled in New York Supreme Court here tomorrow on a petition by a stockholders' group for appointment of a receiver for RKO, an adjunct of an action for recovery which they have brought against Hughes.

Mexican Theatres Closed, Fined for Over-charging

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 16.—Ninety-six local theatres have reduced their admission prices 20 to 35 per cent because of drastic action taken against 16 in the form of a two-hour closing and sealing of their box-offices by Ernesto P. Uruchurtu, the new mayor, and Adolfo Fernandez Bustamante, new chief of the city amusements supervision department, for alleged overcharging.

The closings resulted when 11 top first-runs and five secondary first-runs did not take seriously Bustamante's announcement that his department would collect and turn over to public charities all that the top theatres charged over 46 cents and all over 34 cents which secondary houses demanded. The department insisted that the rate of 57 cents, which the top theatres charged and the 46 cents charged by the secondaries, were excessive. The action caused 80 second and subsequent-run theatres to cut from 20 to 35 per cent.

The department had been fining theatres $57.80 per day for charging prices higher than those authorized. It said the exhibitors were glad to pay because of the huge profits they made.

U. S. distributors' reaction to the new theatre prices was the suspension of Mexican premieres, scheduled during Christmastime, of three top American films: Paramount's "The Greatest Show on Earth," M-G-M's "Ivanhoe" and Republic's "The Quiet Man." The companies had booked these pictures at very high percentages under the old theatre prices. They want to see how the forced-down price situation develops before releasing the three.

"Never Wave At a Wac"

(Frederick Brisson-RKO Pictures)

ROSALIND RUSSELL is back in top form in another of her famed comedy roles and this one, with Marie Wilson, is really stacked. Both stars and Paul Douglas provide strong marquee lure but what's most important is that Ken Englund has contributed a screenplay that is loaded with gags and distributes the punch lines lavishly among the trio. From all angles this looks like one of the company's top grossers; it is sure-fire entertainment.

Norman Z. McLeod directed excellently, maintaining a rapid pace and utilizing many incisive visual jokes. Miss Russell is seen at the opening as a Washington hostess, a Senator's daughter who caters to "V.I.P.s" and gaudy parties. She is divorced from textile expert Douglas and being romanced by Army Col. William Ching. When Ching is stationed in Paris and Miss Russell's rival, Hillary Brooke, joins the WAC and is assigned near him, the famed hostess joins up too expecting a commission and duty near her intended.

However, her father, Charles Dingle, desires the Army to straighten her out and refuses a commission for her. Miss Wilson, a showgirl tired of over appreciative males, enlists and is Rosalind's pal. Douglas shows up as a tester of military clothing and gets his ex-wife special, rigorous duty with his group, which is experiencing Arctic tests. Eventually she gets tired of the needling and having her passes cancelled and demands separation from the service. She is court-martialed and released although Douglas testifies in her behalf. Set to marry Ching who has commuted from Paris to see her, she attends an engagement party of Miss Wilson and Sergeant Leif Erickson and decides on the next day to go back to Douglas and the WAC. Miss Russell and Miss Wilson are expert comediennes and a fine team. Performances are top-notch all around with Erickson notable as the sergeant. Others in the cast are Arleen Whalen, Lurene Tuttle, Regis Toomey, Frieda Inescort, Louise Beavers and Bernedine Simpson.

Word-of-mouth advertising should get around on this one for it is a smartly produced comedy that deftly treats with familiar situations and should prove a crowd-pleaser of magnitude.

Running time, 87 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 16.

"Stop, You're Killing Me"

(Warner Brothers)

DAMON RUNYON'S distinctive touch is evident in this zany post-Prohibition story involving a bankrupt beer baron, a half-million dollar bookie robbery, and an orphan with a penchant for practical jokes. This is a pleasant package of entertainment in color by WarnerColor that has marquee lure in the names of Broderick Crawford and Claire Trevor, and plenty of situation comedy. It is a potent bit of merchandise which, properly promoted, should do well at the box-office.

The screenplay by James O'Hanlon presents Crawford, Miss Trevor's husband, as a beer baron who goes to Saratoga to arrange payment of a loan on his brewery. Crawford's daughter, Virginia Gibson, accompanies her parents and her suitor, Bill Hayes, who takes a state trooper's job nearby. He is really the son of a socially prominent and wealthy family.

In Crawford's absence from his Saratoga mansion the five men who robbed the bookies hide out. One Henry Morgan, kills his four partners when they try to double-cross him. He cannot flee because Crawford's mobster-pals, turned house-servants, arrived on the scene with Louis Lettieri, six-year-old orphaned boy whom Crawford has taken along for a vacation. Crawford throws a big party in a futile money-raising effort. Lettieri, who has found Morgan's black bag full of money and hidden it, empties some of its content among the guests. Crawford uses the currency to get an extension from bank representatives Don Beddoe and Steven Chase. He makes Hayes a hero by having him shoot the closeted already-dead crooks and accidentally capture Morgan. Hayes and Miss Gibson clinch at the happy fadeout.

Crawford, Miss Trevor, and Lettieri handle the comedy adeptly, ably supported by Charles Cantor, Sheldon Leonard and Joe Vitale as Crawford's aides. Others in the cast are Howard St. John, Margaret Dumont, Henry Slate, Jack Pepper and Ned Glass. There are neat renditions of the title song and "My Everlovin'," "Ain't She Sweet," "Baby Face" and "Let the Rest of the World Go By."

Roy Del Ruth's capable direction emphasized the broad comedy aspects. Louis F. Edelman's production is attractive and authentic for the period.

Running time, 86 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 17.

$13,915,000 Gross In Mexico City

Control of Scandia Films Passes to 3

To assure films from Sweden and the Scandinavian countries wider distribution in the United States, three Swedish producers have purchased Scandia Films, Inc., distributor of Swedish films in America, Ernest Mattsson, president and owner of Scandia, announced. The producers are A. B. Europa Film, A. B. Sandrews Ateljeer and the A. B. Svensk Filmindustri, all of Stockholm.

Spiegal Stresses Importance of Overseas Market

The importance of the foreign market was stressed here yesterday by independent producer Sam Spiegal, who has returned from England where he completed production on "Melba," which will be released through United Artists.

Spiegal cited the revenues of "African Queen" as an example. He estimated that "African Queen" will earn from $7,000,000 to $8,000,000, 45 per cent of which will be derived outside the United States and Canada. "African Queen," released through UA, was made under the Horizon-American banner, a company in which he is associated with John Huston.

Spiegal said that "Melba," produced in color by Technicolor, cost about $1,000,000. Costs were held down, Spiegal continued, by shooting on location abroad. He praised Britain's Eady Plan as an incentive for producing in England.

THE MEANING OF "THE BLUE LIGHT"

This is the key to why "Above and Beyond" was a hush-hush picture. But now it can be told.

Robert Taylor surpasses his performance in "Quo Vadis" and "Ivanhoe" in "Above and Beyond."

with more than 1,600 seats, compared with a previous range of $15 up to 600 seats and $48 for 1,600 seats or more. The changes in brackets apply to to those houses with less than 1,200 seats.

There are four basic changes in the drive-in theatre schedules, which start at $24 for capacities up to 250 cars, with the top being $60 for theatres having space for 700 or more cars.

On Pro-rata Basis

Collins said that several theatre operators had inquired whether they would be obliged to pay the full annual rate in cases where the theatres did not operate the entire year. He said the policy of ASCAP in this respect was that if a theatre operated on a seasonal basis, its rate would be pro-rated on the basis of the annual rate.

Theatres and circuits that already have signed contracts may continue to operate under their present pacts for the first year of the agreement or execute a new contract embodying the new rates.

Films to TV

Anderson; "Casanova in Burlesque," starring Joe E. Brown and June Havoc; "Madonna's Secret," with Francis Lederer, Gail Patrick and Ann Rutherford; "Steppin' in Society," "Scotland Yard Investigator," and "The Cheaters."

Negotiations for the contract, which required six months to complete, were conducted by David Savage, film manager for WCBS-TV, and Earl Collins, president of Hollywood Television Service. It is the second contract for an exclusive film package negotiated for WCBS-TV within the past three weeks. The first involved 18 films produced by Sol Wurtzel.

100 Films Cost $6,930,000

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 16.—Production of the 100 pictures which the trade estimates will be Mexico's maximum for 1952 will have a calculated cost of $6,930,000. Up to Nov. 30, 88 pictures had been made and 12 more are to be finished by Dec. 31. After starting very slowly because of financing and labor troubles, production was normalized in August and since then has continued satisfactorily.

The present average cost per picture is $69,300.

"Tropic Zone"

(Pine & Thomas-Paramount)

WILLIAM PINE and William Thomas have fashioned another of their smooth, actionful productions in color by Technicolor that utilizes handsome island settings and stars Ronald Reagan and Rhonda Fleming. Estelita is featured as a casino singer and dancer and performs zestfully. Like Miss Fleming, she is quite attractive and both are well-costumed. The film has plenty of brawls and under the skillfull direction of Lewis Foster there is a neat blending of action, romance, and song. There are sufficient merchandising angles to garner ample box-office returns.

Based on a novel by Tom Gill and written by Lewis R. Foster, the plot presents Reagan as a political refugee who is smuggled into the country by Estelita and soldier of fortune pilot Noah Beery. He meets Miss Fleming who has inherited a small banana plantation which is being deliberately run down by foreman Grant Withers. The latter is in the pay of John Wengraf, monopolistic shipper seeking to ruin and buy up all small plantations.

Reagan happens to have been a banana expert so he easily replaces Withers who gets fired after getting drunk. However, Wengraf threatens to turn in Reagan as an illegal entry and blackmails him into damaging the plantation. Reagan and Miss Fleming fall in love so he double crosses Wengraf and has Beery fly off to arrange a fruit supplying contract with a big firm for the independents. Beery obtains the contract, Reagan's political friends return to power in his exiled country, he fills the contract on time, and convinces Estelita he and Miss Fleming are enamoured. The stars perform capably and and Estelita effectively dances the Handkerchief Dance and the Cali Conga. She also sings "I'll Always Love You" and "The Magic of You." Others in the cast are Argentina Brunetti, Ricco Alanez, Maurice Jara and Pilar Del Rey.

Running time, 94 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

"The Gambler and the Lady"

(Exclusive Films-Lippert) Hollywood, Dec. 16

PRODUCED in England by Exclusive Films, this melodrama presents Dane Clark as an American ex-convict, who, although operating a London night club, has ambitions to crash English society. Clark is the only American personality in the cast and he handles his role in a highly satisfactory manner. Others are: Kathleen Byron, Naomi Chance, Meredith Edwards, Anthony Forwood, Eric Pholmann, Julian Somers, Anthony Ireland, Max Bacon and Mona Washbourne.

Clark portrays a mobster whose temper has involved him in a murder charge in the United States. His social ambitions cause him to jilt the club's dancer, who loves him, in favor of a socialite who, he believes, can get him accepted by the social set. However, Clark finds that his goal is not as easy as he imagined. Just as he seems to be making some headway, the dancer runs him down with her car, ending his ambitions and his life. Miss Byron gives a polished performance, as do the others in the all-British cast. Estelita he and Miss Fleming are enamoured. The stars perform capably Anthony Hinds produced the picture, which is satisfactory, and which was co-directed by Sam Newfield and Patrick Jenkins.

Running time, 72 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 26.

with more than 1,600 seats, compared with a previous range of $15 up to 600 seats and $48 for 1,600 seats or more. The changes in brackets apply to to those houses with less than 1,200 seats.

There are four basic changes in the drive-in theatre schedules, which start at $24 for capacities up to 250 cars, with the top being $60 for theatres having space for 700 or more cars.

On Pro-rata Basis

Collins said that several theatre operators had inquired whether they would be obliged to pay the full annual rate in cases where the theatres did not operate the entire year. He said the policy of ASCAP in this respect was that if a theatre operated on a seasonal basis, its rate would be pro-rated on the basis of the annual rate.

Theatres and circuits that already have signed contracts may continue to operate under their present pacts for the first year of the agreement or execute a new contract embodying the new rates.

Negotiations for the contract, which required six months to complete, were conducted by David Savage, film manager for WCBS-TV, and Earl Collins, president of Hollywood Television Service. It is the second contract for an exclusive film package negotiated for WCBS-TV within the past three weeks. The first involved 18 films produced by Sol Wurtzel.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 16.—Production of the 100 pictures which the trade estimates will be Mexico's maximum for 1952 will have a calculated cost of $6,930,000. Up to Nov. 30, 88 pictures had been made and 12 more are to be finished by Dec. 31. After starting very slowly because of financing and labor troubles, production was normalized in August and since then has continued satisfactorily.

The present average cost per picture is $69,300.

Johnston Sees Exhibitors On Arbitration

Initiates First Session Aimed at New Agreement

Steps toward reaching an understanding on the future of arbitration in the motion picture business have been taken in a preliminary "off-the-record" meeting between three exhibitor leaders and Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, with Joyce O'Hara and Ralph Hetzel, MPAA vice-presidents, sitting in. The meeting was held in New York last Friday but efforts were made to withhold news of the sessions and the nature of the talks.

It was learned, however, that the parleys covered the general problems relating to arbitration, with no conclusions reached, nor were any future meetings scheduled.

Exhibitor representatives at the meeting were Herman Levy, general counsel of Theatre Owners of Amer-

RKO Theatres Wins D. of J. Extension

The Department of Justice has granted an extension of time for the disposition of RKO's stock interests in Metropolitan Playhouses.

The new deadline date for George Alger, trustee of the stock, to report to the New York Statutory Court on the disposition of the stock is Feb. 2, instead of Dec. 20. The disposal of 56,488⅘ shares of Class A stock in Metropolitan is called for under the terms of the RKO consent decree.

A deal for 104 Republic features, most of them produced between 1945 and 1948, was disclosed here yesterday by WCBS-TV, key station of the CBS television network, and Hollywood Television Service, Inc., a completely-owned subsidiary of Republic Pictures.

The films, which will be released to WCBS-TV for exclusive first-run television showings in the New York area, will be shown starting Feb. 1, on the New York television station's "The Early Show" and "The Late Show."

Mexican Theatres Closed, Fined for Over-charging

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 16.—Ninety-six local theatres have reduced their admission prices 20 to 35 per cent because of drastic action taken against 16 in the form of a two-hour closing and sealing of their box-offices by Ernesto P. Uruchurtu, the new mayor, and Adolfo Fernandez Bustamante, new chief of the city amusements supervision department, for alleged overcharging.

The closings resulted when 11 top first-runs and five secondary first-runs did not take seriously Bustamante's announcement that his department would collect and turn over to public charities all that the top theatres charged over 46 cents and all over 34 cents which secondary houses demanded. The department insisted that the rate of 57 cents, which the top theatres charged and the 46 cents charged by the secondaries, were excessive. The action caused 80 second and subsequent-run theatres to cut from 20 to 35 per cent.

The department had been fining theatres $57.80 per day for charging prices higher than those authorized. It said the exhibitors were glad to pay because of the huge profits they made.

U. S. distributors' reaction to the new theatre prices was the suspension of Mexican premieres, scheduled during Christmastime, of three top American films: Paramount's "The Greatest Show on Earth," M-G-M's "Ivanhoe" and Republic's "The Quiet Man." The companies had booked these pictures at very high percentages under the old theatre prices. They want to see how the forced-down price situation develops before releasing the three.

"Never Wave At a Wac"

(Frederick Brisson-RKO Pictures)

ROSALIND RUSSELL is back in top form in another of her famed comedy roles and this one, with Marie Wilson, is really stacked. Both stars and Paul Douglas provide strong marquee lure but what's most important is that Ken Englund has contributed a screenplay that is loaded with gags and distributes the punch lines lavishly among the trio. From all angles this looks like one of the company's top grossers; it is sure-fire entertainment.

Norman Z. McLeod directed excellently, maintaining a rapid pace and utilizing many incisive visual jokes. Miss Russell is seen at the opening as a Washington hostess, a Senator's daughter who caters to "V.I.P.s" and gaudy parties. She is divorced from textile expert Douglas and being romanced by Army Col. William Ching. When Ching is stationed in Paris and Miss Russell's rival, Hillary Brooke, joins the WAC and is assigned near him, the famed hostess joins up too expecting a commission and duty near her intended.

However, her father, Charles Dingle, desires the Army to straighten her out and refuses a commission for her. Miss Wilson, a showgirl tired of over appreciative males, enlists and is Rosalind's pal. Douglas shows up as a tester of military clothing and gets his ex-wife special, rigorous duty with his group, which is experiencing Arctic tests. Eventually she gets tired of the needling and having her passes cancelled and demands separation from the service. She is court-martialed and released although Douglas testifies in her behalf. Set to marry Ching who has commuted from Paris to see her, she attends an engagement party of Miss Wilson and Sergeant Leif Erickson and decides on the next day to go back to Douglas and the WAC. Miss Russell and Miss Wilson are expert comediennes and a fine team. Performances are top-notch all around with Erickson notable as the sergeant. Others in the cast are Arleen Whalen, Lurene Tuttle, Regis Toomey, Frieda Inescort, Louise Beavers and Bernedine Simpson.

Word-of-mouth advertising should get around on this one for it is a smartly produced comedy that deftly treats with familiar situations and should prove a crowd-pleaser of magnitude.

Running time, 87 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 16.

"Stop, You're Killing Me"

(Warner Brothers)

DAMON RUNYON'S distinctive touch is evident in this zany post-Prohibition story involving a bankrupt beer baron, a half-million dollar bookie robbery, and an orphan with a penchant for practical jokes. This is a pleasant package of entertainment in color by WarnerColor that has marquee lure in the names of Broderick Crawford and Claire Trevor, and plenty of situation comedy. It is a potent bit of merchandise which, properly promoted, should do well at the box-office.

The screenplay by James O'Hanlon presents Crawford, Miss Trevor's husband, as a beer baron who goes to Saratoga to arrange payment of a loan on his brewery. Crawford's daughter, Virginia Gibson, accompanies her parents and her suitor, Bill Hayes, who takes a state trooper's job nearby. He is really the son of a socially prominent and wealthy family.

In Crawford's absence from his Saratoga mansion the five men who robbed the bookies hide out. One Henry Morgan, kills his four partners when they try to double-cross him. He cannot flee because Crawford's mobster-pals, turned house-servants, arrived on the scene with Louis Lettieri, six-year-old orphaned boy whom Crawford has taken along for a vacation. Crawford throws a big party in a futile money-raising effort. Lettieri, who has found Morgan's black bag full of money and hidden it, empties some of its content among the guests. Crawford uses the currency to get an extension from bank representatives Don Beddoe and Steven Chase. He makes Hayes a hero by having him shoot the closeted already-dead crooks and accidentally capture Morgan. Hayes and Miss Gibson clinch at the happy fadeout.

Crawford, Miss Trevor, and Lettieri handle the comedy adeptly, ably supported by Charles Cantor, Sheldon Leonard and Joe Vitale as Crawford's aides. Others in the cast are Howard St. John, Margaret Dumont, Henry Slate, Jack Pepper and Ned Glass. There are neat renditions of the title song and "My Everlovin'," "Ain't She Sweet," "Baby Face" and "Let the Rest of the World Go By."

Roy Del Ruth's capable direction emphasized the broad comedy aspects. Louis F. Edelman's production is attractive and authentic for the period.

Running time, 86 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 17.

The producers are A. B. Europa Film, A. B. Sandrews Ateljeer and the A. B. Svensk Filmindustri, all of Stockholm.

Spiegal Stresses Importance of Overseas Market

The importance of the foreign market was stressed here yesterday by independent producer Sam Spiegal, who has returned from England where he completed production on "Melba," which will be released through United Artists.

Spiegal cited the revenues of "African Queen" as an example. He estimated that "African Queen" will earn from $7,000,000 to $8,000,000, 45 per cent of which will be derived outside the United States and Canada. "African Queen," released through UA, was made under the Horizon-American banner, a company in which he is associated with John Huston.

Spiegal said that "Melba," produced in color by Technicolor, cost about $1,000,000. Costs were held down, Spiegal continued, by shooting on location abroad. He praised Britain's Eady Plan as an incentive for producing in England.

THE MEANING OF "THE BLUE LIGHT"

This is the key to why "Above and Beyond" was a hush-hush picture. But now it can be told.

Robert Taylor surpasses his performance in "Quo Vadis" and "Ivanhoe" in "Above and Beyond."

"Above and Beyond" contains the Billion Dollar Secret which Robert Taylor kept from Eleanor Parker, who plays his wife.

with more than 1,600 seats, compared with a previous range of $15 up to 600 seats and $48 for 1,600 seats or more. The changes in brackets apply to to those houses with less than 1,200 seats.

There are four basic changes in the drive-in theatre schedules, which start at $24 for capacities up to 250 cars, with the top being $60 for theatres having space for 700 or more cars.

On Pro-rata Basis

Collins said that several theatre operators had inquired whether they would be obliged to pay the full annual rate in cases where the theatres did not operate the entire year. He said the policy of ASCAP in this respect was that if a theatre operated on a seasonal basis, its rate would be pro-rated on the basis of the annual rate.

Theatres and circuits that already have signed contracts may continue to operate under their present pacts for the first year of the agreement or execute a new contract embodying the new rates.

"Tropic Zone"

(Pine & Thomas-Paramount)

WILLIAM PINE and William Thomas have fashioned another of their smooth, actionful productions in color by Technicolor that utilizes handsome island settings and stars Ronald Reagan and Rhonda Fleming. Estelita is featured as a casino singer and dancer and performs zestfully. Like Miss Fleming, she is quite attractive and both are well-costumed. The film has plenty of brawls and under the skillfull direction of Lewis Foster there is a neat blending of action, romance, and song. There are sufficient merchandising angles to garner ample box-office returns.

Based on a novel by Tom Gill and written by Lewis R. Foster, the plot presents Reagan as a political refugee who is smuggled into the country by Estelita and soldier of fortune pilot Noah Beery. He meets Miss Fleming who has inherited a small banana plantation which is being deliberately run down by foreman Grant Withers. The latter is in the pay of John Wengraf, monopolistic shipper seeking to ruin and buy up all small plantations.

Reagan happens to have been a banana expert so he easily replaces Withers who gets fired after getting drunk. However, Wengraf threatens to turn in Reagan as an illegal entry and blackmails him into damaging the plantation. Reagan and Miss Fleming fall in love so he double crosses Wengraf and has Beery fly off to arrange a fruit supplying contract with a big firm for the independents. Beery obtains the contract, Reagan's political friends return to power in his exiled country, he fills the contract on time, and convinces Estelita he and Miss Fleming are enamoured. The stars perform capably and and Estelita effectively dances the Handkerchief Dance and the Cali Conga. She also sings "I'll Always Love You" and "The Magic of You." Others in the cast are Argentina Brunetti, Ricco Alanez, Maurice Jara and Pilar Del Rey.

Running time, 94 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

"The Gambler and the Lady"

(Exclusive Films-Lippert) Hollywood, Dec. 16

PRODUCED in England by Exclusive Films, this melodrama presents Dane Clark as an American ex-convict, who, although operating a London night club, has ambitions to crash English society. Clark is the only American personality in the cast and he handles his role in a highly satisfactory manner. Others are: Kathleen Byron, Naomi Chance, Meredith Edwards, Anthony Forwood, Eric Pholmann, Julian Somers, Anthony Ireland, Max Bacon and Mona Washbourne.

Clark portrays a mobster whose temper has involved him in a murder charge in the United States. His social ambitions cause him to jilt the club's dancer, who loves him, in favor of a socialite who, he believes, can get him accepted by the social set. However, Clark finds that his goal is not as easy as he imagined. Just as he seems to be making some headway, the dancer runs him down with her car, ending his ambitions and his life. Miss Byron gives a polished performance, as do the others in the all-British cast. Estelita he and Miss Fleming are enamoured. The stars perform capably Anthony Hinds produced the picture, which is satisfactory, and which was co-directed by Sam Newfield and Patrick Jenkins.

Running time, 72 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Dec. 26.

Meanwhile, with the addition of two re-releases to its schedule, plus the Lesser production, RKO will have 23 pictures available in the seven-month span from December to next June. The additional reissues are "The Bachelor and the Bobby Soxer" and "Bachelor Mother."

of RKO Pictures. Bent's election to the board had been announced last week in Hollywood. Presumably, rules of the brokerage firm prevent him from taking the post but no official explanation was made.

Edward Burke, the only member of the Ralph Stolkin syndicate which purchased Howard Hughes' 29 per cent interest in the company to remain on the RKO board, left here yesterday for Texas.

Heard by Justice Greenberg

The receivership application, brought by three minority stockholders claiming to own 2,525 shares of stock, will be heard before Justice Henry Clay Greenberg, who expressed concern over the welfare of RKO stockholders at the hearing, last Wednesday.

It was reported on the Coast that C. J. Tevlin, long time Howard Hughes employee who served as RKO vice-president in charge of studio operations during Hughes' regime as general director of production, will return to that post in consequence of Hughes' resumption of virtual control as the dominant member of the new board.

ica; Wilbur Snaper, president of Allied States Association, and Manny Frisch, head of Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association.

Snaper, it was said, reported that Allied wanted two points involving general trade practices cleared up before his association would enter into any new discussions of the proposed arbitration system. The two points were high film rentals and the large number of pre-release pictures being released by distributors. Those issues, Snaper was reported to have said, were Allied's "main concerns." Snaper pointed out that Allied wanted some indication from distributors that they are aware of the exhibitor problems on the two points, hinting at the possibility of conciliating the differences before entering into arbitration discussions.

It was brought out that TOA also agreed that film rentals were too high, but that the organization was ready to proceed with arbitration talks anyway. It is expected that Snaper will give a report on the sessions to the national Allied board at its meeting in New Orleans next month.

Long Park Suit Judgment Favors RKO Theatres

Judgment in favor of RKO Theatres was rendered here yesterday by Judge Aaron Steuer of the New York Supreme Court in the suit filed by Long Park, Inc., a Walter Reade Theatres company.

The suit grew out of RKO Theatres' purchase in Sept., 1950 of Long Park's stock interest in the Trenton-New Brunswick Corp. The Reade firm contended that the $792,500, paid by RKO was for a 25 per cent interest in the stock, valued at $750,000, and $42,500 as a dividend due the Reade firm at the time. It was further claimed that a $50,000 dividend payment, over and above the $42,500, was due Long Park and that the contract agreement with RKO Theatres should be set aside.

Judge Steuer in his decision denied any fraud had taken place and dismissed the Long Park complaint. Among those who testified in the suit were Walter Reade, Jr., president of the circuit bearing his name; Sol Schwartz, president of RKO Theatres; Tom O'Connor, RKO vice-president, and Harold Newcomb, comptroller.

Solomon Goodman was the attorney for Long Park, while O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery and George Raftery were trial counsel.

The new firm's first production will be Mickey Spillane's "That Hammer Guy," based on the mystery novels, which will tee off over the Mutual Broadcasting System on Jan. 6.

known personality of the airways—radio or TV—doing a commentary as an introduction, a chatter routine between each subject and a sign off at the end of the final subject.

While no "names" have been signed as yet, Kramer said he visualized persons like Herb Shriner and Art Linkletter for the interpolations. Shriner and Linkletter are familiar to TV audiences and their presence on the theatre screen would be drawing cards, Kramer said. RKO, he added, will "tailor" the subject to the requirements of the exhibitor, eliminating one short from the feature-length subject to fit a scheduled running time for an over-all program. Thus, the connected shorts and the inserted commentaries by the personalities may become the second feature on dual programs.

Lost Entertainment

Kramer said he believed the projects would whet the appetite of the public for short comedies which, in many theatres, have become lost entertainment due to the length of each feature on double bills.

Following the pattern set by TV film production whereby filmed subjects are turned out speedily after careful preparation, RKO short subject producer George Bilson has produced six two-reel comedies at the Hollywood studio in 12 days, Kramer said. The six included four Gil Lamb subjects and two in the "Newlywed" series. With scripts completed and production crews ready, Bilson shot the block of shorts in about the time that it ordinarily took to film one subject on a staggered schedule. There was no loss of quality and the economic savings were sizeable, Kramer said. In that way, the balance of RKO's shorts program for the 1952-53 season were completed in less than two weeks.

Greater attention is being given to the merchandising of the shorts subjects, Kramer explained. Under Joe Ehrlich, recently named to promote the company's shorts, tie-ups are being made on a scale almost equal to that of features. The company's A-bomb subject is getting special attention, with the Armed Forces and Civil Defense groups alerted to promote the picture in local areas.

When "Mickey Mouse Birthday Party"—which is composed of five "Mickey Mouse" subjects—is released in the spring, a heavy exploitation campaign is planned, with "birthday parties and grand balls" to be staged from Coast-to-Coast.

Greater impetus than ever given before to the sales and promotion of shorts subjects will be in evidence next year, Kramer said.

RKO Receivership

RKO; David J. Greene, who claims to own and control more than 78,000 RKO Pictures shares, and the Chase National Bank, which is in charge of keeping the company records.

Kipnis said he had been informed by RKO Pictures' attorneys that one more affidavit from the Coast is due to be submitted. The affidavits of Mulvey and Greene oppose the appointment of a receiver. Mulvey, it was learned, expressed satisfaction with RKO as a releasing organization and spoke about the losses that would result if a receiver were appointed.

Kipnis said he had called upon the Department of Justice to investigate Greene's relations with RKO Pictures for possible violation of the company's consent decree. Greene, besires being a stockholder in RKO Pictures, is a director of RKO Theatres.

Arbitration

sales heads since Allied's national convention in Chicago, where the exhibitor organizations rejected the distributors' draft.

It was reported here that the sales managers will give serious attention to the request by Wilbur Snaper, national Allied president, that the distributors clear up two points involving trade practices before Allied will go along on new arbitration negotiations. The two points, presented by Snaper at a meeting with Johnston here last Friday, were high film rentals and an excessive number of pre-release pictures. The sales managers may be willing to clarify those two points if Allied's acceptance of an arbitration plan hinges on such action. Last Friday's session also was attended by Herman Levy, general counsel of Theatre Owners of America, and Manny Frisch, president of Metropolitan Picture Theatres Association.

In some quarters, the opinion was expressed that Allied and the distributors are not as far apart on an agreement in regard to an arbitration plan as some in the industry believe, in view of the fact that the draft prepared by Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, and submitted on Aug. 21, was approved by all parties. The so-called apple-cart was kicked over when certain distributor lawyers allegedly asked for some additional provisions, with Allied then requesting some changes of their own.

"Torpedo Alley"

(Allied Artists) Hollywood, Dec. 17

MANY productions concerning U. S. military services have preceded "Torpedo Alley," a tale about submarines and the men aboard them, but few were as well-rounded as this one, from the standpoints of entertainment, action, performances, story, production and direction. Strong marquee and market values spring from the names of the cast of Mark Stevens, Dorothy Malone, Charles Winninger and Bill Williams.

This story of the submarine is so skillfully worked into the flow of the personal narrative as to add to the film the substantial impact of the documentary without incurring the tedium of that medium.

The production is by Lindsley Parsons, with John H. Burrows serving as associate producer, and with Commander B. R. Van Buskirk (Ret.) and Rear Admiral Thomas N. Dykers (Ret.) as technical advisers. Direction is by the dependable Lew Landers, and the writing credit goes to Sam Roeca and Warren Douglas, who did their best to keep the story from following too closely in the footsteps of the hundreds of service stories that have gone before.

Stevens portrays a Navy flier who is picked up from the sea, after having frozen at the controls during combat, at the cost of his crew's lives, by a submarine on which Douglas Kennedy is executive officer. At war's end Stevens finds civilian employment no balm for his sense-of-guilt and rejoins the Navy, signing up for submarine service, in which he again meets Kennedy and also Kennedy's girl, Miss Malone. While she's getting around to making up her mind between the men, the Korean fighting begins, the men are ordered to sea, and Stevens proves, in the course of leading a landing party which blows up a tunnel, that he is no coward.

Others in the cast are James Millican, Bill Henry, James Seay, Robert Rose, John Alvin, Carlton Young and Ralph Sanford.

Running time, 84 minutes. General audience classification.

Studying Delivery Tariffs in Ohio

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17.—A study of rates and service offered to Ohio exhibitors by 12 film carriers is being conducted by W. V. Blake of Columbus for the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio.

Robert Wile, ITOO secretary, said that his office will furnish members with proposed rate changes as soon as they are filed with the Ohio Public Utilities Commission. Only notification to theatres in the past has been publication in Ohio newspapers of proposed rate changes. Wile said that a preliminary survey conducted by Blake has revealed a "wide discrepancy" in rates.

Notes Discrepancies

"Some carriers charge a certain amount for a minimum number of reels," Wile said, "with a per-reel charge for the excess. Some of them do not charge for the return of the film brought to the theatre from the exchange. Some carriers charge a flat rate per change of show. Some charge by weight, others by distance. Some carry advertising matter, trailers, candy and popcorn, etc, for nothing while others charge for this service. Some of them make differentiations among their own customers for this service—charging some and not others."

List Carriers

The Ohio film carriers under study include: Columbus-Cincinnati Trucking Co., Cincinnati; E. S. Johnson, Cleveland; Film Transit Co., Cleveland; L. C. Gross, Cleveland; Leonard N. Albrecht and Walter M. Solomon, Cleveland; Film Service Co., Cincinnati; Huntington - Cincinnati Truck Lines, Portsmouth; Larry Tuccio, Belleaire; Louis J. Iori, Jr., Cincinnati; John Thomas Larkin, St. Mary's; Theatre Transport Co., Cleveland, and Film Deliveries, Inc., Columbus.

'Cincy' Exhibitors In New Display Plan

CINCINNATI, Dec. 17. — Local exhibitors are co-operating with Robert Wile, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, and the Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co. in a Hollywood display scheduled for the company's main downtown offices March 16-April 9. The display, inspired by the success of the "Hollywood At The Fair" exhibit at Ohio State Fair last August, would show props, miniature sets, costumes and displays from coming pictures. Wile is soliciting the co-operation of major Hollywood studios.

Cincinnati exhibitors already pledged include F. W. Huss, Jr., RKO Theatres, Rube Shor, Herman Hunt, Louis Wiethe, N. G. Shafer and William Bein. Others are expected to join soon.

RKO Streamlining Short Subject Presentations

By AL STEEN

RKO Radio Pictures is streamlining its concept of short subjects production, distribution and exhibition to conform with present day tastes and to meet TV competition by tying in television and radio personalities with completed shorts. Sid Kramer, RKO's short subjects sales manager, revealed here that the new approach to the merchandising of shorts is designed to stimulate the interest of both exhibitors and the public in the entertainment value of featurettes.

One radical innovation planned for 1953, Kramer said, is the linking of two or three short subjects into feature length offerings, with a well

Long Park Suit Judgment Favors RKO Theatres

Judgment in favor of RKO Theatres was rendered here yesterday by Judge Aaron Steuer of the New York Supreme Court in the suit filed by Long Park, Inc., a Walter Reade Theatres company.

The suit grew out of RKO Theatres' purchase in Sept., 1950 of Long Park's stock interest in the Trenton-New Brunswick Corp. The Reade firm contended that the $792,500, paid by RKO was for a 25 per cent interest in the stock, valued at $750,000, and $42,500 as a dividend due the Reade firm at the time. It was further claimed that a $50,000 dividend payment, over and above the $42,500, was due Long Park and that the contract agreement with RKO Theatres should be set aside.

Judge Steuer in his decision denied any fraud had taken place and dismissed the Long Park complaint. Among those who testified in the suit were Walter Reade, Jr., president of the circuit bearing his name; Sol Schwartz, president of RKO Theatres; Tom O'Connor, RKO vice-president, and Harold Newcomb, comptroller.

Solomon Goodman was the attorney for Long Park, while O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery and George Raftery were trial counsel.

pany's annual stockholders' meeting, slated for Feb. 17 in Wilmington, Del. Fabian, who is expected to head up the new theatre company, declined comment as to the identity of the directors and officers of the projected theatre company, which will be formed under the company's consent decree divorcing production and distribution from exhibition.

The changes in the plan will be subject to the approval of stockholders, who last year approved the original formula for divorcement.

known personality of the airways—radio or TV—doing a commentary as an introduction, a chatter routine between each subject and a sign off at the end of the final subject.

While no "names" have been signed as yet, Kramer said he visualized persons like Herb Shriner and Art Linkletter for the interpolations. Shriner and Linkletter are familiar to TV audiences and their presence on the theatre screen would be drawing cards, Kramer said. RKO, he added, will "tailor" the subject to the requirements of the exhibitor, eliminating one short from the feature-length subject to fit a scheduled running time for an over-all program. Thus, the connected shorts and the inserted commentaries by the personalities may become the second feature on dual programs.

Lost Entertainment

Kramer said he believed the projects would whet the appetite of the public for short comedies which, in many theatres, have become lost entertainment due to the length of each feature on double bills.

Following the pattern set by TV film production whereby filmed subjects are turned out speedily after careful preparation, RKO short subject producer George Bilson has produced six two-reel comedies at the Hollywood studio in 12 days, Kramer said. The six included four Gil Lamb subjects and two in the "Newlywed" series. With scripts completed and production crews ready, Bilson shot the block of shorts in about the time that it ordinarily took to film one subject on a staggered schedule. There was no loss of quality and the economic savings were sizeable, Kramer said. In that way, the balance of RKO's shorts program for the 1952-53 season were completed in less than two weeks.

Greater attention is being given to the merchandising of the shorts subjects, Kramer explained. Under Joe Ehrlich, recently named to promote the company's shorts, tie-ups are being made on a scale almost equal to that of features. The company's A-bomb subject is getting special attention, with the Armed Forces and Civil Defense groups alerted to promote the picture in local areas.

When "Mickey Mouse Birthday Party"—which is composed of five "Mickey Mouse" subjects—is released in the spring, a heavy exploitation campaign is planned, with "birthday parties and grand balls" to be staged from Coast-to-Coast.

Greater impetus than ever given before to the sales and promotion of shorts subjects will be in evidence next year, Kramer said.

Kipnis said he had been informed by RKO Pictures' attorneys that one more affidavit from the Coast is due to be submitted. The affidavits of Mulvey and Greene oppose the appointment of a receiver. Mulvey, it was learned, expressed satisfaction with RKO as a releasing organization and spoke about the losses that would result if a receiver were appointed.

Kipnis said he had called upon the Department of Justice to investigate Greene's relations with RKO Pictures for possible violation of the company's consent decree. Greene, besires being a stockholder in RKO Pictures, is a director of RKO Theatres.

sales heads since Allied's national convention in Chicago, where the exhibitor organizations rejected the distributors' draft.

It was reported here that the sales managers will give serious attention to the request by Wilbur Snaper, national Allied president, that the distributors clear up two points involving trade practices before Allied will go along on new arbitration negotiations. The two points, presented by Snaper at a meeting with Johnston here last Friday, were high film rentals and an excessive number of pre-release pictures. The sales managers may be willing to clarify those two points if Allied's acceptance of an arbitration plan hinges on such action. Last Friday's session also was attended by Herman Levy, general counsel of Theatre Owners of America, and Manny Frisch, president of Metropolitan Picture Theatres Association.

In some quarters, the opinion was expressed that Allied and the distributors are not as far apart on an agreement in regard to an arbitration plan as some in the industry believe, in view of the fact that the draft prepared by Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, and submitted on Aug. 21, was approved by all parties. The so-called apple-cart was kicked over when certain distributor lawyers allegedly asked for some additional provisions, with Allied then requesting some changes of their own.

"Torpedo Alley"

(Allied Artists) Hollywood, Dec. 17

MANY productions concerning U. S. military services have preceded "Torpedo Alley," a tale about submarines and the men aboard them, but few were as well-rounded as this one, from the standpoints of entertainment, action, performances, story, production and direction. Strong marquee and market values spring from the names of the cast of Mark Stevens, Dorothy Malone, Charles Winninger and Bill Williams.

This story of the submarine is so skillfully worked into the flow of the personal narrative as to add to the film the substantial impact of the documentary without incurring the tedium of that medium.

The production is by Lindsley Parsons, with John H. Burrows serving as associate producer, and with Commander B. R. Van Buskirk (Ret.) and Rear Admiral Thomas N. Dykers (Ret.) as technical advisers. Direction is by the dependable Lew Landers, and the writing credit goes to Sam Roeca and Warren Douglas, who did their best to keep the story from following too closely in the footsteps of the hundreds of service stories that have gone before.

Stevens portrays a Navy flier who is picked up from the sea, after having frozen at the controls during combat, at the cost of his crew's lives, by a submarine on which Douglas Kennedy is executive officer. At war's end Stevens finds civilian employment no balm for his sense-of-guilt and rejoins the Navy, signing up for submarine service, in which he again meets Kennedy and also Kennedy's girl, Miss Malone. While she's getting around to making up her mind between the men, the Korean fighting begins, the men are ordered to sea, and Stevens proves, in the course of leading a landing party which blows up a tunnel, that he is no coward.

Others in the cast are James Millican, Bill Henry, James Seay, Robert Rose, John Alvin, Carlton Young and Ralph Sanford.

Running time, 84 minutes. General audience classification.

Studying Delivery Tariffs in Ohio

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17.—A study of rates and service offered to Ohio exhibitors by 12 film carriers is being conducted by W. V. Blake of Columbus for the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio.

Robert Wile, ITOO secretary, said that his office will furnish members with proposed rate changes as soon as they are filed with the Ohio Public Utilities Commission. Only notification to theatres in the past has been publication in Ohio newspapers of proposed rate changes. Wile said that a preliminary survey conducted by Blake has revealed a "wide discrepancy" in rates.

Notes Discrepancies

"Some carriers charge a certain amount for a minimum number of reels," Wile said, "with a per-reel charge for the excess. Some of them do not charge for the return of the film brought to the theatre from the exchange. Some carriers charge a flat rate per change of show. Some charge by weight, others by distance. Some carry advertising matter, trailers, candy and popcorn, etc, for nothing while others charge for this service. Some of them make differentiations among their own customers for this service—charging some and not others."

List Carriers

'Cincy' Exhibitors In New Display Plan

CINCINNATI, Dec. 17. — Local exhibitors are co-operating with Robert Wile, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, and the Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co. in a Hollywood display scheduled for the company's main downtown offices March 16-April 9. The display, inspired by the success of the "Hollywood At The Fair" exhibit at Ohio State Fair last August, would show props, miniature sets, costumes and displays from coming pictures. Wile is soliciting the co-operation of major Hollywood studios.

Cincinnati exhibitors already pledged include F. W. Huss, Jr., RKO Theatres, Rube Shor, Herman Hunt, Louis Wiethe, N. G. Shafer and William Bein. Others are expected to join soon.

Gettinger to Submit RKO Plan to Hughes

Author of Formula to Meet with RKO Chief

Milton Gettinger, New York attorney who last week made public a plan for the reorganization of RKO Pictures, plans to go to the Coast shortly after the first of the year to discuss the plan with Howard Hughes. Gettinger prepared the plan at the request of several groups reportedly interested in buying control of the company, he said.

There has been some misunderstanding as to the purpose of the plan, the attorney said yesterday, pointing out that in some quarters it had been interpreted as a "camouflaged liquidation" proposal. In reality, he said, the plan would have the opposite effect, designed to revitalize and strengthen the company and place it on a firm foundation. Gettinger asserted that the reaction to the plan has been "excellent" by scores of stockholders who have contacted him since the formula was released to the press.

In fact, Gettinger said, a group of

'Quiet Man' Named 'Best Film of 1952'

Republic Pictures' "The Quiet Man," the film about Irish life, directed by John Ford, has been chosen as the best motion picture of 1952 by the Committee on Exceptional Films of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

The National Board's remaining nine of the 10 best for 1952 are: "High Noon," "Limelight," "Five Fingers," "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," "The Thief," "The Bad and the Beautiful," "Singin' in the Rain," "Above and Beyond" and "My Son John."

"Breaking the Sound Barrier" was voted the best foreign film seen in the U.S. during 1952, and four other foreign films were voted exceptional: "The Man in the White Suit," "Forbidden Games," "Beauty and the Devil" and "Ivory Hunter."

Theatre TV of B'way Shows Waits on Equity's Scales

Actors Equity and Chorus Equity are continuing a study of conditions under which they will authorize members to appear in stage performances which are made available to large screen theatre television. Until the study has been completed and the conditions for such performances defined, there can be no telecasts to motion picture theatres of any top Broadway dramatic or musical productions.

An experimental telecast of Mike Todd's "A Night in Venice" from Jones Beach Amphitheatre to the Warner Theatre on Broadway had to be canceled last summer because Actors Equity demanded a full week's salary for every member of the large cast for the single, experimental transmission of the water show to the theatre. The cost made the experiment prohibitive.

Equity has since indicated that the one week's pay for its members demanded last summer for the experimental theatre telecast is not to be regarded as a standard for commercial telecasts of stage performances. The results of the current study could bring about demands in excess of that, it was indicated.

The recent telecast of the Metropolitan Opera production of "Carmen" was made possible when the American Guild of Musical Artists which, like Actors and Chorus Equity is a member of the Associated Actors & Artists of America, accepted only token compensation because the "Met's" share of proceeds, about 25 per cent of the gross, was donated to the Metropolitan Opera Benevolent Fund.

Would Have Been Impossible

Had the "Met's" participation been on a strictly commercial basis, it is believed that AGMA's demands, like those of Actors Equity last summer, would have made the theatre telecast of "Carmen" impossible. However, observers point out that the Four A's unions are not intent upon barring theatre telecasts of stage productions but merely wish to appraise the situation carefully before setting scales for even a limited period of time.

The problems involved being complex as well as new, the studies in progress are being carefully made.

Hughes' Stock

trolling stock interest in RKO Pictures Co. to the Ralph Stolkin syndicate last September. However, insofar as could be learned yesterday, Hughes never acted on the government authorization to recover his theatre stock and it has remained in trust.

There it will have to remain, attorneys believe, for as long as Hughes exercises the management control of the picture company. In addition to being chairman of the board, the first time in his four-year association with RKO Pictures that he has consented to becoming an officer of the company, Hughes also has appointed a majority of the board of directors of five, of which he is one.

The RKO consent decree of 1950, providing for the divorcement of the company's film and theatre operations, specified that Hughes could retain his interest in either the new picture company or the new theatre company, but not both. He elected to hold the picture company stock and the court appointed Irving Trust as trustee for the theatre stock.

Attorneys believe that while Hughes probably could not be required to sell his theatre stock while the present circumstances continue, he would be restrained from directly exercising the control it represents in the theatre company for as long as he continues to wield management control of the picture company.

Gettinger Plan

foreign producers, whom he did not identify, is interested in buying into the company if the plan can be effected so that the group may represent RKO in the foreign field.

The Gettinger plan, in brief, provides for the establishment of three active corporations within the RKO framework—a production company, a "library company" which would handle older product and a distributing organization. Production would be on a cooperative basis to provide studio facilities at actual cost and on a profit-sharing arrangement. A board of five producers would supervise and pass on all stories, casts and production details.

Gettinger said that several of the groups interested in purchasing control have assured him that they would back the plan if they were successful bidders for the stock.

AMPA Speakers

He pointed out that other industries make large funds available to conduct consistent, well organized public relations programs in all media of communications, but that "it is a strange omission to think that we do not even use our screens to counter-attack and to educate the people of our commendable attributes." Bergman cited as one of the best public relations programs the establishing of a school for the training and development of not only young talent, but of young executives and administrators on an industry-wide basis.

White, who served as chairman of last night's meeting, sketched a brief history of the MPAA and its predecessor, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and explained the workings of the Advertising Code. He said that in 1951 more than 151,000 pieces of advertising material went through his department and that not more than two per cent received any comment other than a formal stamp of approval. Since the organization of the association, he said, no new censorship law has come into being.

DeBra explained the different approach to publicity as practiced by advertising departments and his own MPAA unit. Whereas advertising men appeal to the individual, he appeals to organizations, more than 2,000 of them, in the course of a year. He urged that the efforts of both segments be coordinated. He asserted that intra-industry friction "hurts us both," and that "we can hope to succeed only if we have the wholehearted cooperation of the exhibitors."

deceased public figure for such a portrayal is not necessary, Warner Brothers stated here yesterday. "This decision of the court followed the verdict of the jury, rendered on Nov. 21, in favor of Warner Brothers on the facts of the case, and the decision now fixes the law of the case," according to the company.

The District Court of Utah indicated in an oral decision from the bench that it would grant the counterclaim of Warner Brothers for a declaratory judgment and will declare that the Utah right of privacy statute does not apply to fictional depictions of deceased public figures in photoplays, it was said. This statement was made by the court after holding the question under advisement since Nov. 21, the date on which the jury had brought in a verdict in favor of Warner Brothers and other defendants, Warner stated.

"Following the jury's verdict, the court took under advisement Warner's counterclaim for a declaratory judgment. The court announced that it would decide the question raised by this counterclaim in favor of Warner Brothers. The formal written judgment has not yet been entered. The case went to trial before Judge Ray Van Cott and a jury on Nov. 17, the trial lasting five days. In the course of the trial the jury heard testimony by leading national educators, among them Dr. Lorin Wheelwright of Salt Lake City, Professor Mark May and Walter Prichard Eaton of Yale, Professor Lilla Belle Pitts, leading American music educator of Teachers College, and Eric Haight of Encyclopedia Britannica Films," said Warner's statement.

Trial counsel for Warner was Dennis McCarthy of Salt Lake City.

Arbitration

jected the distributors' draft, to come up with suggestions for changes. However, it was expected that no formal action could be taken until after the Allied board meeting in New Orleans next month.

As one sales executive said after yesterday's meeting, the tenor of the session was: "Allied turned down the last draft. What'll we do now?"

It was pointed out that a letter to Allied executives which accompanied the October draft of the distributors asking for Allied's comments on the proposals has not brought forth a reply. In fact, one sales head said, "we never received even a formal notification that Allied had rejected the last arbitration draft."

Despite reports that some distributors were not too anxious for an arbitration system, all of the representatives yesterday gave their assurance that they would back a system and expressed hope that a plan could be worked out.

An informal press release by the MPAA after yesterday's meeting stated Johnston "reiterated that there was no change in the distributors' readiness to discuss possible changes in the arbitration proposals with exhibitor representatives. It was recalled that this was made clear in October in a letter to exhibitor leaders inviting comments on modifications suggested by the distributors. There was a unanimous sentiment expressed on the desirability of establishing a mutually beneficial industry system."

The meeting yesterday was attended by sales managers and Austin Keough, Adolph Schimel and Robert Perkins, attorneys for Paramount, Universal and Warner Brothers, respectively, who drew up the distributors' draft in October.

Under the amendment, in the event of a failure to elect a president at the end of his one-year term, the office shall remain vacant, but pending an election, the first vice-president shall discharge the duties of the president. The term of office is one year, but no president can be elected for more than three successive terms.

Terry Ramsaye Says . . . . . A T

"THEY SAY" are the most important words in our industry. What "they say" largely controls the career and destiny of every worker of skill in Hollywood, every contributor of talent, high, low and on the screen, player, writer, executive. If "they say" you are good you are in. If "they say" you are lousy, you are out or will be tomorrow. If "they say" nothing you just are not there, effectively, at all.

What "they say" is controlled only in part by merit, although a bit of it does no harm, especially at the beginning—after that it matters less and less. "They say" has a tremendous inertia content, carrying on with glacial force, sometimes for years. The idea is to get it started, and keep it going, with a nudge now and then.

The merchandise of movieland is repute, which is entirely made up of what "they say." It sells people, it sells pictures, it sells corporations. It also can unsell them all, by saying or not saying.

That is why publicity, consisting of words and pictures in print, and the word-of-mouth they inspire is such a conspicuously anxious, and often feverishly jittered, element of the motion picture scene.

The sum total of what "they say" is fame. That is why Motion Picture Herald, years ago, founded an annual under that title of Fame, to provide a sharply focussed documentation, a record and a reference manual crystalizing in generous pages the recognitions, from the industry itself and from the box office testimony of that final authority, the customer.

This annual down the years has been not only a record of the flow of fame but also a stimulus through press and over the air of more of "they say." This "they say" manifestation grows on itself by word-of-mouth, by writing and rewriting on the larger scene. In Hollywood this fame becomes more immediately personal and intensive, more directly effective across the table where those folk go to see and be seen and in the buzzings of the cocktail hour. That is why Fame annual comes dressed in an artfully commanding cover, without implication of "trade" that it may enjoy position in drawing rooms, and on reading tables as well as executive desks in those offices of super-elegance of soft lights and hard words. Psychologically it is brawny and dynamically sharp fact, but its front and finish suggest what the vernacular calls "class." If you have really done anything in the creative arena you will be in it, and if you have not you cannot get in it. It has velvet ropes.

That has made Fame one of the most impressive reference manuals.

A calculation from figures assembled by the QP staff is that last year it was quoted in media with more than sixty million circulation. Fame's data supplied inspiration for extensive pictorial displays and endless comment, credited and uncredited. Clipping services being what they are, the probabilities are that only a fraction came into our totals.

The motion picture industry sells anticipations of emotions expected to be enjoyed by racing shadows. Those anticipations are controlled entirely by what "they say." Fame vastly helps keep them saying. It is yeast in the brew of interest.

REACTION of many exhibitors to the recently published comparisons of the Aug. 20 and Oct. 21 (distributors') industry arbitration drafts: If, as distributors say, the changes they have made in the Aug. 20 draft are restricted largely to verbiage and are of "minor" significance, then presumably they have little to lose by waiving their proposed changes and restoring the Aug. 20 draft, on which there was substantial, though tentative, exhibitor agreement.

Another frequently encountered exhibitor reaction to the two drafts is that it requires legal training to determine the exact significance of the changes made in the Aug. 20 draft. Most exhibitors, not being lawyers, are deferring conclusions on that score.

OFFICIAL Washington reaction on the value of Eric Johnston's recent journey through South America: Johnston did a good job, saw many of the top people in the countries visited and received from them promises which, if performed, could be of great value to the industry. BUT—

Officials of most of the countries visited by Johnston are known to have made promises before, many of which were not kept. An evaluation of the Johnston trip, therefore, may be impossible to make accurately for another several months when a determination may be had of whether performances match the promises.

AL DAFF, executive vice-president of Universal, and Charles Feldman, general sales manager, soon will be honored by the company's domestic and foreign sales organizations with sales drives, the occasions being Daff's third of a century anniversary with Universal, and Feldman's quarter of a century anniversary.

Both Daff and Feldman came up from the ranks in the company they have served so many years; Daff from the obscurity of a branch office in Tasmania, Feldman from the perhaps greater obscurity of a Sioux City office.

Their careers are both testimony to the opportunity this industry affords and incentive to younger men eager and qualified to make careers in the business of motion

Completion of RKO Officers' Slate Due; Dietrich Here Jan.5

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 21.—With at least a quorum of the new RKO Pictures board of five members in periodic meetings here over the weekend, an announcement was expected of the election of new officers of the company.

Noah Dietrich, former RKO board chairman, still is expected to be named president. Dietrich is participating in the conferences here with Hughes and J. Miller Walker. The latter is expected to be reelected vice-president, secretary and general counsel, posts he held prior to the sale of Hughes' controlling stock interest to the Ralph Stolkin syndicate.

The company announced the election of Hughes as board chairman last week. The other members of the board, in addition to Hughes, Dietrich and Walker, are A. B. Simpson of Houston and Edward Burke.

Commerce Dep't Advisory Group Also Asks D. of J. Pre-Court Conferences

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21. — The Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council today urged that courts avoid imposing retroactive treble damages in anti-trust suits where the evidence indicates lack of wilful violation.

The Council submitted to Secretary Sawyer an exhaustive study of the anti-trust laws entitled "Effective Competition."

"A strong sense of injustice is aroused," the report said at one point, "by penalizing people for action which they could not have known to be illegal. A large majority of major anti-trust cases are decided by a divided court. For example in trade regulation cases in 1948-49 only four of 11 Supreme Court decisions were unanimous, dissents running from two to four in the other seven cases. Furthermore, the Court overruled 30 earlier decisions in 12 years. The best efforts toward compliance cannot cope

$250,000,000 Outlay for Recreational Bldg. in '53

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—A top National Production Authority official predicted today that close to $250,000,000 worth of theatres, bowling alleys, playgrounds and other recreational structures would be built in 1953.

NPA has announced that its 26-month old ban on theatre and other construction would end Jan. 1.

John L. Haynes, director of NPA's building materials division, also said that he thought builders of these types of structures would be able to have delivered without any trouble the maximum amounts of steel, copper and aluminum authorized for them by NPA regulations.

"Fortunately," he said, "the predominant types of building materials used in most recreational construction—concrete, cinder blocks, brick, rough lumber, wall board and nonmetallic roofings—should be amply available to fill the stored-up demand in this field in addition to the continuing requirements for other types of construction."

58 Short Subjects From U-I in 1953

Universal-International Pictures will release 58 short subjects—29 one-reelers and 29 two-reelers with color predominating—and 104 issues of the Universal-International Newsreel during the new year, Irving Sochin, short subjects sales manager, announced at the weekend. The company is committed to 59 this year—33 one-reelers and 26 in two reels.

Highlighting the program will be the release of the two-reel Technicolor subject, "The World's Most Beautiful Girls," filmed at the "Miss Universe" beauty pageant in Pasadena last June. The picture will receive a special promotional campaign and will be sold as a possible second feature.

With the enlargement of the facilities of the Walter Lantz Studios, Lantz will deliver seven new Technicolor cartoons in addition to the six "Woody Woodpecker Cartunes" which he has been making for U-I. Special promotional opportunities are available to exhibitors now that Woody Woodpecker is a syndicated cartoon in addition to a comic book series.

U-I will introduce a new series of one-reelers in color to be known as "U-I Color Parade," on a variety of subjects. "Fiesta Frolics" will be the first.

Expanding the company's "Name Band Musical" series of two-reelers U-I will release a new series under the more-inclusive title of "Musical Featurettes" with 13 subjects featuring name singers, entertainers and dancers in addition to the customary name bands. More attention will be given to story and production in this series.

The company's two-reel Louis De-Rochemont "The Earth and Its Peoples" series will include 13 more subjects. Rounding out the program of two-reelers will be two specials. Completing the program of one-reelers will be the "Variety Views" series of eight one-reelers.

the series and shooting is scheduled to start on Jan. 5.

Green Said Seeking 20th Proxy Support

Charles Green, whose recent extensive purchases of 20th Century-Fox stock has been interpreted in the trade as the forerunner to a proxy fight at the next stockholders meeting, is reported to be seeking support among stockholders. Green is said to have contacted banking interests with 20th-Fox stock holdings or voting trusts preparatory to the predicted proxy battle. According to Wall Street reports, however, Green has not been given much assurance that the interests will line up on his side.

Green, at the weekend, would make no comment on the report that he was lining up stockholder support.

"I'm only trying to run my own business," he told MOTION PICTURE DAILY.

with such contingencies. Hundreds of millions of dollars of retroactive penalties hinge on such a state of law.

"Under these circumstances it seems that where the evidence indicates lack of wilful violation, discretion should be used to avoid any effort to impose retroactive treble damages, often covering many years."

The Council's report said business policy generally is to comply with the anti-trust laws, but that the big difficulty is that agencies and courts interpret the statutes differently. "So confused is the picture that it is often impossible for a business man or his lawyer to know whether he is conforming with or violating the anti-trust laws," the report stated.

The Council suggested a conference section be set up in the Department of Justice, and that this section discuss Deparment complaints with businessmen before going to court. "There is reason to believe," the report said, "that fully 90 per cent of the cases arising in the anti-trust field can be solved by preliminary conference." The Council also urged that businessmen should be able to get authoritative rulings on a particular practice, and that such a service might be operated as an adjunct to the conference section.

Finally, the Council urged the establishment of one or more objective review boards, consisting of competent businessmen, engineers, economists and non-prosecuting lawyers, to "insure that government commencement of anti-trust cases conforms to national policy."

Secretary Sawyer praised the report and specifically endorsed the suggestion for a conference section in the Department of Justice.

been given to understand that Rep. Dingell's bill would provide for complete elimination of the Federal admission tax on tickets priced at 60 cents and under, and that the reduction of the tax to 10 per cent would be on tickets over 60 cents.

COMPO officials said they expect several bills for outright repeal of the 20 per cent tax as well as others similar to Dingell's to be introduced early next month. For that reason they are not unduly concerned about Dingell's bill failing to make provision for complete elimination of the tax.

Robert W. Coyne, executive director of COMPO, expressed some surprise that Dingell's bill is taking the form reported in view of the fact that its author has been represented as an advocate of outright repeal of the tax. The bill, it is understood, calls for complete elimination of the tax on dance halls, cabarets and the like.

Coyne said COMPO at the weekend was endeavoring to get in touch with Dingell in Detroit to obtain a clarification of his views.

"The Pathfinder"

(Columbia)

THE TIMELESS NOVEL of James Fenimore Cooper, "The Pathfinder," serves as the basis upon which this historical adventure drama has been produced. Fashioned in knowing formula style, the picture bristles with action, combat and historical overtones. It is entertainment that is relaxing and easy to follow. As such it should prove attractive with general patronage. The lead and title role is played by George Montgomery, with top billing shared by Helena Carter.

The story is set in the year 1754 with both France and England seeking to gain control of the prized American territory around the Great Lakes. On the side of the English are the peaceful Mohicans while the war-like Mingos are lined up with the French. As the story opens, the Pathfinder beholds the atrocities of the Mingos and in rage decides to aid the English. He agrees to become a scout for them and do some espionage work around a French supply center. Because he speaks no French, it is decided to provide him with an interpreter. The interpreter turns out to be Miss Carter.

As one might expect, each becomes competitive with the other and a lot of innocent differences arise as they infiltrate enemy territory. However, faced with the common danger of the enemy, both are brought closer together, until finally love flowers.

Throughout the screenplay, by Robert E. Kent, there are skirmishes with Indians and dangerous calls in general. The finale sees Montgomery and Miss Carter captured and doomed to death as spies. It takes some brisk action by Montgomery and a fortunately-timed attack by the British to save the day.

Sam Katzman produced and Sidney Salkow directed. Others in the cast are Jay Silverheels and Walter Kingsford.

Running time, 78 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 21.—"Irresponsible personal publicity agents" were denounced by Association of Motion Picture Producers board chairman Y. Freeman pointed out in a statement released to the press that the organized industry maintains the Production Code and Advertising Code, which prevent improper material from emanating from responsible studios or producers, and called upon all periodicals to lend their "cooperation toward the elimination of such material."

REACTION of many exhibitors to the recently published comparisons of the Aug. 20 and Oct. 21 (distributors') industry arbitration drafts: If, as distributors say, the changes they have made in the Aug. 20 draft are restricted largely to verbiage and are of "minor" significance, then presumably they have little to lose by waiving their proposed changes and restoring the Aug. 20 draft, on which there was substantial, though tentative, exhibitor agreement.

Another frequently encountered exhibitor reaction to the two drafts is that it requires legal training to determine the exact significance of the changes made in the Aug. 20 draft. Most exhibitors, not being lawyers, are deferring conclusions on that score.

OFFICIAL Washington reaction on the value of Eric Johnston's recent journey through South America: Johnston did a good job, saw many of the top people in the countries visited and received from them promises which, if performed, could be of great value to the industry. BUT—

Officials of most of the countries visited by Johnston are known to have made promises before, many of which were not kept. An evaluation of the Johnston trip, therefore, may be impossible to make accurately for another several months when a determination may be had of whether performances match the promises.

Both Daff and Feldman came up from the ranks in the company they have served so many years; Daff from the obscurity of a branch office in Tasmania, Feldman from the perhaps greater obscurity of a Sioux City office.

Their careers are both testimony to the opportunity this industry affords and incentive to younger men eager and qualified to make careers in the business of motion

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21. — The Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council today urged that courts avoid imposing retroactive treble damages in anti-trust suits where the evidence indicates lack of wilful violation.

The Council submitted to Secretary Sawyer an exhaustive study of the anti-trust laws entitled "Effective Competition."

"A strong sense of injustice is aroused," the report said at one point, "by penalizing people for action which they could not have known to be illegal. A large majority of major anti-trust cases are decided by a divided court. For example in trade regulation cases in 1948-49 only four of 11 Supreme Court decisions were unanimous, dissents running from two to four in the other seven cases. Furthermore, the Court overruled 30 earlier decisions in 12 years. The best efforts toward compliance cannot cope

$250,000,000 Outlay for Recreational Bldg. in '53

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—A top National Production Authority official predicted today that close to $250,000,000 worth of theatres, bowling alleys, playgrounds and other recreational structures would be built in 1953.

NPA has announced that its 26-month old ban on theatre and other construction would end Jan. 1.

John L. Haynes, director of NPA's building materials division, also said that he thought builders of these types of structures would be able to have delivered without any trouble the maximum amounts of steel, copper and aluminum authorized for them by NPA regulations.

"Fortunately," he said, "the predominant types of building materials used in most recreational construction—concrete, cinder blocks, brick, rough lumber, wall board and nonmetallic roofings—should be amply available to fill the stored-up demand in this field in addition to the continuing requirements for other types of construction."

58 Short Subjects From U-I in 1953

Universal-International Pictures will release 58 short subjects—29 one-reelers and 29 two-reelers with color predominating—and 104 issues of the Universal-International Newsreel during the new year, Irving Sochin, short subjects sales manager, announced at the weekend. The company is committed to 59 this year—33 one-reelers and 26 in two reels.

Highlighting the program will be the release of the two-reel Technicolor subject, "The World's Most Beautiful Girls," filmed at the "Miss Universe" beauty pageant in Pasadena last June. The picture will receive a special promotional campaign and will be sold as a possible second feature.

With the enlargement of the facilities of the Walter Lantz Studios, Lantz will deliver seven new Technicolor cartoons in addition to the six "Woody Woodpecker Cartunes" which he has been making for U-I. Special promotional opportunities are available to exhibitors now that Woody Woodpecker is a syndicated cartoon in addition to a comic book series.

U-I will introduce a new series of one-reelers in color to be known as "U-I Color Parade," on a variety of subjects. "Fiesta Frolics" will be the first.

Expanding the company's "Name Band Musical" series of two-reelers U-I will release a new series under the more-inclusive title of "Musical Featurettes" with 13 subjects featuring name singers, entertainers and dancers in addition to the customary name bands. More attention will be given to story and production in this series.

The company's two-reel Louis De-Rochemont "The Earth and Its Peoples" series will include 13 more subjects. Rounding out the program of two-reelers will be two specials. Completing the program of one-reelers will be the "Variety Views" series of eight one-reelers.

Green Said Seeking 20th Proxy Support

Charles Green, whose recent extensive purchases of 20th Century-Fox stock has been interpreted in the trade as the forerunner to a proxy fight at the next stockholders meeting, is reported to be seeking support among stockholders. Green is said to have contacted banking interests with 20th-Fox stock holdings or voting trusts preparatory to the predicted proxy battle. According to Wall Street reports, however, Green has not been given much assurance that the interests will line up on his side.

Green, at the weekend, would make no comment on the report that he was lining up stockholder support.

"I'm only trying to run my own business," he told MOTION PICTURE DAILY.

with such contingencies. Hundreds of millions of dollars of retroactive penalties hinge on such a state of law.

"Under these circumstances it seems that where the evidence indicates lack of wilful violation, discretion should be used to avoid any effort to impose retroactive treble damages, often covering many years."

The Council's report said business policy generally is to comply with the anti-trust laws, but that the big difficulty is that agencies and courts interpret the statutes differently. "So confused is the picture that it is often impossible for a business man or his lawyer to know whether he is conforming with or violating the anti-trust laws," the report stated.

The Council suggested a conference section be set up in the Department of Justice, and that this section discuss Deparment complaints with businessmen before going to court. "There is reason to believe," the report said, "that fully 90 per cent of the cases arising in the anti-trust field can be solved by preliminary conference." The Council also urged that businessmen should be able to get authoritative rulings on a particular practice, and that such a service might be operated as an adjunct to the conference section.

Finally, the Council urged the establishment of one or more objective review boards, consisting of competent businessmen, engineers, economists and non-prosecuting lawyers, to "insure that government commencement of anti-trust cases conforms to national policy."

Secretary Sawyer praised the report and specifically endorsed the suggestion for a conference section in the Department of Justice.

been given to understand that Rep. Dingell's bill would provide for complete elimination of the Federal admission tax on tickets priced at 60 cents and under, and that the reduction of the tax to 10 per cent would be on tickets over 60 cents.

COMPO officials said they expect several bills for outright repeal of the 20 per cent tax as well as others similar to Dingell's to be introduced early next month. For that reason they are not unduly concerned about Dingell's bill failing to make provision for complete elimination of the tax.

Robert W. Coyne, executive director of COMPO, expressed some surprise that Dingell's bill is taking the form reported in view of the fact that its author has been represented as an advocate of outright repeal of the tax. The bill, it is understood, calls for complete elimination of the tax on dance halls, cabarets and the like.

Coyne said COMPO at the weekend was endeavoring to get in touch with Dingell in Detroit to obtain a clarification of his views.

"The Pathfinder"

(Columbia)

THE TIMELESS NOVEL of James Fenimore Cooper, "The Pathfinder," serves as the basis upon which this historical adventure drama has been produced. Fashioned in knowing formula style, the picture bristles with action, combat and historical overtones. It is entertainment that is relaxing and easy to follow. As such it should prove attractive with general patronage. The lead and title role is played by George Montgomery, with top billing shared by Helena Carter.

The story is set in the year 1754 with both France and England seeking to gain control of the prized American territory around the Great Lakes. On the side of the English are the peaceful Mohicans while the war-like Mingos are lined up with the French. As the story opens, the Pathfinder beholds the atrocities of the Mingos and in rage decides to aid the English. He agrees to become a scout for them and do some espionage work around a French supply center. Because he speaks no French, it is decided to provide him with an interpreter. The interpreter turns out to be Miss Carter.

As one might expect, each becomes competitive with the other and a lot of innocent differences arise as they infiltrate enemy territory. However, faced with the common danger of the enemy, both are brought closer together, until finally love flowers.

Throughout the screenplay, by Robert E. Kent, there are skirmishes with Indians and dangerous calls in general. The finale sees Montgomery and Miss Carter captured and doomed to death as spies. It takes some brisk action by Montgomery and a fortunately-timed attack by the British to save the day.

Sam Katzman produced and Sidney Salkow directed. Others in the cast are Jay Silverheels and Walter Kingsford.

Running time, 78 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

Selznick Finds Reissue Value Tops TV Deals

Rules Out Sale of Old SRO Films to Video

Plans to reissue for theatrical distribution 18 or 19 pictures of the Selznick Releasing Organization were disclosed here yesterday by Frank I. Davis, Jr., vice-president of SRO, who vigorously denied any intention of selling SRO films to television at this time, as reported.

Davis said that David O. Selznick, SRO president, has rejected offers from television interests substantially in excess of $1,000,000 for the films, which were produced between 1936 and 1952. The reason for the rejection, according to Davis, was that it "is economically unfeasible" to release the films at this time to television. He said the TV market had been studied by SRO. "We believe," he added, "that a greater amount of revenue" lies in the theatrical reissue value of the pictures. He did not rule out, however, the possibility of selling the

U. S. Lists $111,600,000 in Foreign Film Investments

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The U. S. motion picture industry had $111,600,000 invested in foreign countries at the end of 1950, the Commerce Department reported today.

The report was based on a census of film companies, the first since the end of World War II.

Of the total, $56,400,000 was invested in Western Europe, Commerce said. The next largest area investment was $22,900,000 in Canada. U. S. film companies reported a $16,400,000 stake in Latin America. All other parts of the world accounted for the remaining $15,900,000.

Commerce officials said that by far the largest part of the foreign investments was owned by foreign-incorporated subsidiaries, rather than branches.

Set Variety Mexico Meet for May 18-22

The Variety Clubs International convention in Mexico City will be held on May 18-22 next year instead of in April as previously planned, according to word received from Louis Montes, chairman of the convention, in Mexico City.

The change was necessary, it was said, because the previous date conflicted with several events being staged by other Tents throughout the country and also because it would be a more suitable time for the "goodwill" milk train for Mexico that is now being organized by William Koster of Tent No. 23 of Boston.

Plans for a scrap book contest and a photo contest at the convention were also disclosed. A scroll will be awarded to the Tent having the best scrap book containing all published material collected from June 1, 1952 to April 1, 1953 pertaining to club and Heart activities. In the photo contest a prize of $300 will be awarded for the best photograph of a Variety Club activity or personality which has been reproduced in a recognized newspaper, magazine, trade paper or other periodical after June 1, 1952 and before April 1, 1953.

In addition, it was disclosed that American Broadcasting will broadcast over its entire radio network a special Christmas Eve program saluting Variety Clubs International on the 25th anniversary of the organization's charitable work.

Customs to Expedite Foreign Film Release

Changes in procedure for clearing foreign motion picture film designed to more completely utilize government facilities here, as well as expedite the release of such imported films here, are announced by Harry M. Durning, collector for the Bureau of Customs, New York.

The changes, to be made effective next month, contemplate that commercial and feature films arriving by air which do not require screening, or with regard to which screening is waived, will be cleared and completely released at the airport where entry is made.

Films requiring screening will be sent to the Appraiser's Stores or to the Custom House Building. In either case, prompt action will be taken to examine and release the films.

At present a good deal of commercial film is examined and screened outside the Customs buildings at the request of importers. In many instances, it was found, the film would have been released more promptly had it been sent to the Appraiser's Stores. Should the government facilities be overtaxed to the extent that undue delays might result, consideration will be given to importers' requests for screenings at private preview rooms, it was stated.

Also, under a new procedure, imported film requiring processing or printing will be released to recognized film laboratories for necessary work on assurances from importers and the laboratories that the printed or processed material will be submitted to Customs for examination when the "lab" work is completed.

films to television following their reissue theatrical run.

The SRO executive explained that the reissue value of the films would be depleted at this time if the same films also appeared on home television. He declined to estimate how long it would take SRO to reissue the package theatrically, but said that the ordinary run for complete distribution of a reissue is about two years. He said it has not been decided as yet how many reissues would be released at one time.

Selznick arrived here yesterday from Rome, where his latest production, "Terminal Station," is being filmed.

coff Co., Inc., had brought the suit before its business really was threatened with regulation.

Wycoff contended that all film carrying was part of interstate commerce and that even its routes wholly within Utah could not be regulated by the Utah Commission. It asked for a "declaratory judgment" to this effect. A District court ruled against it, but the Court of Appeals upheld the company.

In the high court's opinion today, Justice Jackson said the company offered "no evidence whatever of any past, pending of threatened action by the Utah Commission touching its business in any respect."

Something Wonderful Happened to — Bob Considine...

On The Line

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK, NOV. 27—(INS)—I saw a moving picture the other night which my great grandchildren should enjoy in the 21st century—just as my grandfather would have enjoyed it if it had appeared in the 19th century.

It is Samuel Goldwyn's new one, "Hans Christian Andersen," starring Danny Kaye, with Farley Granger and a stunning ballerina named Jeanmaire. Moss Hart magically built a durable and touching story out of sheer gossamer; Frank Loesser wrote a barrel of sprightly and moving music; Charles Vidor directed this demi-factual fable with the surest of hands, and Roland Petit's choreography was so impressive we looked up the meaning of the word.

To begin with, it is not an easy task to make a moving picture as lush as this one is. Nobody in Hollywood is more aware of television and other causes of a falling off of movie attendances. But Goldwyn put more than $3,000,000 into this story of the whimsical, semi-tragic, wonderful cobbler who almost made good in the big city of Copenhagen. His confidence should be rewarded for years to come, for this is an effort that can be brought back whenever man's hearts need lightening.

Kaye's Best

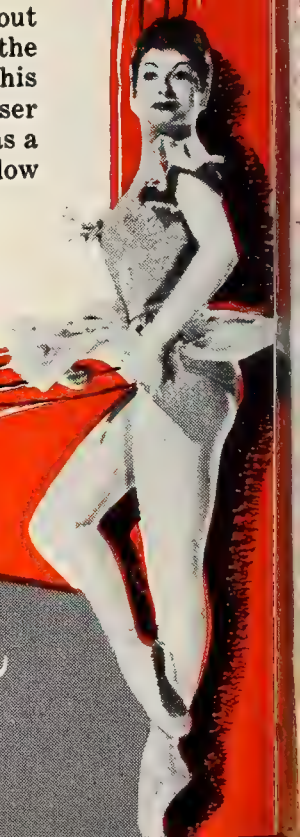
It must have been a tough one to write too. But Hart has put together a story which, while not a biography of Andersen in the strict sense, leaves the viewer with an unusually well-defined memory of an eccentric Dane whose wan, sad, happy, explosive fairy stories have won the rapt attention of children throughout the world for more than a hundred years.

This is the best thing Kaye has ever done. He is as nimble and believable as Andersen's stories are to children. His handling of the film's swarm of Technicolored children, his miming with 14-year-old Joey Walsh (a fine young actor from the East Side of New York who is making his debut in films), and his forlorn love for the happily married ballet dancer show us a Kaye infinitely better than ever before.



Unfeeling slob that I am, I've always felt that with the possible exception of opera the most inept way to tell a story is by ballet. The sight of a girl dancing on her toes, no matter how delicately, has always made me wince like a quince. I keep thinking the off-stage castanets are toes snapping like popcorn. I have an occasional nightmare of being forced at gunpoint to do one of these excruciating pirouettes, at a certain point of which I break both ankles and babble the H-Bomb plans to the mad man.

Artful Blend

Getting back to the ballet, however, the flouncing in "Hans Christian Andersen" is blended into the story as artfully as Kaye's song cues. This Jeanmaire is something to see. She would have set grandpaw's mustache a'twitter, just as I predict she'll cause the jet-propelled rotors on my great-grandchildren's beanies to whir happily in 2052 A.D.

If you're still with me, you may ask, "Won't her clothes look as out of place in the 21st century as Lillian Russell's now do?" Nope. Jeanmaire's costumes in "Hans," or lack of same, have no more chance of going out of style than Eve's.

I wanted to say something nice about Frank Loesser's words and music. But the man who sat next to me said it better by his applause at the end of almost every Loesser number. The man who sat next to me was a fair hand at that profession himself. Fellow named Richard Rodgers.

Selznick Finds Reissue Value Tops TV Deals

Rules Out Sale of Old SRO Films to Video

Plans to reissue for theatrical distribution 18 or 19 pictures of the Selznick Releasing Organization were disclosed here yesterday by Frank I. Davis, Jr., vice-president of SRO, who vigorously denied any intention of selling SRO films to television at this time, as reported.

Davis said that David O. Selznick, SRO president, has rejected offers from television interests substantially in excess of $1,000,000 for the films, which were produced between 1936 and 1952. The reason for the rejection, according to Davis, was that it "is economically unfeasible" to release the films at this time to television. He said the TV market had been studied by SRO. "We believe," he added, "that a greater amount of revenue" lies in the theatrical reissue value of the pictures. He did not rule out, however, the possibility of selling the Twenty feature productions, the majority of them in color, are planned by RKO Pictures for 1953, Charles Boasberg, RKO Radio Pictures general sales manager, disclosed here yesterday upon his return from the Coast where he conferred with Howard Hughes, board chairman.

He said the studio is currently geared for substantial production on the properties owned by RKO. While on the Coast, Boasberg conferred with Hughes on other projected films, relaying his views on the selling potential of various stories and casting problems.

U. S. Lists $111,600,000 in Foreign Film Investments

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The U. S. motion picture industry had $111,600,000 invested in foreign countries at the end of 1950, the Commerce Department reported today.

The report was based on a census of film companies, the first since the end of World War II.

Of the total, $56,400,000 was invested in Western Europe, Commerce said. The next largest area investment was $22,900,000 in Canada. U. S. film companies reported a $16,400,000 stake in Latin America. All other parts of the world accounted for the remaining $15,900,000.

Commerce officials said that by far the largest part of the foreign investments was owned by foreign-incorporated subsidiaries, rather than branches.

See Mayers, Perle In Top NTFC Posts

Arche Mayers, president of Unity Television, and Sally Perle of the Mesal Organization, are expected to be elected president and vice-president, respectively, of the National Television Film Council at the organization's annual luncheon-meeting on Friday.

According to Melvin L. Gold, NTFC president, who is completing his third term in office, the posts of president and vice-president for 1953 are assured to the above-mentioned nominees due to other candidates dropping out of the race. At Friday's meeting, the offices of treasurer and secretary will also be filled, as well as positions on the board of directors.

Set Variety Mexico Meet for May 18-22

The Variety Clubs International convention in Mexico City will be held on May 18-22 next year instead of in April as previously planned, according to word received from Louis Montes, chairman of the convention, in Mexico City.

The change was necessary, it was said, because the previous date conflicted with several events being staged by other Tents throughout the country and also because it would be a more suitable time for the "goodwill" milk train for Mexico that is now being organized by William Koster of Tent No. 23 of Boston.

Plans for a scrap book contest and a photo contest at the convention were also disclosed. A scroll will be awarded to the Tent having the best scrap book containing all published material collected from June 1, 1952 to April 1, 1953 pertaining to club and Heart activities. In the photo contest a prize of $300 will be awarded for the best photograph of a Variety Club activity or personality which has been reproduced in a recognized newspaper, magazine, trade paper or other periodical after June 1, 1952 and before April 1, 1953.

In addition, it was disclosed that American Broadcasting will broadcast over its entire radio network a special Christmas Eve program saluting Variety Clubs International on the 25th anniversary of the organization's charitable work.

Customs to Expedite Foreign Film Release

Changes in procedure for clearing foreign motion picture film designed to more completely utilize government facilities here, as well as expedite the release of such imported films here, are announced by Harry M. Durning, collector for the Bureau of Customs, New York.

The changes, to be made effective next month, contemplate that commercial and feature films arriving by air which do not require screening, or with regard to which screening is waived, will be cleared and completely released at the airport where entry is made.

Films requiring screening will be sent to the Appraiser's Stores or to the Custom House Building. In either case, prompt action will be taken to examine and release the films.

At present a good deal of commercial film is examined and screened outside the Customs buildings at the request of importers. In many instances, it was found, the film would have been released more promptly had it been sent to the Appraiser's Stores. Should the government facilities be overtaxed to the extent that undue delays might result, consideration will be given to importers' requests for screenings at private preview rooms, it was stated.

Also, under a new procedure, imported film requiring processing or printing will be released to recognized film laboratories for necessary work on assurances from importers and the laboratories that the printed or processed material will be submitted to Customs for examination when the "lab" work is completed.

films to television following their reissue theatrical run.

The SRO executive explained that the reissue value of the films would be depleted at this time if the same films also appeared on home television. He declined to estimate how long it would take SRO to reissue the package theatrically, but said that the ordinary run for complete distribution of a reissue is about two years. He said it has not been decided as yet how many reissues would be released at one time.

Selznick arrived here yesterday from Rome, where his latest production, "Terminal Station," is being filmed.

coff Co., Inc., had brought the suit before its business really was threatened with regulation.

Wycoff contended that all film carrying was part of interstate commerce and that even its routes wholly within Utah could not be regulated by the Utah Commission. It asked for a "declaratory judgment" to this effect. A District court ruled against it, but the Court of Appeals upheld the company.

In the high court's opinion today, Justice Jackson said the company offered "no evidence whatever of any past, pending of threatened action by the Utah Commission touching its business in any respect."

Something Wonderful Happened to — Bob Considine...

On The Line

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK, NOV. 27—(INS)—I saw a moving picture the other night which my great grandchildren should enjoy in the 21st century—just as my grandfather would have enjoyed it if it had appeared in the 19th century.

It is Samuel Goldwyn's new one, "Hans Christian Andersen," starring Danny Kaye, with Farley Granger and a stunning ballerina named Jeanmaire. Moss Hart magically built a durable and touching story out of sheer gossamer; Frank Loesser wrote a barrel of sprightly and moving music; Charles Vidor directed this demi-factual fable with the surest of hands, and Roland Petit's choreography was so impressive we looked up the meaning of the word.

To begin with, it is not an easy task to make a moving picture as lush as this one is. Nobody in Hollywood is more aware of television and other causes of a falling off of movie attendances. But Goldwyn put more than $3,000,000 into this story of the whimsical, semi-tragic, wonderful cobbler who almost made good in the big city of Copenhagen. His confidence should be rewarded for years to come, for this is an effort that can be brought back whenever man's hearts need lightening.

Kaye's Best

It must have been a tough one to write too. But Hart has put together a story which, while not a biography of Andersen in the strict sense, leaves the viewer with an unusually well-defined memory of an eccentric Dane whose wan, sad, happy, explosive fairy stories have won the rapt attention of children throughout the world for more than a hundred years.

This is the best thing Kaye has ever done. He is as nimble and believable as Andersen's stories are to children. His handling of the film's swarm of Technicolored children, his miming with 14-year-old Joey Walsh (a fine young actor from the East Side of New York who is making his debut in films), and his forlorn love for the happily married ballet dancer show us a Kaye infinitely better than ever before.

Unfeeling slob that I am, I've always felt that with the possible exception of opera the most inept way to tell a story is by ballet. The sight of a girl dancing on her toes, no matter how delicately, has always made me wince like a quince. I keep thinking the off-stage castanets are toes snapping like popcorn. I have an occasional nightmare of being forced at gunpoint to do one of these excruciating pirouettes, at a certain point of which I break both ankles and babble the H-Bomb plans to the mad man.

Artful Blend

Getting back to the ballet, however, the flouncing in "Hans Christian Andersen" is blended into the story as artfully as Kaye's song cues. This Jeanmaire is something to see. She would have set grandpaw's mustache a'twitter, just as I predict she'll cause the jet-propelled rotors on my great-grandchildren's beanies to whir happily in 2052 A.D.

If you're still with me, you may ask, "Won't her clothes look as out of place in the 21st century as Lillian Russell's now do?" Nope. Jeanmaire's costumes in "Hans," or lack of same, have no more chance of going out of style than Eve's.

I wanted to say something nice about Frank Loesser's words and music. But the man who sat next to me said it better by his applause at the end of almost every Loesser number. The man who sat next to me was a fair hand at that profession himself. Fellow named Richard Rodgers.

Bankers Trust Sets New Film Loan Policy

Calls for A $500,000 Maximum, 50% of Cost

By AL STEEN

Bankers Trust Co. of New York has evolved a three-cornered policy in making production loans to film producers, a policy which is said by the bank to be "about as foolproof as you can get in a business that's definitely not foolproof."

The policy in brief is (1) no loan of more than 50 per cent of production cost will be made, (2) no loan beyond $500,000 will be granted on a film and (3) no single-picture loans will be made. This means that a producer must come in with a program of at least two and preferably three pictures.

The loans are cross-collaterized so that in the event one film proves to be unprofitable, there is some assurance of success for the producer via profits on the others. It is explained

Say Dietrich Balks Over Status in RKO

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 23.—Failure of the RKO Pictures board of directors to elect Noah Dietrich, former board chairman, to the company presidency earlier this week, as had been expected, is attributed by observers here to a situation similar to that which impelled Ned E. Depinet, former company president, to decline the post two weeks ago, that is, unwillingness of the Howard Hughes' controlled board to delegate complete autonomy to the chief executive of the company.

Dietrich, it is believed, has balked at taking the post without assurances

Estimate $15,000 For Roxy Opener

At 3:00 P.M. the box-office recorded $3,097 and Katz estimated that $15,000 would be in the till before the theatre closed last night.

Hopes for Repeal Bills In Hopper in 5 States

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Motion Picture Association of America will swing into action for legislation repealing existing film censorship laws in five states when their legislatures meet next year. An MPAA spokesman said here yesterday that the association hoped repeal bills would be introduced in New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Kansas and Ohio. A sixth state, Virginia, has set no 1953 sessions.

The MPAA's projected move for censorship repeal is regarded here as the next step in the association's continuing drive against state censorship. The manner in which action will be taken has not been defined, but it is presumed that it will be done through contacts with legislators. The association, itself, could not introduce the repeal bills.

"Moulin Rouge"

[Romulus-United Artists]

ALL OF THE COLOR, excitement and energy of a rich segment of life has been captured in this portrayal of Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, the famed French artist of the Paris streets. His personality as depicted by Jose Ferrer under the imaginative direction of John Huston electrifies the screen. This is a picture which is among the best of the year and some of those participating in its production should be candidates for Academy Awards.

Paris of the 1880's, or more exactly, the Paris familiar to Toulouse-Lautrec, comes alive in this Romulus production, illuminating a tragic life against the gay, savage, emotional background of Paris nightlife. There are many entertainment values in this picture and they should pay off at the box-office.

The Can-Can girls, the night-life scenes, the prints of horse races and circuses, all of the familiar artistry of Toulouse-Lautrec, are interwoven in the story, and the color by Technicolor enhances their reproduction. There is sweep and depth in this picture which, in its 123 mintes, ranges through the life of a talented, sensitive individual who was swept by the currents of his period.

The tragedy of Toulouse-Lautrec was that he was dwarfed by a childhood

'Met' Poll Finds Public Favoring Theatre TV

An "overwhelmingly favorable response" by the public to theatre telecasts of operas was recorded in the poll taken by the Metropolitan Opera Company on the "Carmen" telecast, according to preliminary tabulation, it was learned here from a Theatre Network Television spokesman.

Thousands of persons who saw the Dec. 11 event—the first theatre TV entertainment program offered to the public—said they would like to see more of such telecasts, it was stated. In addition to the favorable responses recorded on a questionnaire distributed to the audiences of 30 theatres from Coast-to-Coast, there was some adverse comment too. It was explained that some individuals expressed criticism of the picture telecast.

A complete tabulation of the results of the survey is expected shortly. The spokesman for TNT, which acted as the production-distribution organization for the telecast, said the results were very encouraging. He declined to state whether TNT would offer additional operas this season.

Chairman was Chester Friedman. The guests were entertained by such personalities as Benny Fields, Boris Karloff and Joe E. Brown. Numbers for the prizes were drawn by Brown and Fields, the latter tying in the drawings with amusing episodes experienced in the filming of Paramount's "Somebody Loves Me," which depicted the lives of Fields and his wife, Blossom Seeley. Karloff thanked AMPA for what it had done for him publicity-wise.

The grand prizes were restricted to AMPA members only, the prizes consisting of vacations in Miami, Daytona Beach, Atlantic City and at Grossinger's.

Herring to Roses In RKO Press Play

The opening of "No Time for Flowers" at the Normandie Theatre here tomorrow has been preceded by a courtship of newsmen by RKO Radio publicists. One day they came bearing knockwurst, another day, herring; another, preserves. Yesterday they came with flowers.

The explanation: background of the picture is Behind the Iron Curtain. There, swains woo not with flowers but with food, rarer and more highly prized. The switch to flowers yesterday, the publicists explained, is to impress in the American manner.

Improved Tri-Color Video Tube Shown

An improved model of the Lawrence tri-color tube, now called the Chromatron Tube, was demonstrated here yesterday by Chromatic Laboratories, Inc., in which Paramount Pictures owns a 50 per cent interest.

The tube, currently designed for home television sets, gave an excellent performance within the limitations of the demonstration. The color definition and the color depth were excellent. Specially-made Kodochrome slides, used by the television industry for testing purposes, were utilized. The transmission was from a neighboring room.

Dick Hodgson, Chromatic president, said the purpose of the demonstration was to awaken interest in color TV and to show the television industry the type of tube available for mass production. The industry currently is under government controls rigidly confining the use of color television.

Hodgson said the tube, now made to operate in harmony with the Columbia Broadcasting color system, would be compatible with any color system adopted by the TV system. He estimated that the additional price to the consumer for a Chromatron tube set would be $50 over current TV set prices under a mass-production set-up and using the CBS color system. He said such a set would offer color and black-and-white reception. M. H.

"The Clown"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) Hollywood, Dec. 23

"THE CLOWN" of 1952 is "The Champ" of 1931 with Red Skelton and Tim Considine batting for the late Wallace Beery and the grown-up Jackie Cooper, and with the star playing an alcoholic comedian instead of an alcoholic boxer. Although the science of film production has progressed during the 21-year interval, and although there are differences in emphasis and incident, it is still in essence the Frances Marion story, adapted this time by Leonard Praskins (who wrote the dialogue for the 1931 picture), and scripted by Martin Rackin. There is, therefore, no good reason for doubting that the new picture will exert the same prosperous tear-jerking influence the old one did. The Hollywood preview experience argues that it will. The film was previewed blind at the Village Theatre in Westwood, a college community, and the flashing of the title and credits on the screen didn't get a ripple, but the tragic finish collected fervent applause. It would seem to follow that persons attracted by a Skelton billing would eat it up.

When the story opens, Skelton, a once-famous comedian, has drunk himself out of job after job but still is the idol of his son, played with simple directness by young Considine. Fired from an amusement park, Skelton is offered a minor booking but shows up drunk at the audition and loses out. The boy appeals to his former agent, whom Skelton has avoided since a break of his own making, and gets the comedian another booking which winds up disappointingly. On this occasion the boy's mother, divorced from Skelton some years and now remarried and well off, shows up and tells the boy her identity. Skelton is at first resentful but accepts money from her new husband for letting the boy see her, and then loses the money in a crap game. After being arrested for participation in a stag performance, Skelton forces his son to go to his mother, but the boy refuses to stay away, and is happy again as he helps Skelton prepare for a television program which is to open up for him a new career in show business. It does so (the program being, of course, identical with the real Skelton TV show), but the strain proves too much and the comedian dies following his successfull TV premiere.

The boy's mother is played by Jane Greer, the agent by Lorin Smith, and the cast also includes Philip Ober, Lou Lubin, Fay Roope, Walter Reed, Edward Marr, Jonathan Cott and Don Beddoe.

Although Skelton has two or three occasions in the course of the story to go into his typical comedy routines, these sequences are secondary to the straight-line story of comedian and son. William H. Wright produced, and Robert Z. Leonard directed.

Running time, 89 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 16.

"The I Don't Care Girl"

(20th Century-Fox) Hollywood, Dec. 23

MITZI GAYNOR herein gives a dazzling portrayal of the scintillating Eva Tanguay whose meteoric manner and footlighted showmanship brightened the Broadway and the hinterland of these United States in the infancy of the present century. Due to the march of science and invention, Miss Gaynor's music numbers are colorful and resplendent far beyond Miss Tanguay's originals, and ditto her costumes, etc., but this is all on the plus side of the balance sheet. The production is strictly in the tradition of the 20th Century-Fox musicals with color in Technicolor—light, glib, swift, tuneful, frankly fabricated as to story and neatly in the groove as to score—and figures to give traditional satisfaction. Besides Miss Gaynor and David Wayne, both of whom earned "Top Ten" ranking in Quigley Publications' "Stars-of-Tomorrow" poll of exhibitors for 1952, the cast supplies the name and talent of Oscar Levant for a showman to exploit. Likewise George Jessel, who is down as producer of the picture and plays himself in it (as producer of the picture), as well as sharing some of the song credits.

The prime strength of the production is in the musical numbers, which cover a wide range as to kind and presentation. First on the screen (before the title, even) is a chorus handling of the all-but-forgotten "Miss You." Later on "Beale Street Blues" is utilized in one of the hottest production numbers yet seen on the screen. At a couple of midpoints the pace is slowed down for the camera to closeup the keyboard while Levant performs classical solo numbers in his best concert manner. Anybody who doesn't like music in large and assorted doses has no business attending this picture.

Walter Bullock is credited with writing the script, which is a loose outlining of the era of show business in which Miss Tanguay was a reigning luminary, and it serves the purpose without getting overly earnest at any point. The cast, in addition to those named above, includes Bob Graham, Craigh Hill, Warren Stevens, Hazel Brooks, Marietta Canty, Sam Hearn, Wilton Graff, Dwayne Ratliff, Bill Foster and Gwyneth Verdon. Seymour Felix staged three of the production numbers on a scale and in a fashion he'll be hard pressed to top until and unless they start making musicals in Natural Color three-dimension.

Running time, 81 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

"Ruby Gentry"

(Bernhard-Vidor—20th Century-Fox)

JENNIFER JONES plays her role as Ruby Gentry, the compulsive, savage young lady of the swamplands, to the hilt, rendering a striking, though stylized characterization which should win this film a receptive audience. The accent of the story is on love, passion and violence. Although there is much unexplained in the delineation of the characters, there is sufficient action and violence on the screen to capture the interest of most audiences. With proper promotion, especially aimed at women, this film should do good business.

Impetuous Jennifer Jones is deeply enchanted with Charlton Heston, who plays the role of a young North Carolina gentleman whose family background blocks him from returning Ruby Gentry's love. Despite the clandestine affair between the two, Heston marries a young lady of social standing. In her loneliness and grief, Jennifer turns to an old friend and benefactor, Karl Malden, and marries him. Malden, almost twice the age of his wife, attempts to gain social acceptance of Ruby Gentry through the utilization of his wealth. This fails and the failure is doubly compounded by Malden's accidental death while boating with his wife. In revenge on the town that turned against her, Jennifer uses her deceased husband's wealth to wreck the leaders of the community, among them her ex-lover, Heston. The closing tempestuous scenes find Heston almost killing her in his wrath. However, it is he who is shot by Ruby Gentry's fanatical brother.

Others in the cast include Tom Tully, Bernard Phillips, James Anderson, Josephine Hutchinson and Phyllis Avery. Joseph Bernhard and King Vidor produced, while Vidor directed from a screenplay by Silvia Richards based on a story by Arthur Fitz-Richards.

Running time, 82 minutes. Adult audience classification. Release date, Dec. 23.

"My Cousin Rachel"

(20th Century-Fox) Hollywood, Dec. 23

THE readers of best-selling books, among which this novel by Daphne du Maurier recently was a distinguished leader, and the fans of Olivia de Havilland, a numerous and constant contingent, are the target groups likeliest to respond with enthusiasm to this fastidiously produced story about some landed gentry in England about 1840. For these, and for whatever other especially conditioned groups there may be within box-office range, this doubtless is an eminently satisfying motion picture. But for plain admission-buying Americans (Britishers may be different) the attraction stacks up as an extremely well made picture of little or no moment, a pleasant thing to look at but only in the mildest sense a dramatic experience. Its prospects for financial success on this side of the Atlantic, save in the class situations, are far less brilliant than the workmanship lavished upon it by the studio.

The production is beneficiary of the skilled hand of Nunnally Johnson, both as producer and as writer of the screenplay, and of the masterly direction of Henry Koster. The numerous and costly sets are of top calibre, and the photography by Joseph La Shelle makes the most of them. Miss de Havilland's performance is fine, as usual, although she is called upon for nothing that could be called a challenge to her art, and the many others in the large cast, none of whose names have marquee value of consequence, do well enough with the singularly colorless portrayals assigned them.

The production's damaging weakness is, oddly enough, the du Maurier story itself, which seems to have been one of those not infrequent instances of good reading which does not translate into good viewing. It concerns primarily a young Englishman whose cousin and guardian has died abroad after marrying a remote family relative and after writing a couple of letters during his last illness which arouse a suspicion that his wife may have done him in. Later on, the widow (Miss de Havilland) comes to England and the young man (Richard Burton) invites her to the family estate, despite his suspicions, and proceeds to fall in love with her. From this point on the tale piles up hints that (1) she is a murderess and (2) she is not a murderess, which is where matters stand when she falls to her death through a bridge on the property. The inconclusive ending is said to have been a characteristic of the novel, although handled a little differently, and it therefore has at least the virtue of fidelity to source. It is not, however, what may be termed "good movie," in this reviewer's opinion.

Running time 98 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

accident which stunted the growth of his legs. The accident turned him away from his aristocratic heritage, sending him into the streets of Paris where he sought refuge and a milieu in which his artistic talents could flower. Constantly thwarted in love because of his deformity, he takes up with a trollop, superbly played by Colette Marchand.

Toulouse-Lautrec, the midget who was a giant of a man, finally does find a woman who accepts him completely, but by this time he is so steeped in bitterness that he realizes it is too late. The woman who plays that role is Suzanne Flon, a model who takes to Toulouse-Lautrec out of loneliness and respect for his genius.

The impact of the final love tragedy proves too much for Toulouse-Lautrec, who destroys himself by intensifying his drinking. His death comes at a moment when the greatest recognition of his talents is given him in France.

Lightening the dark overtones, weaving in and out of the story, are the delightful dancers and singers of the "Moulin Rouge," the cafe made famous by Toulouse-Lautrec in his posters. Among them are Zsa Zsa Gabor, Katherine Kath, Rubert John, Muriel Smith and Walter Crisham. Jose Ferrer, in addition to playing the dwarfed artist, portrays the father of Toulouse-Lautrec, while his mother is portrayed by Claude Nollier. Others in the cast include Georges Lannes, Mary Clare, Harold Gasket, Lee Montague, Jill Bennet, Maureen Swanson and Jim Gerald. The screen play was by Anthony Veiller and John Huston, while the associate producer was Jack Clayton.

Running time, 123 minutes. Adult audience classification. For March release.

He predicted that large screen TV will serve one day in a manner which, if properly used, will treble previous theatre profits.

Loan Policy

that while interest rates to major companies are generally at or near the prime three per cent, independent producers pay six per cent or close to it. It is pointed out that despite "headache powders that are standard equipment" for the bank's Amusement Industries Division executives, losses over the years have not been out of proportion to the apparently high interest rates charged, so that the business has been satisfyingly profitable.

It is disclosed that Bankers Trust has loaned approximately $120,000,000 to the film business over the years. And now, with television making rapid strides, the company has moved to maintain its position as a leading show business bank. The Amusement Industries Division also has been delving into the financing of new TV stations. Permits for around 1,500 additional transmitting outlets eventually will be issued by the Federal Communications Commission. It is estimated that the cost of setting each one in business will average more than $500,000 and Bankers Trust plans to get them started.

The bank admits that all banks on both coasts dealing with independent production were "clipped" in the 1947-48 era and that Bankers Trust was among them. However, it is pointed out that because of a conservative loan policy, "it was hurt less than most of the others and wasn't, like some of its colleagues, scared right out of show business. It merely trimmed its sails to meet Hollywood's new economic weather conditions and went right on."

In 1947 and the following year, the picture industry suffered an unlooked-for slump and Bankers Trust claims that part of it was due to TV and part of it wasn't.

"In any event," the bank asserts, "loans that had to be paid in the future were being based on the experience of the past, and it just did not work out for some of the banks involved."

For that reason, the new policy was instituted, it is disclosed in an article prepared for the bank's house publication, The Pyramid, by Herb Golden of the bank's Amusement Industries Division.

Defer Decision on Denver TV Channel

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — Federal Communications Commission examiner James Cunningham said he would probably rule early in January on two competing applications for a Denver television channel. One of the applicants is Aladdin Radio and Television Co., in which Frank Ricketson, Jr., and Harry Huffman of Fox Intermountain Theatres, and Ted Gamble are the main stockholders. The other company seeking the station is Denver Television Co., in which Denver exhibitor John Wolfberg is the main stockholder. Extensive hearings on the competing applications have been concluded and Cunningham has the case under advisement. His decision will have to be confirmed by the Commission itself.

Hearings on competing applications for another Denver channel have been recessed until Jan. 13. One of the firms seeking this channel is KMYR Broadcasting Co., whose principal stockholder is Bob Hope.

SIG COHEN, our Boston Brisbane, nominates Abraham Spitz of Providence, Rhode Island, as the nation's oldest living motion picture theatre owner. "Abe" is observing his 100th birthday. Hearty Congratulations. . . . Young Frank Freeman, a pretty responsible person in Hollywood, speaking as board chairman of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, denounced, the other day, "irresponsible personal publicity agents" for "descending to the lowest level and bad taste" in causing publication of "salacious" photographic material in "some trade papers and some fan magazines." Mr. Freeman, name 'em!!!!!

To Kay Norton, vivacious publicity manager of RKO Radio Pictures' home office, we are indebted for the information that researchers working on the company's "Blackbeard the Pirate" (opening on Christmas Day at New York's Loew's State—free ad)—found that pirates were not battered and bewhiskered wrecks they are usually depicted as being. They didn't live that long; their average age was 19. . . . The bookkeepers at 20th Century-Fox were so close to hitting a mammoth mathematical coincidence: The corporation's gross income for the 39 weeks ended on Sept. 27, 1952, was $119,120,-437. The gross income for the same period in 1951 was $119,120,446.

We are making progress in this great motion picture industry. Universal, the other day, announced it will produce 36 pictures during 1952-53, and, we quote, "with entertainment values." . . . At RKO Radio Pictures' home office, the choir which has been practicing, "He's Back in the Saddle, Again," has worn out, oh, so many saddles. . . . The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures made these observations in reviewing Sam Goldwyn's splendiferous "Hans Christian Andersen": "Audiences will find this film too full of schmaltz . . . it includes some mildly pleasing songs and some well-photographed ballet (with a tough baby from France called Jeanmaire)."

TO YOU, Mr. Robert J. O'Donnell, may we nominate three co-chairmen to serve with you on your committee dedicated to make memorably happy the Golden Jubilee tribute to that Grand Old Man, Adolph Zukor:

MARY PICKFORD, who, after many bit parts in and around her native Toronto, under her family name of Glady's Mary Smith, and after more important parts in Belasco productions and some screen work for David Wark Griffith, in New York, became Mr. Zukor's first great star;

CECIL BLOUNT DEMILLE, Mr. Zukor's first great producer, who went from "The Squaw Man" in 1912 to "The Greatest Show on Earth"; and,

JESSE L. LASKY, who became one of Mr. Zukor's first business associates after he combed out from his then very full hirsute adornment the gold-dust from the gold-rush to Alaska in the early 1900's, and after he put down the horn that he tooted with a Honolulu band.

With the kind of branches that are spread around. Spread among exhibitors, and among distributors, and just spread all over the place. Could be.

C. Skouras Sees New Developments Boosting Business

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 23.—National Theatres president Charles P. Skouras today told 234 Fox West Coast Theatres executives, department heads, managers, bookers and buyers, "We are entering a new era in the motion picture theatre industry. It is one filled with optimism and one that will certainly bring people back to the movie going habit." Pointing out the potentialities in Cinerama, Ediphor, three-dimension and large screen theatre TV, Skouras said "We can look forward with confidence to better business in line with all these new developments."

FWC general manager George Bowser distributed checks representing bonuses, awards and insurance dividends to various members attending the annual Christmas meeting at the Ambassador Hotel here, and presented the Charles P. Skouras National Showman's plaque, together with a check for $250, to Robert Apple, manager of the Crest Theatre, Reno, Nevada.

Prior to the meeting FWC personnel received spiritual blessing at Saint Sophia's Orthodox Cathedral, built largely under Skouras' leadership, and witnessed a 90-minute pontifical liturgy service.

Drive-in Insurance Rates Increased

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 23.—Drive-in owners have been advised that casualty insurance rate increases, effective now, include a minimum hike of $5 on property damage ($1,000 dollar policy) and a minimum jump of $25 on liability ($5,000-$10,000), for mechanically operated amusement devices and pony rides, whether conducted by the owner or a concessionaire.

It is presumed that the number of damage claims made and paid on such devices and rides led the board of underwriters to ask for the increases. New York is not the only state affected, according to information here.

Bankers Trust Sets New Film Loan Policy

Calls for A $500,000 Maximum, 50% of Cost

By AL STEEN

Bankers Trust Co. of New York has evolved a three-cornered policy in making production loans to film producers, a policy which is said by the bank to be "about as foolproof as you can get in a business that's definitely not foolproof."

The policy in brief is (1) no loan of more than 50 per cent of production cost will be made, (2) no loan beyond $500,000 will be granted on a film and (3) no single-picture loans will be made. This means that a producer must come in with a program of at least two and preferably three pictures.

The loans are cross-collaterized so that in the event one film proves to be unprofitable, there is some assurance of success for the producer via profits on the others. It is explained

Say Dietrich Balks Over Status in RKO

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 23.—Failure of the RKO Pictures board of directors to elect Noah Dietrich, former board chairman, to the company presidency earlier this week, as had been expected, is attributed by observers here to a situation similar to that which impelled Ned E. Depinet, former company president, to decline the post two weeks ago, that is, unwillingness of the Howard Hughes' controlled board to delegate complete autonomy to the chief executive of the company.

Dietrich, it is believed, has balked at taking the post without assurances

Hopes for Repeal Bills In Hopper in 5 States

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Motion Picture Association of America will swing into action for legislation repealing existing film censorship laws in five states when their legislatures meet next year. An MPAA spokesman said here yesterday that the association hoped repeal bills would be introduced in New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Kansas and Ohio. A sixth state, Virginia, has set no 1953 sessions.

The MPAA's projected move for censorship repeal is regarded here as the next step in the association's continuing drive against state censorship. The manner in which action will be taken has not been defined, but it is presumed that it will be done through contacts with legislators. The association, itself, could not introduce the repeal bills.

It is expected that attention also

"Moulin Rouge"

[Romulus-United Artists]

ALL OF THE COLOR, excitement and energy of a rich segment of life has been captured in this portrayal of Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, the famed French artist of the Paris streets. His personality as depicted by Jose Ferrer under the imaginative direction of John Huston electrifies the screen. This is a picture which is among the best of the year and some of those participating in its production should be candidates for Academy Awards.

Paris of the 1880's, or more exactly, the Paris familiar to Toulouse-Lautrec, comes alive in this Romulus production, illuminating a tragic life against the gay, savage, emotional background of Paris nightlife. There are many entertainment values in this picture and they should pay off at the box-office.

The Can-Can girls, the night-life scenes, the prints of horse races and circuses, all of the familiar artistry of Toulouse-Lautrec, are interwoven in the story, and the color by Technicolor enhances their reproduction. There is sweep and depth in this picture which, in its 123 mintes, ranges through the life of a talented, sensitive individual who was swept by the currents of his period.

The tragedy of Toulouse-Lautrec was that he was dwarfed by a childhood

'Met' Poll Finds Public Favoring Theatre TV

An "overwhelmingly favorable response" by the public to theatre telecasts of operas was recorded in the poll taken by the Metropolitan Opera Company on the "Carmen" telecast, according to preliminary tabulation, it was learned here from a Theatre Network Television spokesman.

Thousands of persons who saw the Dec. 11 event—the first theatre TV entertainment program offered to the public—said they would like to see more of such telecasts, it was stated. In addition to the favorable responses recorded on a questionnaire distributed to the audiences of 30 theatres from Coast-to-Coast, there was some adverse comment too. It was explained that some individuals expressed criticism of the picture telecast.

A complete tabulation of the results of the survey is expected shortly. The spokesman for TNT, which acted as the production-distribution organization for the telecast, said the results were very encouraging. He declined to state whether TNT would offer additional operas this season.

AMPA Party Draws Packed House Here

Chairman was Chester Friedman. The guests were entertained by such personalities as Benny Fields, Boris Karloff and Joe E. Brown. Numbers for the prizes were drawn by Brown and Fields, the latter tying in the drawings with amusing episodes experienced in the filming of Paramount's "Somebody Loves Me," which depicted the lives of Fields and his wife, Blossom Seeley. Karloff thanked AMPA for what it had done for him publicity-wise.

The grand prizes were restricted to AMPA members only, the prizes consisting of vacations in Miami, Daytona Beach, Atlantic City and at Grossinger's.

Herring to Roses In RKO Press Play

The opening of "No Time for Flowers" at the Normandie Theatre here tomorrow has been preceded by a courtship of newsmen by RKO Radio publicists. One day they came bearing knockwurst, another day, herring; another, preserves. Yesterday they came with flowers.

The explanation: background of the picture is Behind the Iron Curtain. There, swains woo not with flowers but with food, rarer and more highly prized. The switch to flowers yesterday, the publicists explained, is to impress in the American manner.

Improved Tri-Color Video Tube Shown

An improved model of the Lawrence tri-color tube, now called the Chromatron Tube, was demonstrated here yesterday by Chromatic Laboratories, Inc., in which Paramount Pictures owns a 50 per cent interest.

The tube, currently designed for home television sets, gave an excellent performance within the limitations of the demonstration. The color definition and the color depth were excellent. Specially-made Kodochrome slides, used by the television industry for testing purposes, were utilized. The transmission was from a neighboring room.

Dick Hodgson, Chromatic president, said the purpose of the demonstration was to awaken interest in color TV and to show the television industry the type of tube available for mass production. The industry currently is under government controls rigidly confining the use of color television.

Hodgson said the tube, now made to operate in harmony with the Columbia Broadcasting color system, would be compatible with any color system adopted by the TV system. He estimated that the additional price to the consumer for a Chromatron tube set would be $50 over current TV set prices under a mass-production set-up and using the CBS color system. He said such a set would offer color and black-and-white reception. M. H.

"The Clown"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) Hollywood, Dec. 23

"THE CLOWN" of 1952 is "The Champ" of 1931 with Red Skelton and Tim Considine batting for the late Wallace Beery and the grown-up Jackie Cooper, and with the star playing an alcoholic comedian instead of an alcoholic boxer. Although the science of film production has progressed during the 21-year interval, and although there are differences in emphasis and incident, it is still in essence the Frances Marion story, adapted this time by Leonard Praskins (who wrote the dialogue for the 1931 picture), and scripted by Martin Rackin. There is, therefore, no good reason for doubting that the new picture will exert the same prosperous tear-jerking influence the old one did. The Hollywood preview experience argues that it will. The film was previewed blind at the Village Theatre in Westwood, a college community, and the flashing of the title and credits on the screen didn't get a ripple, but the tragic finish collected fervent applause. It would seem to follow that persons attracted by a Skelton billing would eat it up.

When the story opens, Skelton, a once-famous comedian, has drunk himself out of job after job but still is the idol of his son, played with simple directness by young Considine. Fired from an amusement park, Skelton is offered a minor booking but shows up drunk at the audition and loses out. The boy appeals to his former agent, whom Skelton has avoided since a break of his own making, and gets the comedian another booking which winds up disappointingly. On this occasion the boy's mother, divorced from Skelton some years and now remarried and well off, shows up and tells the boy her identity. Skelton is at first resentful but accepts money from her new husband for letting the boy see her, and then loses the money in a crap game. After being arrested for participation in a stag performance, Skelton forces his son to go to his mother, but the boy refuses to stay away, and is happy again as he helps Skelton prepare for a television program which is to open up for him a new career in show business. It does so (the program being, of course, identical with the real Skelton TV show), but the strain proves too much and the comedian dies following his successfull TV premiere.

The boy's mother is played by Jane Greer, the agent by Lorin Smith, and the cast also includes Philip Ober, Lou Lubin, Fay Roope, Walter Reed, Edward Marr, Jonathan Cott and Don Beddoe.

Although Skelton has two or three occasions in the course of the story to go into his typical comedy routines, these sequences are secondary to the straight-line story of comedian and son. William H. Wright produced, and Robert Z. Leonard directed.

Running time, 89 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, Jan. 16.

"The I Don't Care Girl"

(20th Century-Fox) Hollywood, Dec. 23

MITZI GAYNOR herein gives a dazzling portrayal of the scintillating Eva Tanguay whose meteoric manner and footlighted showmanship brightened the Broadway and the hinterland of these United States in the infancy of the present century. Due to the march of science and invention, Miss Gaynor's music numbers are colorful and resplendent far beyond Miss Tanguay's originals, and ditto her costumes, etc., but this is all on the plus side of the balance sheet. The production is strictly in the tradition of the 20th Century-Fox musicals with color in Technicolor—light, glib, swift, tuneful, frankly fabricated as to story and neatly in the groove as to score—and figures to give traditional satisfaction. Besides Miss Gaynor and David Wayne, both of whom earned "Top Ten" ranking in Quigley Publications' "Stars-of-Tomorrow" poll of exhibitors for 1952, the cast supplies the name and talent of Oscar Levant for a showman to exploit. Likewise George Jessel, who is down as producer of the picture and plays himself in it (as producer of the picture), as well as sharing some of the song credits.

The prime strength of the production is in the musical numbers, which cover a wide range as to kind and presentation. First on the screen (before the title, even) is a chorus handling of the all-but-forgotten "Miss You." Later on "Beale Street Blues" is utilized in one of the hottest production numbers yet seen on the screen. At a couple of midpoints the pace is slowed down for the camera to closeup the keyboard while Levant performs classical solo numbers in his best concert manner. Anybody who doesn't like music in large and assorted doses has no business attending this picture.

Walter Bullock is credited with writing the script, which is a loose outlining of the era of show business in which Miss Tanguay was a reigning luminary, and it serves the purpose without getting overly earnest at any point. The cast, in addition to those named above, includes Bob Graham, Craigh Hill, Warren Stevens, Hazel Brooks, Marietta Canty, Sam Hearn, Wilton Graff, Dwayne Ratliff, Bill Foster and Gwyneth Verdon. Seymour Felix staged three of the production numbers on a scale and in a fashion he'll be hard pressed to top until and unless they start making musicals in Natural Color three-dimension.

Running time, 81 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

"Ruby Gentry"

(Bernhard-Vidor—20th Century-Fox)

JENNIFER JONES plays her role as Ruby Gentry, the compulsive, savage young lady of the swamplands, to the hilt, rendering a striking, though stylized characterization which should win this film a receptive audience. The accent of the story is on love, passion and violence. Although there is much unexplained in the delineation of the characters, there is sufficient action and violence on the screen to capture the interest of most audiences. With proper promotion, especially aimed at women, this film should do good business.

Impetuous Jennifer Jones is deeply enchanted with Charlton Heston, who plays the role of a young North Carolina gentleman whose family background blocks him from returning Ruby Gentry's love. Despite the clandestine affair between the two, Heston marries a young lady of social standing. In her loneliness and grief, Jennifer turns to an old friend and benefactor, Karl Malden, and marries him. Malden, almost twice the age of his wife, attempts to gain social acceptance of Ruby Gentry through the utilization of his wealth. This fails and the failure is doubly compounded by Malden's accidental death while boating with his wife. In revenge on the town that turned against her, Jennifer uses her deceased husband's wealth to wreck the leaders of the community, among them her ex-lover, Heston. The closing tempestuous scenes find Heston almost killing her in his wrath. However, it is he who is shot by Ruby Gentry's fanatical brother.

Others in the cast include Tom Tully, Bernard Phillips, James Anderson, Josephine Hutchinson and Phyllis Avery. Joseph Bernhard and King Vidor produced, while Vidor directed from a screenplay by Silvia Richards based on a story by Arthur Fitz-Richards.

Running time, 82 minutes. Adult audience classification. Release date, Dec. 23.

"My Cousin Rachel"

(20th Century-Fox) Hollywood, Dec. 23

THE readers of best-selling books, among which this novel by Daphne du Maurier recently was a distinguished leader, and the fans of Olivia de Havilland, a numerous and constant contingent, are the target groups likeliest to respond with enthusiasm to this fastidiously produced story about some landed gentry in England about 1840. For these, and for whatever other especially conditioned groups there may be within box-office range, this doubtless is an eminently satisfying motion picture. But for plain admission-buying Americans (Britishers may be different) the attraction stacks up as an extremely well made picture of little or no moment, a pleasant thing to look at but only in the mildest sense a dramatic experience. Its prospects for financial success on this side of the Atlantic, save in the class situations, are far less brilliant than the workmanship lavished upon it by the studio.

The production is beneficiary of the skilled hand of Nunnally Johnson, both as producer and as writer of the screenplay, and of the masterly direction of Henry Koster. The numerous and costly sets are of top calibre, and the photography by Joseph La Shelle makes the most of them. Miss de Havilland's performance is fine, as usual, although she is called upon for nothing that could be called a challenge to her art, and the many others in the large cast, none of whose names have marquee value of consequence, do well enough with the singularly colorless portrayals assigned them.

The production's damaging weakness is, oddly enough, the du Maurier story itself, which seems to have been one of those not infrequent instances of good reading which does not translate into good viewing. It concerns primarily a young Englishman whose cousin and guardian has died abroad after marrying a remote family relative and after writing a couple of letters during his last illness which arouse a suspicion that his wife may have done him in. Later on, the widow (Miss de Havilland) comes to England and the young man (Richard Burton) invites her to the family estate, despite his suspicions, and proceeds to fall in love with her. From this point on the tale piles up hints that (1) she is a murderess and (2) she is not a murderess, which is where matters stand when she falls to her death through a bridge on the property. The inconclusive ending is said to have been a characteristic of the novel, although handled a little differently, and it therefore has at least the virtue of fidelity to source. It is not, however, what may be termed "good movie," in this reviewer's opinion.

Running time 98 minutes. General audience classification. For January release.

accident which stunted the growth of his legs. The accident turned him away from his aristocratic heritage, sending him into the streets of Paris where he sought refuge and a milieu in which his artistic talents could flower. Constantly thwarted in love because of his deformity, he takes up with a trollop, superbly played by Colette Marchand.

Toulouse-Lautrec, the midget who was a giant of a man, finally does find a woman who accepts him completely, but by this time he is so steeped in bitterness that he realizes it is too late. The woman who plays that role is Suzanne Flon, a model who takes to Toulouse-Lautrec out of loneliness and respect for his genius.

The impact of the final love tragedy proves too much for Toulouse-Lautrec, who destroys himself by intensifying his drinking. His death comes at a moment when the greatest recognition of his talents is given him in France.

Lightening the dark overtones, weaving in and out of the story, are the delightful dancers and singers of the "Moulin Rouge," the cafe made famous by Toulouse-Lautrec in his posters. Among them are Zsa Zsa Gabor, Katherine Kath, Rubert John, Muriel Smith and Walter Crisham. Jose Ferrer, in addition to playing the dwarfed artist, portrays the father of Toulouse-Lautrec, while his mother is portrayed by Claude Nollier. Others in the cast include Georges Lannes, Mary Clare, Harold Gasket, Lee Montague, Jill Bennet, Maureen Swanson and Jim Gerald. The screen play was by Anthony Veiller and John Huston, while the associate producer was Jack Clayton.

Running time, 123 minutes. Adult audience classification. For March release.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Questioned on prospects for introduction of the Eidophor large screen television in which his company is interested, Spyros Skouras while here said the system has a long way to go before it can be commercially applied on any wide scale. He predicted that large screen TV will serve one day in a manner which, if properly used, will treble previous theatre profits.

Loan Policy

that while interest rates to major companies are generally at or near the prime three per cent, independent producers pay six per cent or close to it. It is pointed out that despite "headache powders that are standard equipment" for the bank's Amusement Industries Division executives, losses over the years have not been out of proportion to the apparently high interest rates charged, so that the business has been satisfyingly profitable.

It is disclosed that Bankers Trust has loaned approximately $120,000,000 to the film business over the years. And now, with television making rapid strides, the company has moved to maintain its position as a leading show business bank. The Amusement Industries Division also has been delving into the financing of new TV stations. Permits for around 1,500 additional transmitting outlets eventually will be issued by the Federal Communications Commission. It is estimated that the cost of setting each one in business will average more than $500,000 and Bankers Trust plans to get them started.

The bank admits that all banks on both coasts dealing with independent production were "clipped" in the 1947-48 era and that Bankers Trust was among them. However, it is pointed out that because of a conservative loan policy, "it was hurt less than most of the others and wasn't, like some of its colleagues, scared right out of show business. It merely trimmed its sails to meet Hollywood's new economic weather conditions and went right on."

In 1947 and the following year, the picture industry suffered an unlooked-for slump and Bankers Trust claims that part of it was due to TV and part of it wasn't.

"In any event," the bank asserts, "loans that had to be paid in the future were being based on the experience of the past, and it just did not work out for some of the banks involved."

For that reason, the new policy was instituted, it is disclosed in an article prepared for the bank's house publication, The Pyramid, by Herb Golden of the bank's Amusement Industries Division.

The Tri-Opticon program, which requires special glasses, will open at the Telenews on Christmas Day for an indefinite run. The theatre will charge 98 cents during mornings, $1.25 after 1:00 P.M. and 50 cents at all times for children.

More than 600 celebrities of Hollywood and Broadway, social and civic leaders, and others attended the Victoria Theatre here last night for the world premiere of Hal Wallis' "Come Back, Little Sheba," starring Shirley Booth and Burt Lancaster.

As crowds pressed against police guard rails to glimpse arriving headliners, newsreel and press cameras recorded the event.

Defer Decision on Denver TV Channel

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23. — Federal Communications Commission examiner James Cunningham said he would probably rule early in January on two competing applications for a Denver television channel. One of the applicants is Aladdin Radio and Television Co., in which Frank Ricketson, Jr., and Harry Huffman of Fox Intermountain Theatres, and Ted Gamble are the main stockholders. The other company seeking the station is Denver Television Co., in which Denver exhibitor John Wolfberg is the main stockholder. Extensive hearings on the competing applications have been concluded and Cunningham has the case under advisement. His decision will have to be confirmed by the Commission itself.

Hearings on competing applications for another Denver channel have been recessed until Jan. 13. One of the firms seeking this channel is KMYR Broadcasting Co., whose principal stockholder is Bob Hope.

SIG COHEN, our Boston Brisbane, nominates Abraham Spitz of Providence, Rhode Island, as the nation's oldest living motion picture theatre owner. "Abe" is observing his 100th birthday. Hearty Congratulations. . . . Young Frank Freeman, a pretty responsible person in Hollywood, speaking as board chairman of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, denounced, the other day, "irresponsible personal publicity agents" for "descending to the lowest level and bad taste" in causing publication of "salacious" photographic material in "some trade papers and some fan magazines." Mr. Freeman, name 'em!!!!!

*To Kay Norton, vivacious publicity manager of RKO Radio Pictures' home office, we are indebted for the information that researchers working on the company's "Blackbeard the Pirate" (opening on Christmas Day at New York's Loew's State—free ad)—found that pirates were not battered and bewhiskered wrecks they are usually depicted as being. MARY PICKFORD, who, after many bit parts in and around her native Toronto, under her family name of Glady's Mary Smith, and after more important parts in Belasco productions and some screen work for David Wark Griffith, in New York, became Mr. Zukor's first great star;

CECIL BLOUNT DEMILLE, Mr. Zukor's first great producer, who went from "The Squaw Man" in 1912 to "The Greatest Show on Earth"; and,

JESSE L. LASKY, who became one of Mr. Zukor's first business associates after he combed out from his then very full hirsute adornment the gold-dust from the gold-rush to Alaska in the early 1900's, and after he put down the horn that he tooted with a Honolulu band.

Greetings to ALL: To those persons who have done so much for this industry; and greetings, too, to those who have not. With the kind of branches that are spread around. Spread among exhibitors, and among distributors, and just spread all over the place. Could be.

C. Skouras Sees New Developments Boosting Business

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 23. — National Theatres president Charles P. Skouras today told 234 Fox West Coast Theatres executives, department heads, managers, bookers and buyers, "We are entering a new era in the motion picture theatre industry. It is one filled with optimism and one that will certainly bring people back to the movie going habit." Pointing out the potentialities in Cinerama, Ediphor, three-dimension and large screen theatre TV, Skouras said "We can look forward with confidence to better business in line with all these new developments."

FWC general manager George Bowser distributed checks representing bonuses, awards and insurance dividends to various members attending the annual Christmas meeting at the Ambassador Hotel here, and presented the Charles P. Skouras National Showman's plaque, together with a check for $250, to Robert Apple, manager of the Crest Theatre, Reno, Nevada.

Prior to the meeting FWC personnel received spiritual blessing at Saint Sophia's Orthodox Cathedral, built largely under Skouras' leadership, and witnessed a 90-minute pontifical liturgy service.

Drive-in Insurance Rates Increased

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 23.—Drive-in owners have been advised that casualty insurance rate increases, effective now, include a minimum hike of $5 on property damage ($1,000 dollar policy) and a minimum jump of $25 on liability ($5,000-$10,000), for mechanically operated amusement devices and pony rides, whether conducted by the owner or a concessionaire.

It is presumed that the number of damage claims made and paid on such devices and rides led the board of underwriters to ask for the increases. New York is not the only state affected, according to information here.

Accurate Concise and Impartial

VOL. 72. NO. 122 NEW YORK, U. S. A., MONDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1952 TEN CENTS

Tradewise . . .

By SHERWIN KANE

AS Radio City Music Hall comes to its 20th anniversary, marked in this issue of MOTION PICTURE DAILY as has been its earlier anniversaries at each five-year milestone in the theatre's history, the Music Hall's claim to the title "Showplace of the Nation" is more secure than ever before.

In many ways the Music Hall is unique. A glance at some of the facts culled from its records shows why.

In 1951, a poor business year for most theatres, the Music Hall established a record gross of $6,811,769. On the basis of still incomplete figures, the gross for this year probably will set a new high for the theatre.

The average annual attendance is nearly 7,000,000 persons. The 20-year attendance at the Music Hall by the end of this year will be in the neighborhood of 123,000,000.

The 20-year gross for the theatre is estimated at $104,425,000.

One picture, "The Great Caruso," grossed $1,392,943 in 10 weeks at the Music Hall. Four others

Martin and Lewis Voted Top Money-Making Stars

The team of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis were the top "Money-Making Stars of 1952," having been voted into the No. 1 position by exhibitors in the Motion Picture Herald-Fame's 21st annual poll. Theatre operators—both circuit and independent—voting by confidential ballot strictly on box-office revenues had placed the duo in second place in the 1951 audit.

Martin and Lewis were followed by Gary Cooper, John Wayne, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, James Stewart, Doris Day, Gregory Peck, Susan Hayward and Randolph Scott, in that order, on the list of Money-Making Stars. The single newcomer to the "Top Ten" is Susan Hayward, although some of the others are returnees. She rose from 19th place in the 1951 poll to ninth position in 1952.

Gary Cooper, runner-up, is on the list for the 13th time, a record tied only by Bing Crosby. John Wayne,

Un-American Activities Committee Reviews Year

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — The House Un-American Activities Committee said today that if Communist efforts to infiltrate Hollywood had not been exposed, the screen would have become a medium for Communist propaganda.

The statement was made in the Committee's year-end report to Congress, reviewing recent hearings and investigations. It noted that in its film hearings last year and this year, it had received much better cooperation from individuals in the industry than during the earlier 1947 hearings.

The Committee report carefully avoided giving the industry too great a pat on the back, but at least it did not criticize the industry as did earlier reports.

In 1951, when hearings were re-

U. S. Sees Theatre Building Prospects

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—A Commerce Department survey of the economic outlook declared that "the largest volume of unfilled requirements" in the private building field was for social and recreational facilities such as theatres, dance halls, broadcasting studios, community houses and other structures.

The need for recreational facilities is due largely to government building curbs, the survey stated. It estimated over $3,000,000,000 of deferred building in this field.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Third-dimension projection will prove a box-office boon not only to indoor theatres but also to drive-ins during 1953, Harry Lamont, head of Lamont Theatres and president of the Albany TOA, believes.

Citing "the sensational business" being done by "Bwana Devil," Lamont said he expected it and two other third-dimensional films to be "available for drive-ins during the next year."

sumed, "the Committee experienced much fuller cooperation and assistance from individuals in and associated with the motion picture industry," the report declared. "As a result, the Committee ascertained that the Communist efforts to infiltrate this industry had been a full-scale and carefully planned operation and that the Communist Party had been successful in recruiting individuals in important and strategic positions in almost all phases of motion picture production. Had these Communist efforts gone unexposed, it is almost inevitable that the content of motion pictures would have been influenced and slanted and become a medium for Communist propaganda."

Financial Reservoir

The Committee said it also felt that as a result of its hearings, the extensive financial reservoir which had existed in Hollywood for Communist purposes has been greatly diminished.

The report urged "all fields of entertainment and culture to maintain a steadfast vigilance in order to avoid the possibility of further Communist infiltration into them." It announced that it still has a "number of witnesses" to be called in connection with the Hollywood investigation.

The Committee listed the names of 30 persons who had been one-time members of the Party and who, in testimony before the Committee, "have been of invaluable assistance to the Committee and the American people in supplying facts relating to Communist efforts and success in infiltrating the motion picture industry."

The list included Elia Kazan, Edward Dmytryk, Sterling Hayden, Larry Parks, Budd Schulberg, Frank Tuttle and Clifford Odets.

Others on the list were George Bassman, George Beck, Martin Berkeley, Lloyd Bridges, Richard Collins, Eve Ettinger, Bernyce Fleury, Eugene Fleury, Anne Ray Frank, Roy Huggins, Leon Janney, Fred Keating, Marc Lawrence, Isobel Lennart, Melvin Levy, Paul Marion, David Raksin, Stanley Roberts, Meta Reis Rosenberg, Bernard C. Schoenfeld, Leo Townsend, Owen Vinson and Elizabeth Wilson.

The report noted that Bridges, Janney and Keating had all admitted former Party membership in executive session statements, and that their testimony had not yet been made public.

grossed more than $1,150,000 in runs of eight to 11 weeks.

During the last Christmas-New Year's holiday week, "I'll See You in My Dreams" grossed a record $180,068 in seven days. "Ivanhoe," in one non-holiday week, grossed $175,958.

The Music Hall has played 425 feature pictures since its opening 20 years ago. Of these, 317 were played during the first 10 years and 108 during the second 10 years.

In 1946, the Music Hall used only eight feature films; in 1945, nine; in 1944 and this year, 10; in 1943, 1947 and 1951, it used 11.

In its early years, before its present policy had been established, the Music Hall used almost four times as many films as in recent years. In 1933, it used an all-time high of 46; in 1934, it used 43, and in 1935, 40. From 1936 on, the drop in feature film consumption was sharp and continuous.

Numerically, RKO Radio provided the Music Hall with the most films over the 20-year period; a total of 115 features which consumed 221 weeks and five days of playing time. MGM has furnished 71 features which have used 319 weeks of playing time, including the run, to date, of the current "Million Dollar Mermaid."

Other product suppliers and their playing time include: Columbia, 63 pictures; 131 weeks running time; 20th Century-Fox, 62 features, for 104 weeks and four days; United Artists, 48 features, for 94 weeks; Warner Brothers, 28 features, for 67 weeks; Universal, 20 features, for 36 weeks and three days; Paramount, 14 features, for 55 weeks.

Pandro Berman is the leading producer of pictures booked by the Music Hall, with 28. David Selznick has 11; Arthur Freed 10. John Cromwell, with 17 pictures, is the leading director on the Hall's books. Alexander Hall has 11, and John Ford, 10.

Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers are tied for first as the female stars of the greatest number of pictures to play the Hall—22 each. However, Greer Garson's 11 starring vehicles at the Hall had the longest playing time for any female star, 65 weeks.

Cary Grant ranks as the male star who has appeared in the most Music Hall pictures, and for the most playing time—21 pictures which ran 68 weeks. Walter Pidgeon was in eight which ran 45 weeks and Spencer Tracy in 12 which ran 41 weeks.

These wholly statistical facts are but one phase of the story that proves the Radio City Music Hall unique. The other is the great organization, directed by Russell V. Downing, which meticulously maintains the high standards of entertainment and service in the Music Hall's distinguished setting. That story is told elsewhere in this issue.

worldwide 1952 revenues from film rentals, it was said. Foreign film rentals for the calendar year are running about eight per cent higher than last year, also absorbing some decline in 1952 domestic film rentals.

Last year, the income from film rentals was $92,489,357, both domestic and foreign. Theatre receipts for 1951 were $58,169,152. Net profit was $4,308,431.

With the company splitup as of last Sept. 27 into separate production-distribution and exhibition firms according to the terms of the consent decree, there are no comparable figures for net earnings this year. In its last report for the 39 weeks ended Sept. 27, which covered operations before the split-up, the company disclosed consolidated net earnings of $2,768,191 and a special credit of $1,077,755. This compared with net earnings of $2,147,628 for the 39-week period ended Sept. 29, 1951.

30 Cleve. Theatres In Pre-Xmas Closing

Cleveland, Dec. 28.—Thirty independently owned subsequent run houses, representing 50% of the theatres in this classification in Greater Cleveland, closed Monday through Wednesday before Christmas. This is the first time such a wide sweeping policy including the largest and newest theatres, has ever been adopted. In previous years many theatres closed Christmas Eve to give their employees one holiday night with their families.

The three-day closing was not a concerted action on the part of exhibitors but was instituted on the basis of individual theatre lack of attendance. All reopened Christmas Day with new programs.

maid" and the traditional Christmas stage show is expected to top $180,000, the sturdy figure realized last year during Christmas week. The estimate is based on pre-Christmas business at the Hall, which unlike most other theatres, picks up a few weeks before the holiday with the introduction of the Christmas show.

At the Victoria, a tremendous $12,500 was chalked up for the first two days of "Come Back, Little Sheba," leading Paramount officials to predict that the first week of the film will break the house record of $57,000 set by "Joan of Arc."

Other sturdy product, highlighted by "Ruby Gentry," at the Mayfair; "April in Paris," at the Paramount, and "Hiawatha," at the Bijou, was introduced along Broadway for the holidays with a commensurate boost in business. Other holiday fare which drew many customers was the in-person appearance of Johnnie Ray at the Capitol, coupled with "Against All Flags" as the screen attraction, and "My Cousin Rachel" at the Rivoli.

Thousands of couples, accompanied by their children, flocked to see "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris. Also doing brisk business was the newly-reopened Roxy, currently featuring "Stars and Stripes Forever," and "Icecolorama" on stage. "Limelight" at the Astor and at the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux also did quite well.

'Look' Features 'Herald-Fame' Poll

The Jan. 13 issue of Look Magazine, which will be on the newsstands tomorrow, will carry a three-page pictorial layout on the Motion Picture Herald-Fame 21st annual exhibitor poll results of the top box-office stars of the year. Titled "America's Favorite Movie Stars," the three pages are devoted to photos of present and past winners, with their ranking positions in previous polls.

after holding the No. 1 spot in the two previous years, was in third place, possibly due to the fact that he was seen less often during the year than was good for his poll standing. Bing Crosby climbed a notch from his 1951 position, taking fourth place, but he shares with nobody the record of five consecutive years in the No. 1 slot (1944-48 inclusive).

Hope jumped from sixth to fifth place and is on the "team" for the 12th time, taking first place in 1949. Stewart is in the Top Ten for the second time, finishing sixth, while Miss Day, in seventh place, is up two stations from last year's ninth, which was her initial appearance on the list. Peck, finishing eighth, duplicates his standing in the 1947 poll.

The Herald observes that the fluctuations of box-office fame are singularly slight from year to year. Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, 11th in the 1952 poll, although eighth in the independent exhibitors' column, have seven Top Ten placements, including a No. 1 in 1941. Esther Williams, 12th in the present listing, although 10th in the circuit theatres' column, was eighth in both the 1949 and 1950 polls. The most striking shift of poll positions is that of Betty Grable, who was third in 1951, and dropped to 20th this year. The repeated suspensions she drew from her studio are reported to have accounted for the dip.

Winners in the Western film category are Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, Rex Allen, Bill Elliott, Tim Holt, Gabby Hayes, Smiley Burnette, Charles Starrett, Dale Evans and William Boyd. Fluctuations in this department are even slighter, with Rogers leading the parade for the 10th consecutive year.

British exhibitors participated in the poll, casting votes in three groups; the top money-making British players, international players, and Western stars, respectively.

The British performers ranked in the following order: Ronald Shiner, Alastair Sim, Alec Guinness, Anthony Steel and Jack Hawkins (tied), Richard Todd, Nigel Patrick, Jack Warner, Anna Neagle, Trevor Howard and Glynis Johns.

In the international bracket, the winner was Bob Hope, followed by Gregory Peck, Betty Hutton, Martin and Lewis, John Wayne, Mario Lanza, James Mason, James Stewart, Doris Day and Humphrey Bogart.

The Westerns' leaders were Gary Cooper, Randolph Scott, James Stewart, Roy Rogers, John Wayne, Rod Cameron, Alan Ladd, Gene Autry, Jeff Chandler and Clark Gable.

came from members of the executive board of Texas COMPO, who attended a special meeting here. Among them were Karl Hoblitzelle, founder and president of Interstate Circuit; Col. H. A. Cole, chairman of the board of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas and national chairman of the COMPO tax repeal campaign; Ed Rowley, president of Rowley United Theatres; H. J. Griffith, president of Theatre Enterprises, and Claude Ezell, president of Ezell and Associates.

Cole stated, "We have every reason to believe that our efforts in the tax repeal campaign will bear fruitful returns to the industry during the coming year, but this will represent only a partial solution to our problems. The new year will see our thoughts directed toward establishing inter-industry harmony with the introduction of an incentive selling program which will benefit both exhibition and distribution. This will require a cooperative spirit and a period of experimentation to prove its value, and I feel that Texas will be the testing grounds for this important project."

Rowley cited Cinerama as "a milestone in the progress" of the industry and envisioned the need for a transition in the industry to harness the new medium.

Griffith forecast that a successful outcome of the tax repeal campaign would mean the salvation for thousands of theatres and a more stabilized industry. Ezell predicted that drive-ins were headed for the most prosperous year in their history.

Phil Isley, president of Isley Theatres and president of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, condemned the Department of Justice's 16mm. suit seeking the release of feature films to TV stations, among other things.

the 20th Anniversary of

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL

TWO decades ago comedians in a Broadway musical review were making merry over what they referred to as "Young John D's Folly." Their reference was to the institution created through the vision and enterprise of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., which has since become world-famous as the Radio City Music Hall.

The Music Hall was inaugurated in the midst of the Great Depression and the inaugural program, unhappily in tune with the spirit of the day, was not without various depressive aspects. But that was only the starting point. The best laugh—the last laugh—was yet to come.

In the succeeding years this institution, endowed with a physical plant and character never previously realized, and enjoying a sponsorship of vision, taste and initiative, has gone on to establish for itself a unique status in the amusement world. It is doubtlessly the most widely known theatre of the day. It numbers among its public an army of regular and devoted patrons residing in the New York area, and it is the top-of-the-list place to go for great numbers of visitors from points throughout this country and from overseas. It has solidly built a reputation of even greater value than the physical values of the enterprise.

¶ The rise of the Music Hall to its position of eminence was first under the guidance of the masterful hand of the late W. G. Van Schmus, and ably continued by his immediate successor, Mr. Gus S. Eyssell, who went on from the Music Hall post to his present position as president of Rockefeller Center, Inc. The successful tradition is now continuing under Mr. Russell V. Downing, president and managing director.

The Music Hall is an institution of the amusement industry which reflects substantial credit upon the industry at large. Its twentieth anniversary is an appropriate occasion for an acknowledgment of this obligation and for the offering of hearty congratulations to the management and to the numerous personnel which constitute the Music Hall family.

GUS, RUSS AND LEO A VERY HAPPY TRIO!

It is a matter of extreme pride that you selected M-G-M's great Technicolor musical "MILLION DOLLAR MERMAID" for your Anniversary Picture. We are delighted that it is such a sensational attraction.

And starting the 21st year of your famed show shop, what an honor to present "THE BAD AND THE BEAUTIFUL." This powerful M-G-M drama is already talked about as a strong contender for the Academy Award and sure-fire for the Ten Best List of 1953.

We can assure you that there are many other M-G-M attractions of Music Hall quality coming in the months ahead.

We take pardonable pride in the part you have permitted us to play in the 20 years you are now celebrating. May we look back briefly over those years:

> M-G-M had 5 of the 10 top grossing pictures, more than any other company ("The Great Caruso," "Ivanhoe," "Show Boat," "Random Harvest," "Valley of Decision"). M-G-M had the top grosser of all time "The Great Caruso." M-G-M had the co-holder of the longest run record, 11 weeks for "Random Harvest." 71 M-G-M pictures played the Hall for the greatest number of weeks of any company. During the year 1952 now concluding, M-G-M had 62% of Music Hall playing time.

Happy Anniversary to the great institution of Radio City Music Hall which has brought honor and prestige to this industry and may it be the privilege of Leo the Lion to roar from its giant screen for years to come.

from Biggest to Greatest...

...telling the story of Radio City Music Hall through two decades

By TERRY RAMSAYE

THE TWENTIETH anniversary of the Radio City Music Hall is a signal occasion for all the institution of the motion picture, art and industry. Standing there in New York's mid-town, its event of Now, taking provocation from the yesterdays, constructively pertains more importantly to encouragement for the tomorrows.

When the Music Hall was opened December 27, 1932, those two decades ago, with much pomp and ceremony, it was the world's biggest theatre. In the years since, it has come by ordeal and experience to be the world's greatest theatre.

Through steps of evolution and the adventures of the hectic career of the problem-beset motion picture, this theatre has become and is today a looming beacon on a headland, shining through the pessimism and questioning that float across an industry burdened with adjustment to the new order, and disorder, of the day.

There are facts.

The Music Hall's flowing successes, continuous across the television invasion, its accompanying fevers, and other rising competitions for the entertainment dollar, have set significant tide marks of motion picture box-office values in genuine ledger figures:

"Sunset Boulevard," 1950—7 weeks, $1,015,000 . . . "Show Boat," 1951—8 weeks, $1,160,000 . . . "The Great Caruso," 1951—10 weeks, $1,392,000 . . . "The Greatest Show on Earth," 1952—11 weeks, $1,335,000 . . . "Ivanhoe," 1952—8 weeks, $1,290,000.

J. D. Rockefeller, Jr.
Founder of
Rockefeller Center

It is to be noted that these pictures, along with the rest of the presentations of the Music Hall screen, were selected out of projection room judgments, inevitably in pursuit of a policy. It is a firm policy which pertains as much to maintaining an institution for its continuing career as to selling the seats for tonight's show.

Those high gross figures are impressive and important as denoting that flow of seven to eight millions of customers which come each year to fill those 6200 seats, often to the capacity of the house.

While we are among the statistics, it is appropriate to record again that the Music Hall has the biggest indoor screen, 70 by 40 feet, a throw from projection ports to screen of 190 feet, and a stage so long that it takes a row of 46 precision dancers, the Rockettes, to stretch across it. Also after twenty years of operation, it is the newest of theatres, with an interior of luxury and unostentatious elegance, with sheer size and scale the principal assertion of grandeur. If the gregarious impulse and the sense of audience participation are factors of a show, in the Music Hall they get it. It was built big, but it had to grow great.

This quality of newness is maintained by a continuous process of modernizations and refurbishments in detail. The patron gets nowhere a suggestion of obsolescence, no spots worn through, nothing obviously repaired. It maintains the perfections of an opening night, from the lush carpet trod by those millions of feet, to an overall spotlessness. Incidentally that carpet runs between the seats with its tactile impress of luxury—and probably subtle satisfaction to the foot-tired ladies who like to slip off their shoes and yield in relaxed comfort to the entertainment.

The operation and all its policies start with the customer, addressed at the big middle class of solvent Americans, observant of their tastes and public proprieties, when assembled under each other's eyes.

Exploiting Distinction

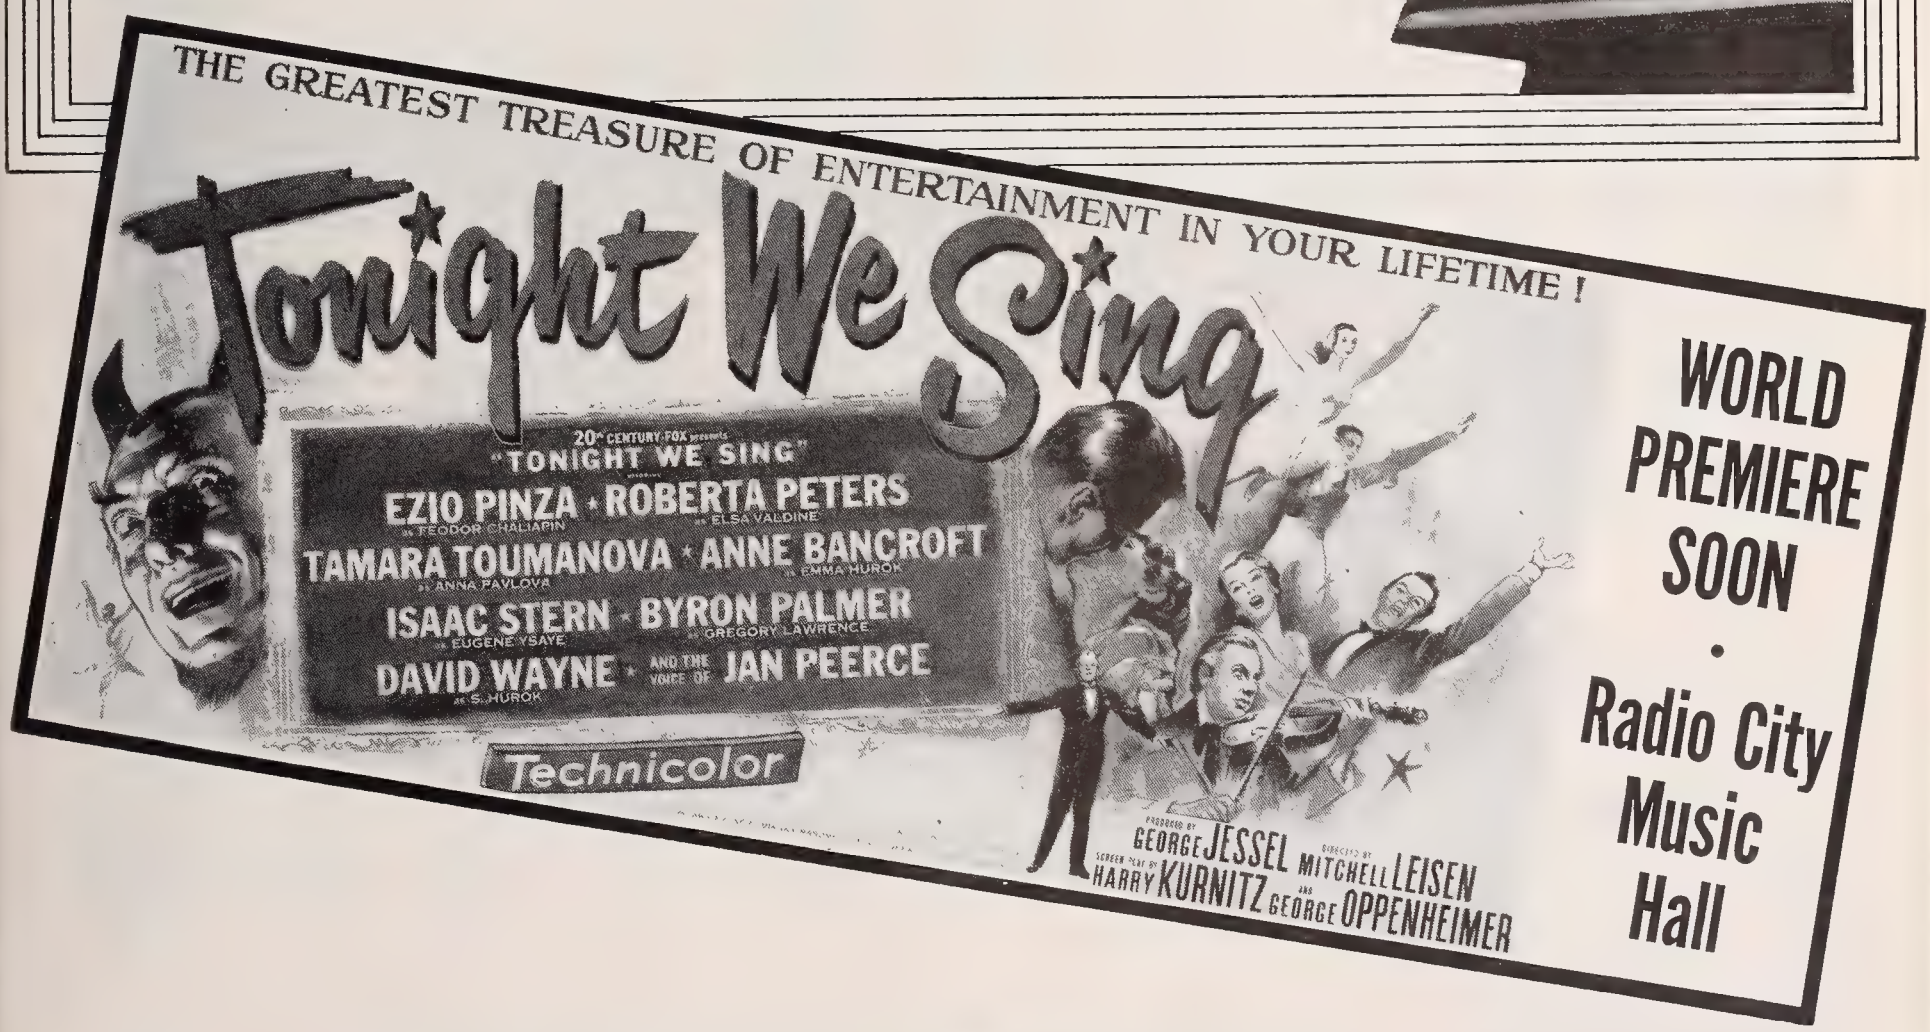
The process of address to that Music Hall public became conspicuous to the observer in its avoidance of the promotional antics and publicity high pitches which so often and conspicuously affect the metropolitan scene and the frenetics of Broadway.

There are no parades with prancing drum majors, no balloons, no skywriters, no sniping, window cards and throwaways. The Music Hall's large staff of creative artists of note and fame do not have their names bestrewn across the gossip columns, nor are they photographed at the night clubs and hot spots.



The basic audience is drawn from a fifty-mile circle around Rockefeller Center, and

FROM 20 CENTURY-FOX

There's No Business Like 20 Century-Fox Business!

"THE HALL'S" HEAD MAN

RUSSELL V. DOWNING, president and managing director of Radio City Music Hall, has spent his entire career in show business as an officer of the world's premiere theatre. As the Music Hall marks its 20th anniversary, Downing's personal 20th anniversary in show business and in the service of the theatre is not far distant.

Downing joined the Music Hall executive organization as treasurer in October, 1933. In 1942 he was elected vice-president and treasurer of Radio City Music Hall Corp. and Center Theatre Corp. He was named executive vice-president of both companies on June 1, 1948, and became president and managing director of the Music Hall last March. In November he was elected a member of the board of directors of Rockefeller Center, Inc., in addition to his other positions.

Apart from the brief, early period during which the operating policy of the Music Hall was in a state of flux, when S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel and Harold B. Franklin, successively, were in charge, the world's greatest showplace has had but three managing directors. Preceding Downing in that capacity were the late W. G. Van Schmus and Gus S. Eyssell. The latter is chairman of the board of the Music Hall Corporation now and also holds the post of president of Rockefeller Center, Inc.

Downing was born in Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 11, 1900. He attended local public schools; then the Wharton School of Commerce of the University of Pennsylvania. He was in officers' training at Camp Zachary Taylor for a time during World War I and returned to schooling at Columbia University. His early business experience included the posts of treasurer of the Prudence Co., assistant treasurer of Holmes Products, assistant treasurer of Magazine Repeating Razor Co. and assistant to the president of Tidewater Oil Sales Corp.

As part of his administrative duties as head of the Music Hall, Downing makes frequent journeys to Hollywood for the purpose of previewing the best of the newly completed film product and also to view rushes of other productions which promise to meet the Music Hall's high standards for bookings. In both film and stage presentations the Music Hall's cardinal policy may be described as clean entertainment for the whole family. That, and an inflexible policy of good, honest service to the public have been the keys to the great theatre's 20 years of success.

In both his long service to the Music Hall and his still brief tenure as its chief executive officer, Downing has proved himself an able custodian of those policies and an administrator eminently capable of ensuring the further success of the Radio City Music Hall as the world's pre-eminent theatre.

a very considerable proportion comes from all that endless flow of some three or four hundred thousand visiting out-of-towners.

It is probably as much a Center influence as it was the late Fiorello La Guardia who sought to make Sixth Avenue the Avenue of the Americas. If that name is ever actually accepted by the public it may be credited to the Music Hall. It daily makes that Fiftieth street corner the center of an international concourse. They come from everywhere, with the Music Hall the best known theatre around the world.

G. S. Eyssell, president of Rockefeller Center, chairman of Music Hall

Back of the Music Hall is the somewhat more than atmospheric influence of the institutionality of the House of Rockefeller, so extensively integrated with far flung and extensive financial, industrial influences and participation in social causes all over the globe. The impress is upon it. Also it may be observed that the Music Hall constitutes the most vitally intimate, direct and daily contact of the Rockefeller institution with the public, the people in person. There is stature and responsibility not shared by any other theatre.

It is to be remembered that the great theatre now known as the Music Hall went into the Rockefeller Center-Radio City design originally to create a sort of splendid boutonniere for the big real estate project. It was, as many know, to have been a new home for the grandiose Metropolitan Opera. That went a-glimmering in social politics. Radio influences, with ill-fated design to become important in the motion picture through the much merged RKO—remember that "Titan" advertising campaign—found opportunity. It took over the theatre as it emerged from blue prints and therein installed the great Roxy. It was Roxy, grown too great for the screen who gave the house its initial vaudeville policy, when vaudeville was all but dead, for that debacle program of the opening all the night of the December 27, 1932. The bill, which included most everything from Ray Bolger to extracts from Carmen, complete with horses on stage, ran on till 3 o'clock in the morning of December 28th. At the final curtain there were as many on stage as there were in the audience.

From Bust to Business

One of the amazements of the occasion was the fact that this vast, chaotic, costly opening program had never been put through a rehearsal!

It is to be recorded today that the management of the theatre as of then could not reach a bookkeeping accounting of that opening show. It was conceived in a chaos of dreams, and bought free-hand, without budget, without requisitions, authorizations, by telephone and across luncheon conversations, from here to the capitals of Europe.

Today the cost of that opening is unknown and always will be. It has been deemed absurdly unimportant to analyze the details of what required a single entry—"A bust complete."

Several things happened in sequel. RKO was in other difficulties a-plenty, and an expedition the next morning, right after breakfast, raised half a million dollars assistance from a Rockefeller office, the sympathetic but perturbed landlord. Presently, while it was still a leasehold operation, a grey haired gentleman, W. G. Van Schmus, appeared about back stage and elsewhere silently observing. Word percolated in time that he was "a Rockefeller man." He was, in fact, an industrial and public relations expert of Chicago background, recommended into the picture by the late Ivy Lee, of public relations counsel and much fame thereby in the Rockefeller service.

That vast Rockefeller operation could not accept such a conspicuous debacle in the limelight of the Center's greatest challenge to public attention. With understandable reluctance Mr. Rockefeller was defensively brought into the show business. One may be assured that in so coming, he was not trying to get rich.

Metaphorically, the Music Hall was still tremendous, but like an iceberg—mostly under water.

It is necessary to have this recalled to give perspective to the status of the Hall at this anniversary of 1952. The way up started with many difficulties. The situation had been precipitated by undisciplined ardors of showmanship and the collaborations of men and forces with designs of personal glory and profit, with small measure of the larger scene.

Soon it was clear that only the motion picture was big enough both in physical dimension and supply to continuously serve that tremendous auditorium and its vast proscenium. Ranking pictures was a problem. The Music Hall and RKO shared the hostility of a film industry which looked askance at radio and its leadership bent on invasion. There was no sympathy.

The situation was to be met only by quiet strategy and the application of the patient genius of commonsense. With "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" the week of January 11, 1933, the Music Hall entered upon a motion picture policy, with more policy than pictures. Prestige and buying power were far in the distance.

March 13, Mr. Van Schmus took over. The Rockefeller interest had acquired its lease of the Music Hall by a quiet process tantamount to a foreclosure, and RKO was going through that benevolent order of receivership known as "77-B".

The problem in hand was the building of the creative departments relating to the stage numbers and all the complex of functions behind them, and the establishment of a supply of screen entertainment. The quest of films was a large problem for a theatre with no status. It was to take years for the Music Hall to establish, by performance, the standing which gave it call on top rank pictures from skeptical and jealous production-exhibition competitors. It was no royal road.

Enter Two Young Men

Two young men in the reconstituted Music Hall organization in that difficult 1933 were to prove figures of destiny. The canny Van Schmus found his concept of policy ably aided by Gus S. Eyssell, who joined in January of 1933, bringing experience of exhibition on major assignments across the land from his native Kansas City to Los Angeles, to New York and way stations, under Paramount auspices. He knew a lot about who and what and why within the esoterics of movieland—if you know what I mean, and you do. He spoke softly and passed the ammunition.

Concurrently there appeared most unostentatiously what the industry would call "a figure man." This was, and surely is, Russell V. Downing, who came to what is a highly important desk in any Rockefeller organization, treasurer and comptroller, in 1933. To borrow a phrase from Ben Franklin, those Rockefellers are positively superstitious about figures. So is Mr. Downing, possibly more then than now, because there were so many ghosts among them way back then.

About Gus Eyssell you know, and how he came along to succeed the late Mr. Van Schmus to become president and managing director of the Music Hall and has since moved on to become president of Rockefeller Center, Inc., becoming the while chairman of the board of the Music Hall Corporation. That made him unique as a big business executive, alumnus of movieland. This recognition that capacity for the functions of weighty concerns of wide-based American enterprise can evolve in and be demonstrated against the complex and frenetic background of movies and entertainment was reiterated only the other day, November 7th, when Mr. Downing was elected a member of the board of Rockefeller Center, Inc.

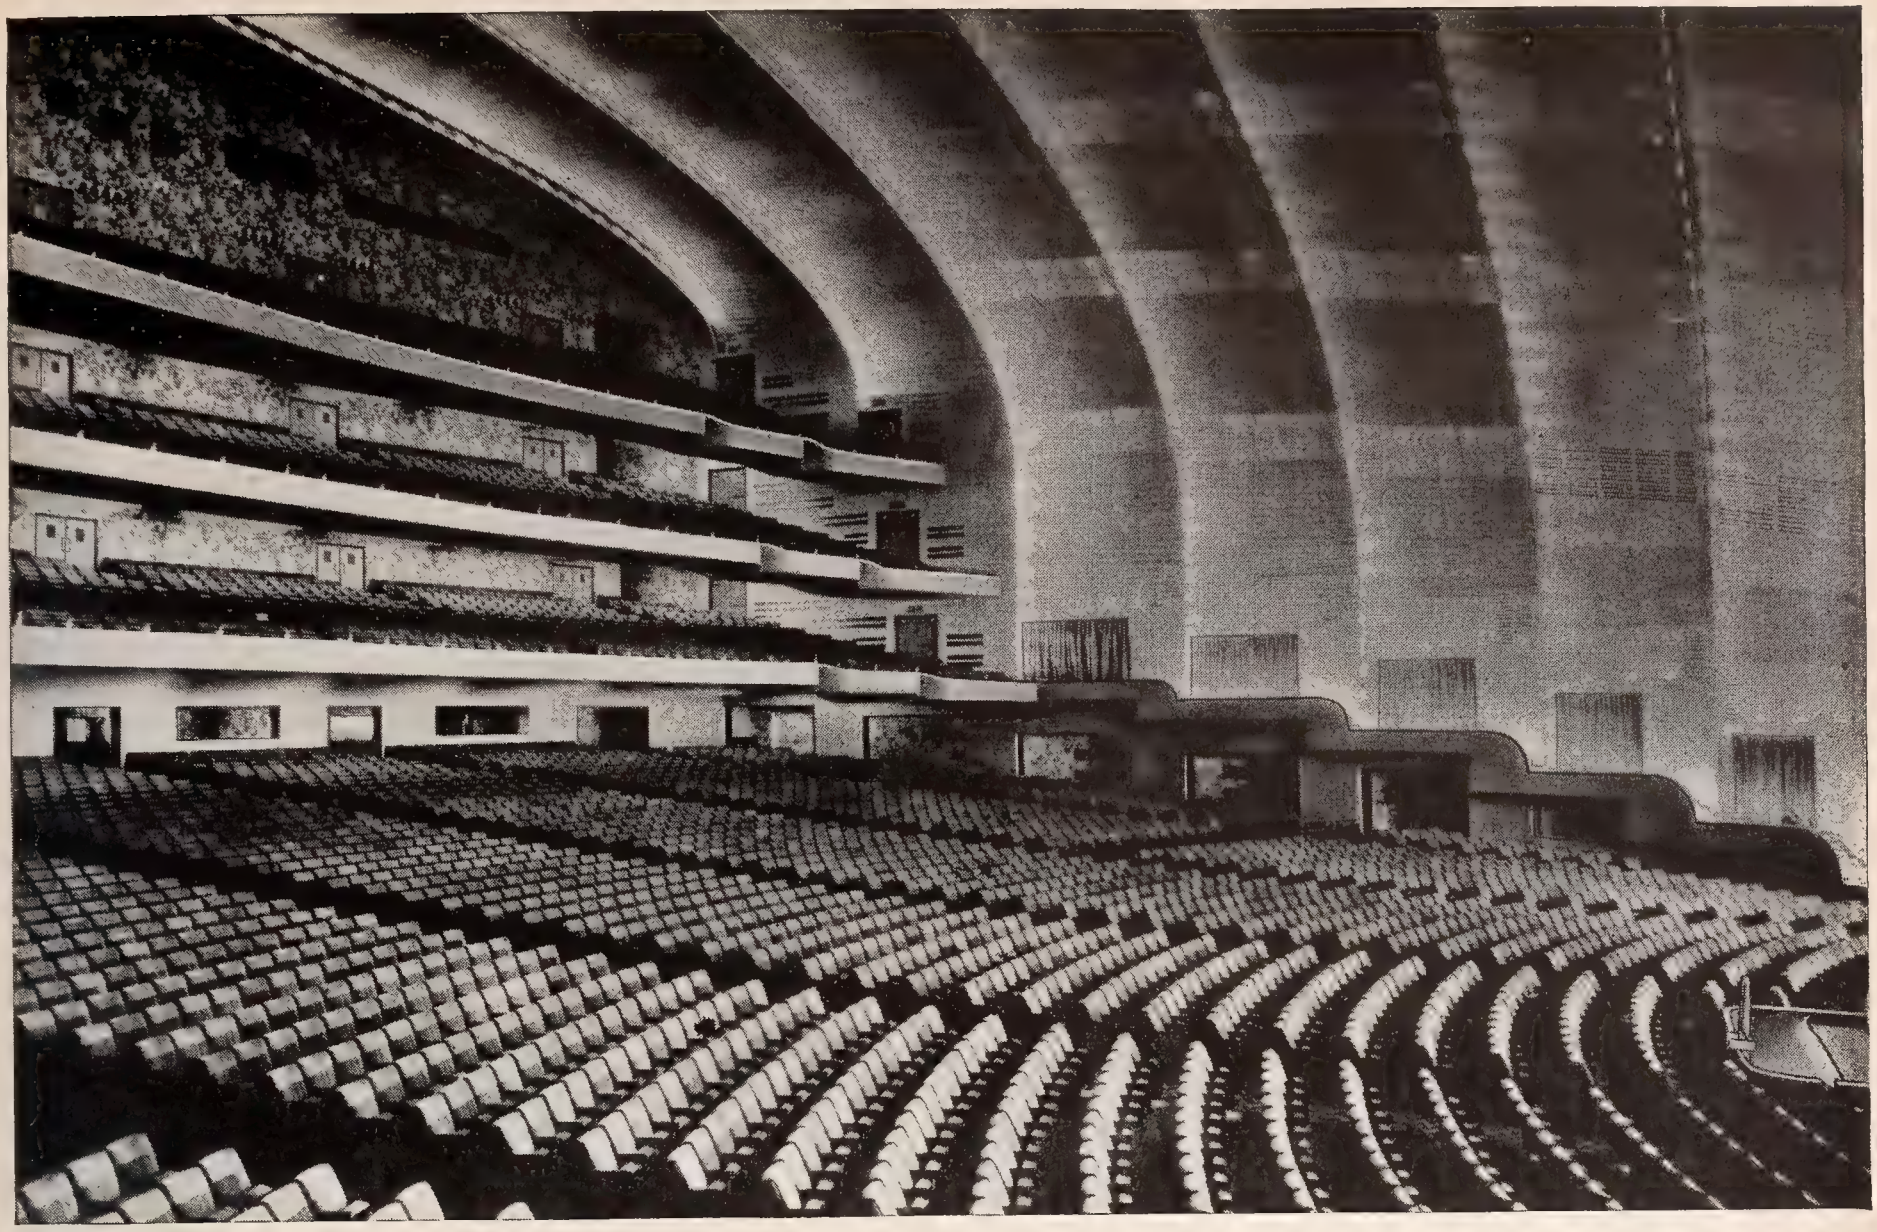
This Downing, like the Van Schmus, came from the outer world of industry with an abundant background of varied industrial and financial experience in posts which denoted his capacity as a man of facts, deliberation and action. He was by temperament and position a specially well placed observer of what went on and why and who did it, with what consequences. He was on his way up—vice-president in 1941, executive vice-president in 1948. Then Gus Eyssell, brought to recognition for his participation in the rise of the Music Hall, was made the president of Rockefeller Center, Inc., and moved into the observant post of chairman of the Music Hall board.



So it came that this man-with-the-facts, Russell Downing, moved into the presidency of the theatre corporation. This came about by a process as suave as an overlap dissolve in the films.

Those million dollar statistics of his incumbency, cited at our beginning, are attest to the most conspicuous aspect of the operation. They do not convey report directly, however, on the painstaking process of selection, those studies of production in process, inquiring excursions to Hollywood, endless screenings and evaluations, and the problems of availability-dates and timing which concern this tireless pursuit of facts, facts, facts. All this to be carried on, mind you, with executive attentions the while to the co-ordination of sensitive creative departments in such matters as stage craft, choreography, a great orchestra, and the very important and exactingly continuous functioning of theatrical housekeeping.

Mr. Downing, like many deliberative men, smokes a pipe, a slow burning briar, in interludes of long thoughts. He has more on his mind than on his desk. He has to take measure of several million minds—the customers, also a staff of 600, and I.B.M. has no machine for that, yet.

With the operation dependent on ten or eleven shows a year, the estimates have to be as sound as the judgments of fact can make them. That word fact seems always coming up.

And on this anniversary occasion it is appropriate, too, to make note that what comes out in type and printed word from the Music Hall, emanates from the advertising and publicity department presided over ever since when by a quietly blithe optimist, Fred Lynch, one time newspaper man. He has been there nearly since the beginning, getting the publicity and advertising put on paper, in the careful convincing manner and spirit of this all-American Music Hall.

'Hall' Started New Theatre-chair Era

The opening of Radio City Music Hall started a new era in theatre-chair design and construction, according to Keith Dickinson, theatre product manager of American Seating.

"Our research and development on theatre seating gathered impetus as a result of the success of this show place," Dickinson said. "Until then, the emphasis was on the ornate, with restricted spacing and width of seat inflicting their measure of suffering on the patron. The more 'overstuffed' chairs per row, the better theatre owners liked them.

"Now, however, sleek, comfortable seating, with ample space to sit in, is consistently preferred by the theatre owner who understands his customers' needs.

Modern Design

"Luxurious chairs, featuring modern design and modern comfort have come into their own, just as modern architecture and construction have advanced over the last 20 years. Improvements in chair design have eliminated frivolous ornamentation. New ways of providing comfort without overstuffed bulk give greater space for relaxed sitting. Better upholstering methods and materials have vastly reduced costly reupholstering.

"Experimentation in design, backed by laboratory testing have proved conclusively that cast-iron aisle standards can be streamlined and still perform their functions without failure," declared Dickinson.

To Seek Review of Jackson Pk. Ruling

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Commenting on a Federal Circuit court opinion leaving the door open for distributing companies to ask the Towne, Milwaukee, and Jackson Park Theatre, Chicago, to bid for pictures, attorney Thomas C. McConnell, representing the two theatres, said he intends to petition for certiorari in the U. S. Supreme Court.

McConnell interprets the Circuit court ruling not as making it mandatory for the two theatres to bid for pictures, but as permitting bidding or any other selling method which will fulfill the provisions of the Jackson Park and Towne decrees requiring distributors to offer pictures to the two theatres at "fair and reasonable rentals."

In other words, according to McConnell, the Circuit court overruled the District court's opinion that bidding is outlawed by the decrees, declaring that the end result, rather than the means of providing the two theatres with film at fair and reasonable prices, should determine whether the defendant distributors are meeting the requirements of the decree.

Ask Town to Repeal Tax

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 28.—Attorneys for Lancaster, O., theatres have asked the City Council to repeal the municipal three per cent admission tax because of "declining revenues." One local theatre has closed since the tax was levied four years ago. Two of the four remaining Lancaster houses "will barely break even" this year, the attorneys told the Council.

"The Redhead from Wyoming"

(Universal International)

AN EPIC WINDUP battle scene is offered in Leonard Goldstein's production, lifting this Western somewhat above standard formula lines. The color by Technicolor aids, too, in the appreciation of the excitement furnished by the final lengthy battle scene. The acting is adequate, none of the characters developing, mainly because of the dialogue. Lee Sholem directed, from a screenplay by Polly James and Herb Meadow, working from a Polly James story.

The story has Maureen O'Hara, pretty and trusting yet shrewd girl set up in a Wyoming town as a gambling house proprietor and cattle buyer. The setting up is done by an old associate in such matters, William Bishop. He merely tells her he's ambitious to become governor. What he doesn't tell her is that he has gunmen in the hills rustling cattle from a nasty cattle baron to add to her herd; and that he hopes the baron will war on the townspeople, whom he ostensibly champions; and that his gunmen will step in at the end and take over.

He also frames her for both the rustling and a murder, still posing as her champion. This nefariousness goes awry because a lowly, ill-paid sheriff, Alex Nicol, becomes curious. He also falls in love with Miss O'Hara, and she unwillingly returns the feeling. The pair succeed in having the townspeople and the cattle baron unite to do battle with the gunmen.

Others in the cast include Alexander Scourby, Jeanne Cooper, Claudette Thornton, Palmer Lee and Jack Kelly.

"Target Hong Kong"

(Columbia)

ALTHOUGH ROUTINE in theme, "Target Hong Kong" packs enough action to satisfy the adventure fans. A series of episodes leads up to a suspenseful climax in which a bomb, set afloat through Hong Kong's sewers, is located and disposed of in the nick of time.

Richard Denning and Nancy Gates share the starring roles in commendable fashion, while the supporting cast of sinister characters supply an atmosphere of intrigue which is the basis of the story. Denning portrays an American soldier of fortune in Hong Kong who finds himself involved in the fighting between the Nationalists and Communists. He lines up with the Nationalists, pitting himself against all sorts of Red villainy and intrigue. At a spy hangout in a gambling casino, Denning meets Nancy Gates and thus Herman Purdum's screenplay has its romantic angle. Wallace MacDonald produced and Fred F. Sears directed. Others in the cast are Richard Loo, Soo Yong, Ben Astar, Michael Pate, Philip Ahn, Henry Kulky, Victor Sen Yung, Weaver Levy, Kam Tong, Robert W. Lee.

Running time, 66 minutes. General audience classification. Release date not set.

Zukor Hails Color Tube

The newly developed Chromatic tri-color home television tube was underscored here by Adolph Zukor, board chairman of Paramount Pictures, as in keeping with Paramount's eye-on-the-future policy. Paramount owns a 50 per cent interest in Chromatic Laboratories Inc.

The occasion for Zukor's comments was the induction on Christmas Eve of 32 Paramount employes into the company's 25-Year-Club at the home office in the presence of Barney Balaban, president, and scores of other Paramount executives.

Following welcoming remarks by Balaban, in which he signaled 1953 as the most important year for the industry, Zukor presented to the 32 inductees gold watches to mark their entry into the club. In presenting Zukor to the inductees, Balaban pointed out that the occasion was doubly auspicious in that Zukor, in 1953, will mark the 50th anniversary of his association with Paramount, and its predecessors.

"Last of the Commanches"

(Columbia)

ACTION AND SUSPENSE, combined with effective outdoor scenery and color by Technicolor, compose the necessary ingredients to satisfy the most demanding outdoor action fans. The story concerns the tragic adventures of a group of soldiers and Western travellers who are seeking to escape to a fort after having been beset by Indian attacks.

Six tattered U. S. Cavalry men, under Broderick Crawford, are the sole survivors of a renegade Commanche raid on a Western village. In their trek across the desert to reach the haven of a fort, they come upon a stage coach in which Barbara Hale is a passenger, thus offering the slight romantic angle. Two additional members of the caravan are picked up en route, Hugh Sanders and Johnny Stewart, the latter a young Indian. When the party takes refuge in an old Spanish mansion, the Indians start their rounds of attack and Crawford sends Stewart through the lines to get cavalry help. With the arrival of the horsemen, the party is saved—just as ammunition and water are about to run out.

Buddy Adler produced and Andre DeToth directed, from a screenplay by Kenneth Gamet.

Others in the cast are Lloyd Bridges, Mickey Shaughnessy, George Matthews, Ric Roman, Chubby Johnson, Martin Parsons, Jack Woody, John War Eagle, Carleton Young, William Andrews.

Running time, 85 minutes. General audience classification. For February release.

"The Importance of Being Earnest"

(J. Arthur Rank Organization-Universal)

THIS FILM VERSION of Oscar Wilde's play is made-to-order for art theatres; its chances for commercial success in regular houses are somewhat remote. It is strictly adult fare, smartly directed and produced, capably acted and further enhanced by rich tones of color by Technicolor. The subtle lines of Wilde's original play have been augmented by equally fine dialogue, made to conform with film requirements. By American standards, the picture might be considered by some to be "too British," and yet it is the British touch that brings out the full appreciation of Wilde's comedy. At times the rapid, clipped English dialogue becomes difficult to follow, but such instances are in the minority. For those who like sophisticated comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest" should have strong appeal.

The story concerns two eligible bachelors, Michael Redgrave and Michael Denison, the former in love with Denison's cousin, Joan Greenwood, and Denison with Dorothy Tutlin, Redgrave's ward. Anxious to keep his freedom as a playboy, Redgrave creates an imaginary brother, Earnest, and in that guise wins Joan's affections. Denison learns of Redgrave's deception and pretends to be Earnest in wooing Dorothy. Thus, each girl believes herself to be engaged to the non-existent Earnest. The resulting entanglements and the untangling of the situations form the basis for the improbable and yet highly amusing episodes.

The stars and supporting players turn in excellent performances under Anthony Asquith's direction and the production guidance of Teddy Baird. Others in the cast are Edith Evans, Margaret Rutherford, Richard Wattis, Miles Malleson, Walter Hudd and Aubrey Mather.

Running time, 95 minutes. Adult classification. December release.

TOA to Study 3-Dimension

The executive committee and the board of directors of the Theatre Owners of America will devote an entire day to the study of three-dimensional films when the TOA leaders meet here next month. Future possibilities of tri-dimensional pictures at the box-office will be discussed thoroughly, according to Herman Levy, TOA general counsel.

Levy said that the TOA executives would view Cinerama at the Broadway Theatre on the night of Monday, Jan. 26 and efforts would be made to obtain a print of "Bwana Devil," the Natural Vision feature, so that they can witness a demonstration of that project on Monday afternoon.

TOA's position on the government's 16mm. anti-trust suit will be decided at the sessions, which will be held Jan. 25-27, Levy said. The organization will determine whether to try to intervene in the case, and, if that step is vetoed, what other action should be taken. Other subjects, such as arbitration and admission taxes, also are on the agenda.

Levy said that between 50 and 60 are expected to attend the meetings which will be held at the Pierre Hotel.

U.K.FilmMen,B.B.C. To Air TV Ideas

LONDON, Dec. 28.—An exploratory meeting to discuss, among other things, British Broadcasting Company's need of films for television and what's to be done about it, has been scheduled by the British Film Producers Association for Jan. 1.

Invited to the meeting at BFPA headquarters, in addition to B.B.C.'s television service chief, George Barnes, are William Speakman, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association; Edward Hinge, treasurer, and Walter Fuller, general secretary. They will be present as observers only.

BFPA Policy

Sir Henry French of B.F.P.A. is understood to have prepared a document setting forth the conditions on which BFPA members would like to use large screen TV. British exhibitors remain opposed to cooperation with television but it appears that producers might be willing to discuss some method of making TV films for BBC in return for theatre TV privileges from the government video-radio monopoly.

Significantly, Norman Collins, former BBC television service head, who is now identified with High Definition Films and Associated Broadcasting Development Co., both of which are partly backed by J. Arthur Rank and Sir Alexander Korda, is discussing arrangements for making his film supply available to BBC. His British-made films already have been made available to American and Canadian TV services.

On A.B.-Pathe Board

LONDON, Dec. 28.—W. A. Fielder, for many years general manager of Associated British-Pathe, has been elected a director of the company.

Tradewise . . .

By SHERWIN KANE

AS Radio City Music Hall comes to its 20th anniversary, marked in this issue of MOTION PICTURE DAILY as has been its earlier anniversaries at each five-year milestone in the theatre's history, the Music Hall's claim to the title "Showplace of the Nation" is more secure than ever before.

In many ways the Music Hall is unique. A glance at some of the facts culled from its records shows why.

In 1951, a poor business year for most theatres, the Music Hall established a record gross of $6,811,769. On the basis of still incomplete figures, the gross for this year probably will set a new high for the theatre.

The average annual attendance is nearly 7,000,000 persons. The 20-year attendance at the Music Hall by the end of this year will be in the neighborhood of 123,000,000.

The 20-year gross for the theatre is estimated at $104,425,000.

One picture, "The Great Caruso," grossed $1,392,943 in 10 weeks at the Music Hall. Four others

NEWS FLASHES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.--"The largest volume of unfilled requirements" in the private building field was declared to exist for recreational facilities in a Commerce Department economic outlook survey. The need for such construction was said to be due largely to government building curbs, with over $3 billion of deferred building.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 28.--Citing the "sensational business" being done by "Bwana Devil," Harry Lamont, head of Lamont Theatres, stated that third dimension projection will prove a box-office boon not only to indoor theatres but also to drive-ins during 1953.

Martin and Lewis Voted Top Money-Making Stars

The team of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis were the top "Money-Making Stars of 1952," having been voted into the No. 1 position by exhibitors in the Motion Picture Herald-Fame's 21st annual poll. Theatre operators—both circuit and independent—voting by confidential ballot strictly on box-office revenues had placed the duo in second place in the 1951 audit.

Martin and Lewis were followed by Gary Cooper, John Wayne, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, James Stewart, Doris Day, Gregory Peck, Susan Hayward and Randolph Scott, in that order, on the list of Money-Making Stars. The single newcomer to the "Top Ten" is Susan Hayward, although some of the others are returnees. She rose from 19th place in the 1951 poll to ninth position in 1952.

Gary Cooper, runner-up, is on the list for the 13th time, a record tied only by Bing Crosby. John Wayne,

DALLAS, Dec. 28. — The 22-car streamliner "Movietime" train, which will tour the country in 1953, and other pre-selling projects of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations were heralded by R. J. ### Un-American Activities Committee Reviews Year

By J. A. OTTEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — The House Un-American Activities Committee said today that if Communist efforts to infiltrate Hollywood had not been exposed, the screen would have become a medium for Communist propaganda.

The statement was made in the Committee's year-end report to Congress, reviewing recent hearings and investigations. It noted that in its film hearings last year and this year, it had received much better cooperation from individuals in the industry than during the earlier 1947 hearings.

The Committee report carefully avoided giving the industry too great a pat on the back, but at least it did not criticize the industry as did earlier reports.

In 1951, when hearings were re-

The end of the pre-holiday box-office lull came with Christmas Day along Broadway heralding a week of robust business that will be climaxed by the New Year's weekend. The lively box-office performance in New York was also experienced by theatres in many other sections of the country.

sumed, "the Committee experienced much fuller cooperation and assistance from individuals in and associated with the motion picture industry," the report declared. "As a result, the Committee ascertained that the Communist efforts to infiltrate this industry had been a full-scale and carefully planned operation and that the Communist Party had been successful in recruiting individuals in important and strategic positions in almost all phases of motion picture production. Had these Communist efforts gone unexposed, it is almost inevitable that the content of motion pictures would have been influenced and slanted and become a medium for Communist propaganda."

Financial Reservoir

The Committee said it also felt that as a result of its hearings, the extensive financial reservoir which had existed in Hollywood for Communist purposes has been greatly diminished.

The report urged "all fields of entertainment and culture to maintain a steadfast vigilance in order to avoid the possibility of further Communist infiltration into them." It announced that it still has a "number of witnesses" to be called in connection with the Hollywood investigation.

The Committee listed the names of 30 persons who had been one-time members of the Party and who, in testimony before the Committee, "have been of invaluable assistance to the Committee and the American people in supplying facts relating to Communist efforts and success in infiltrating the motion picture industry."

The list included Elia Kazan, Edward Dmytryk, Sterling Hayden, Larry Parks, Budd Schulberg, Frank Tuttle and Clifford Odets.

Others on the list were George Bassman, George Beck, Martin Berkeley, Lloyd Bridges, Richard Collins, Eve Ettinger, Bernyce Fleury, Eugene Fleury, Anne Ray Frank, Roy Huggins, Leon Janney, Fred Keating, Marc Lawrence, Isobel Lennart, Melvin Levy, Paul Marion, David Raksin, Stanley Roberts, Meta Reis Rosenberg, Bernard C. Schoenfeld, Leo Townsend, Owen Vinson and Elizabeth Wilson.

The report noted that Bridges, Janney and Keating had all admitted former Party membership in executive session statements, and that their testimony had not yet been made public.

grossed more than $1,150,000 in runs of eight to 11 weeks.

During the last Christmas-New Year's holiday week, "I'll See You in My Dreams" grossed a record $180,068 in seven days. "Ivanhoe," in one non-holiday week, grossed $175,958.

The Music Hall has played 425 feature pictures since its opening 20 years ago. Of these, 317 were played during the first 10 years and 108 during the second 10 years.

In 1946, the Music Hall used only eight feature films; in 1945, nine; in 1944 and this year, 10; in 1943, 1947 and 1951, it used 11.

In its early years, before its present policy had been established, the Music Hall used almost four times as many films as in recent years. In 1933, it used an all-time high of 46; in 1934, it used 43, and in 1935, 40. From 1936 on, the drop in feature film consumption was sharp and continuous.

Numerically, RKO Radio provided the Music Hall with the most films over the 20-year period; a total of 115 features which consumed 221 weeks and five days of playing time. MGM has furnished 71 features which have used 319 weeks of playing time, including the run, to date, of the current "Million Dollar Mermaid."

Other product suppliers and their playing time include: Columbia, 63 pictures; 131 weeks running time; 20th Century-Fox, 62 features, for 104 weeks and four days; United Artists, 48 features, for 94 weeks; Warner Brothers, 28 features, for 67 weeks; Universal, 20 features, for 36 weeks and three days; Paramount, 14 features, for 55 weeks.

Pandro Berman is the leading producer of pictures booked by the Music Hall, with 28. David Selznick has 11; Arthur Freed 10. John Cromwell, with 17 pictures, is the leading director on the Hall's books. Alexander Hall has 11, and John Ford, 10.

Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers are tied for first as the female stars of the greatest number of pictures to play the Hall—22 each. However, Greer Garson's 11 starring vehicles at the Hall had the longest playing time for any female star, 65 weeks.

Cary Grant ranks as the male star who has appeared in the most Music Hall pictures, and for the most playing time—21 pictures which ran 68 weeks. Walter Pidgeon was in eight which ran 45 weeks and Spencer Tracy in 12 which ran 41 weeks.

These wholly statistical facts are but one phase of the story that proves the Radio City Music Hall unique. The other is the great organization, directed by Russell V. Downing, which meticulously maintains the high standards of entertainment and service in the Music Hall's distinguished setting. That story is told elsewhere in this issue.

worldwide 1952 revenues from film rentals, it was said. Foreign film rentals for the calendar year are running about eight per cent higher than last year, also absorbing some decline in 1952 domestic film rentals.

Last year, the income from film rentals was $92,489,357, both domestic and foreign. Theatre receipts for 1951 were $58,169,152. Net profit was $4.308,431.

With the company splitup as of last Sept. 27 into separate production-distribution and exhibition firms according to the terms of the consent decree, there are no comparable figures for net earnings this year. In its last report for the 39 weeks ended Sept. 27, which covered operations before the split-up, the company disclosed consolidated net earnings of $2,768,191 and a special credit of $1,077,755. This compared with net earnings of $2,147,628 for the 39-week period ended Sept. 29, 1951.

30 Cleve. Theatres In Pre-Xmas Closing

Cleveland, Dec. 28.—Thirty independently owned subsequent run houses, representing 50% of the theatres in this classification in Greater Cleveland, closed Monday through Wednesday before Christmas. This is the first time such a wide sweeping policy including the largest and newest theatres, has ever been adopted. In previous years many theatres closed Christmas Eve to give their employees one holiday night with their families.

The three-day closing was not a concerted action on the part of exhibitors but was instituted on the basis of individual theatre lack of attendance. All reopened Christmas Day with new programs.

maid" and the traditional Christmas stage show is expected to top $180,000, the sturdy figure realized last year during Christmas week. The estimate is based on pre-Christmas business at the Hall, which unlike most other theatres, picks up a few weeks before the holiday with the introduction of the Christmas show.

At the Victoria, a tremendous $12,500 was chalked up for the first two days of "Come Back, Little Sheba," leading Paramount officials to predict that the first week of the film will break the house record of $57,000 set by "Joan of Arc."

Other sturdy product, highlighted by "Ruby Gentry," at the Mayfair; "April in Paris," at the Paramount, and "Hiawatha," at the Bijou, was introduced along Broadway for the holidays with a commensurate boost in business. Other holiday fare which drew many customers was the in-person appearance of Johnnie Ray at the Capitol, coupled with "Against All Flags" as the screen attraction, and "My Cousin Rachel" at the Rivoli.

Thousands of couples, accompanied by their children, flocked to see "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris. Also doing brisk business was the newly-reopened Roxy, currently featuring "Stars and Stripes Forever," and "Icecolorama" on stage. "Limelight" at the Astor and at the two-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux also did quite well.

Martin and Lewis

after holding the No. 1 spot in the two previous years, was in third place, possibly due to the fact that he was seen less often during the year than was good for his poll standing. Bing Crosby climbed a notch from his 1951 position, taking fourth place, but he shares with nobody the record of five consecutive years in the No. 1 slot (1944-48 inclusive).

Hope jumped from sixth to fifth place and is on the "team" for the 12th time, taking first place in 1949. Stewart is in the Top Ten for the second time, finishing sixth, while Miss Day, in seventh place, is up two stations from last year's ninth, which was her initial appearance on the list. Peck, finishing eighth, duplicates his standing in the 1947 poll.

The Herald observes that the fluctuations of box-office fame are singularly slight from year to year. Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, 11th in the 1952 poll, although eighth in the independent exhibitors' column, have seven Top Ten placements, including a No. 1 in 1941. Esther Williams, 12th in the present listing, although 10th in the circuit theatres' column, was eighth in both the 1949 and 1950 polls. The most striking shift of poll positions is that of Betty Grable, who was third in 1951, and dropped to 20th this year. The repeated suspensions she drew from her studio are reported to have accounted for the dip.

Winners in the Western film category are Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, Rex Allen, Bill Elliott, Tim Holt, Gabby Hayes, Smiley Burnette, Charles Starrett, Dale Evans and William Boyd. Fluctuations in this department are even slighter, with Rogers leading the parade for the 10th consecutive year.

British exhibitors participated in the poll, casting votes in three groups; the top money-making British players, international players, and Western stars, respectively.

The British performers ranked in the following order: Ronald Shiner, Alastair Sim, Alec Guinness, Anthony Steel and Jack Hawkins (tied), Richard Todd, Nigel Patrick, Jack Warner, Anna Neagle, Trevor Howard and Glynis Johns.

In the international bracket, the winner was Bob Hope, followed by Gregory Peck, Betty Hutton, Martin and Lewis, John Wayne, Mario Lanza, James Mason, James Stewart, Doris Day and Humphrey Bogart.

The Westerns' leaders were Gary Cooper, Randolph Scott, James Stewart, Roy Rogers, John Wayne, Rod Cameron, Alan Ladd, Gene Autry, Jeff Chandler and Clark Gable.

came from members of the executive board of Texas COMPO, who attended a special meeting here. Among them were Karl Hoblitzelle, founder and president of Interstate Circuit; Col. H. A. Cole, chairman of the board of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas and national chairman of the COMPO tax repeal campaign; Ed Rowley, president of Rowley United Theatres; H. J. Griffith, president of Theatre Enterprises, and Claude Ezell, president of Ezell and Associates.

Cole stated, "We have every reason to believe that our efforts in the tax repeal campaign will bear fruitful returns to the industry during the coming year, but this will represent only a partial solution to our problems. The new year will see our thoughts directed toward establishing inter-industry harmony with the introduction of an incentive selling program which will benefit both exhibition and distribution. This will require a cooperative spirit and a period of experimentation to prove its value, and I feel that Texas will be the testing grounds for this important project."

Rowley cited Cinerama as "a milestone in the progress" of the industry and envisioned the need for a transition in the industry to harness the new medium.

Griffith forecast that a successful outcome of the tax repeal campaign would mean the salvation for thousands of theatres and a more stabilized industry. Ezell predicted that drive-ins were headed for the most prosperous year in their history.

Phil Isley, president of Isley Theatres and president of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, condemned the Department of Justice's 16mm. suit seeking the release of feature films to TV stations, among other things.

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL

TWO decades ago comedians in a Broadway musical review were making merry over what they referred to as "Young John D's Folly." Their reference was to the institution created through the vision and enterprise of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., which has since become world-famous as the Radio City Music Hall.

The Music Hall was inaugurated in the midst of the Great Depression and the inaugural program, unhappily in tune with the spirit of the day, was not without various depressive aspects. But that was only the starting point. The best laugh—the last laugh—was yet to come.

In the succeeding years this institution, endowed with a physical plant and character never previously realized, and enjoying a sponsorship of vision, taste and initiative, has gone on to establish for itself a unique status in the amusement world. It is doubtlessly the most widely known theatre of the day. It numbers among its public an army of regular and devoted patrons residing in the New York area, and it is the top-of-the-list place to go for great numbers of visitors from points throughout this country and from overseas. It has solidly built a reputation of even greater value than the physical values of the enterprise.

¶ The rise of the Music Hall to its position of eminence was first under the guidance of the masterful hand of the late W. G. Van Schmus, and ably continued by his immediate successor, Mr. Gus S. Eyssell, who went on from the Music Hall post to his present position as president of Rockefeller Center, Inc. The successful tradition is now continuing under Mr. Russell V. Downing, president and managing director.

The Music Hall is an institution of the amusement industry which reflects substantial credit upon the industry at large. Its twentieth anniversary is an appropriate occasion for an acknowledgment of this obligation and for the offering of hearty congratulations to the management and to the numerous personnel which constitute the Music Hall family.

— MARTIN QUIGLEY

GUS, RUSS AND LEO A VERY HAPPY TRIO!

May you enjoy many more years of distinguished and successful showmanship.

It is a matter of extreme pride that you selected M-G-M's great Technicolor musical "MILLION DOLLAR MERMAID" for your Anniversary Picture. We are delighted that it is such a sensational attraction.

And starting the 21st year of your famed show shop, what an honor to present "THE BAD AND THE BEAUTIFUL." This powerful M-G-M drama is already talked about as a strong contender for the Academy Award and sure-fire for the Ten Best List of 1953.

We can assure you that there are many other M-G-M attractions of Music Hall quality coming in the months ahead.

We take pardonable pride in the part you have permitted us to play in the 20 years you are now celebrating. May we look back briefly over those years:

> M-G-M had 5 of the 10 top grossing pictures, more than any other company ("The Great Caruso," "Ivanhoe," "Show Boat," "Random Harvest," "Valley of Decision"). M-G-M had the top grosser of all time "The Great Caruso." M-G-M had the co-holder of the longest run record, 11 weeks for "Random Harvest." 71 M-G-M pictures played the Hall for the greatest number of weeks of any company. During the year 1952 now concluding, M-G-M had 62% of Music Hall playing time.

Happy Anniversary to the great institution of Radio City Music Hall which has brought honor and prestige to this industry and may it be the privilege of Leo the Lion to roar from its giant screen for years to come.

...telling the story of Radio City Music Hall through two decades

By TERRY RAMSAYE

THE TWENTIETH anniversary of the Radio City Music Hall is a signal occasion for all the institution of the motion picture, art and industry. Standing there in New York's mid-town, its event of Now, taking provocation from the yesterdays, constructively pertains more importantly to encouragement for the tomorrows.

When the Music Hall was opened December 27, 1932, those two decades ago, with much pomp and ceremony, it was the world's biggest theatre. In the years since, it has come by ordeal and experience to be the world's greatest theatre.

Through steps of evolution and the adventures of the hectic career of the problem-beset motion picture, this theatre has become and is today a looming beacon on a headland, shining through the pessimism and questioning that float across an industry burdened with adjustment to the new order, and disorder, of the day.

There are facts.

The Music Hall's flowing successes, continuous across the television invasion, its accompanying fevers, and other rising competitions for the entertainment dollar, have set significant tide marks of motion picture box-office values in genuine ledger figures:

"Sunset Boulevard," 1950—7 weeks, $1,015,000 . . . "Show Boat," 1951—8 weeks, $1,160,000 . . . "The Great Caruso," 1951—10 weeks, $1,392,000 . . . "The Greatest Show on Earth," 1952—11 weeks, $1,335,000 . . . "Ivanhoe," 1952—8 weeks, $1,290,000.

J. D. Rockefeller, Jr.
Founder of
Rockefeller Center

It is to be noted that these pictures, along with the rest of the presentations of the Music Hall screen, were selected out of projection room judgments, inevitably in pursuit of a policy. It is a firm policy which pertains as much to maintaining an institution for its continuing career as to selling the seats for tonight's show.

Those high gross figures are impressive and important as denoting that flow of seven to eight millions of customers which come each year to fill those 6200 seats, often to the capacity of the house.

While we are among the statistics, it is appropriate to record again that the Music Hall has the biggest indoor screen, 70 by 40 feet, a throw from projection ports to screen of 190 feet, and a stage so long that it takes a row of 46 precision dancers, the Rockettes, to stretch across it. Also after twenty years of operation, it is the newest of theatres, with an interior of luxury and unostentatious elegance, with sheer size and scale the principal assertion of grandeur. If the gregarious impulse and the sense of audience participation are factors of a show, in the Music Hall they get it. It was built big, but it had to grow great.

This quality of newness is maintained by a continuous process of modernizations and refurbishments in detail. The patron gets nowhere a suggestion of obsolescence, no spots worn through, nothing obviously repaired. It maintains the perfections of an opening night, from the lush carpet trod by those millions of feet, to an overall spotlessness. Incidentally that carpet runs between the seats with its tactile impress of luxury—and probably subtle satisfaction to the foot-tired ladies who like to slip off their shoes and yield in relaxed comfort to the entertainment.

The operation and all its policies start with the customer, addressed at the big middle class of solvent Americans, observant of their tastes and public proprieties, when assembled under each other's eyes.

Exploiting Distinction

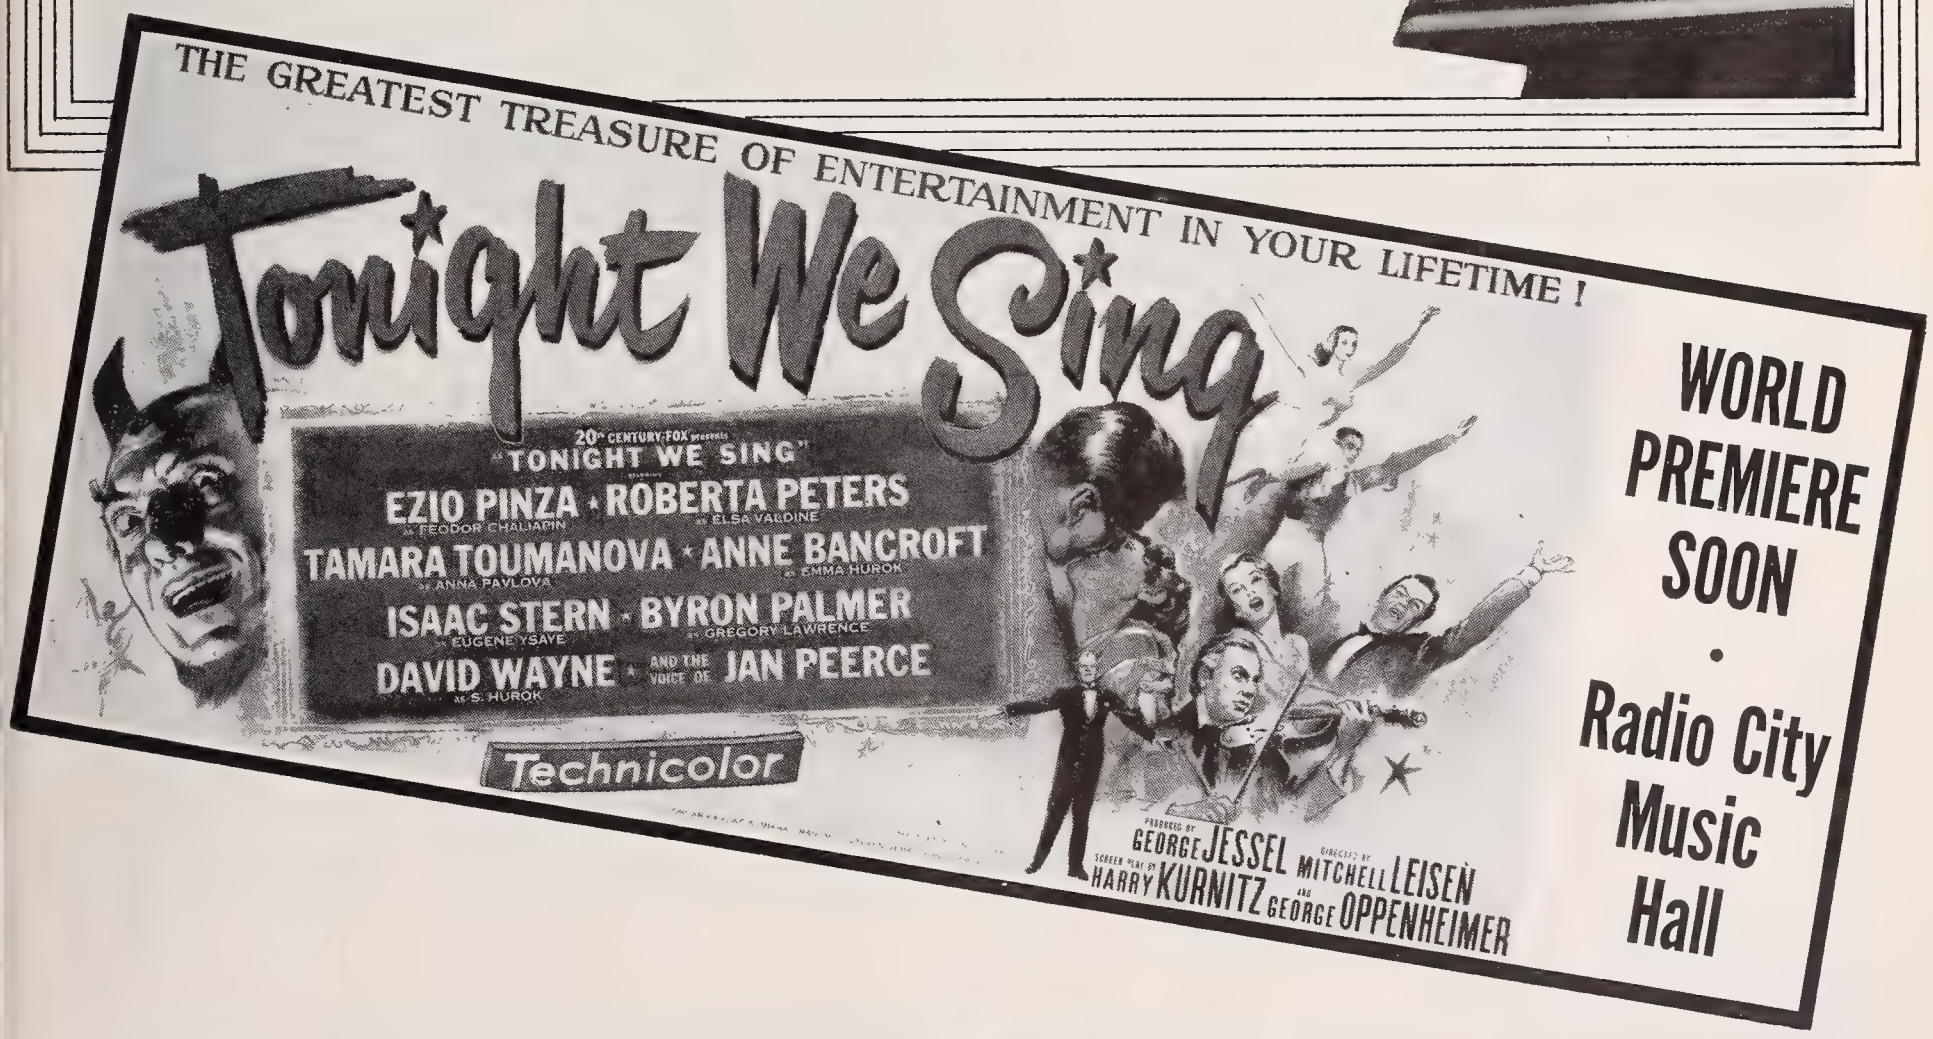
The process of address to that Music Hall public became conspicuous to the observer in its avoidance of the promotional antics and publicity high pitches which so often and conspicuously affect the metropolitan scene and the frenetics of Broadway.

There are no parades with prancing drum majors, no balloons, no skywriters, no sniping, window cards and throwaways. The Music Hall's large staff of creative artists of note and fame do not have their names bestrewn across the gossip columns, nor are they photographed at the night clubs and hot spots.



The basic audience is drawn from a fifty-mile circle around Rockefeller Center, and

"THE HALL'S" HEAD MAN

RUSSELL V. DOWNING, president and managing director of Radio City Music Hall, has spent his entire career in show business as an officer of the world's premiere theatre. As the Music Hall marks its 20th anniversary, Downing's personal 20th anniversary in show business and in the service of the theatre is not far distant.

Downing joined the Music Hall executive organization as treasurer in October, 1933. In 1942 he was elected vice-president and treasurer of Radio City Music Hall Corp. and Center Theatre Corp. He was named executive vice-president of both companies on June 1, 1948, and became president and managing director of the Music Hall last March. In November he was elected a member of the board of directors of Rockefeller Center, Inc., in addition to his other positions.

Apart from the brief, early period during which the operating policy of the Music Hall was in a state of flux, when S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel and Harold B. Franklin, successively, were in charge, the world's greatest showplace has had but three managing directors. Preceding Downing in that capacity were the late W. G. Van Schmus and Gus S. Eyssell. The latter is chairman of the board of the Music Hall Corporation now and also holds the post of president of Rockefeller Center, Inc.

Downing was born in Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 11, 1900. He attended local public schools; then the Wharton School of Commerce of the University of Pennsylvania. He was in officers' training at Camp Zachary Taylor for a time during World War I and returned to schooling at Columbia University. His early business experience included the posts of treasurer of the Prudence Co., assistant treasurer of Holmes Products, assistant treasurer of Magazine Repeating Razor Co. and assistant to the president of Tidewater Oil Sales Corp.

As part of his administrative duties as head of the Music Hall, Downing makes frequent journeys to Hollywood for the purpose of previewing the best of the newly completed film product and also to view rushes of other productions which promise to meet the Music Hall's high standards for bookings. In both film and stage presentations the Music Hall's cardinal policy may be described as clean entertainment for the whole family. That, and an inflexible policy of good, honest service to the public have been the keys to the great theatre's 20 years of success.

In both his long service to the Music Hall and his still brief tenure as its chief executive officer, Downing has proved himself an able custodian of those policies and an administrator eminently capable of ensuring the further success of the Radio City Music Hall as the world's pre-eminent theatre.

a very considerable proportion comes from all that endless flow of some three or four hundred thousand visiting out-of-towners.

It is probably as much a Center influence as it was the late Fiorello La Guardia who sought to make Sixth Avenue the Avenue of the Americas. If that name is ever actually accepted by the public it may be credited to the Music Hall. It daily makes that Fiftieth street corner the center of an international concourse. They come from everywhere, with the Music Hall the best known theatre around the world.

G. S. Eyssell, president of Rockefeller Center, chairman of Music Hall

Back of the Music Hall is the somewhat more than atmospheric influence of the institutionality of the House of Rockefeller, so extensively integrated with far flung and extensive financial, industrial influences and participation in social causes all over the globe. The impress is upon it. Also it may be observed that the Music Hall constitutes the most vitally intimate, direct and daily contact of the Rockefeller institution with the public, the people in person. There is stature and responsibility not shared by any other theatre.

It is to be remembered that the great theatre now known as the Music Hall went into the Rockefeller Center-Radio City design originally to create a sort of splendid boutonniere for the big real estate project. It was, as many know, to have been a new home for the grandiose Metropolitan Opera. That went a-glimmering in social politics. Radio influences, with ill-fated design to become important in the motion picture through the much merged RKO—remember that "Titan" advertising campaign—found opportunity. It took over the theatre as it emerged from blue prints and therein installed the great Roxy. It was Roxy, grown too great for the screen who gave the house its initial vaudeville policy, when vaudeville was all but dead, for that debacle program of the opening all the night of the December 27, 1932. The bill, which included most everything from Ray Bolger to extracts from Carmen, complete with horses on stage, ran on till 3 o'clock in the morning of December 28th. At the final curtain there were as many on stage as there were in the audience.

From Bust to Business

One of the amazements of the occasion was the fact that this vast, chaotic, costly opening program had never been put through a rehearsal!

It is to be recorded today that the management of the theatre as of then could not reach a bookkeeping accounting of that opening show. It was conceived in a chaos of dreams, and bought free-hand, without budget, without requisitions, authorizations, by telephone and across luncheon conversations, from here to the capitals of Europe.

Today the cost of that opening is unknown and always will be. It has been deemed absurdly unimportant to analyze the details of what required a single entry—"A bust complete."

Several things happened in sequel. RKO was in other difficulties a-plenty, and an expedition the next morning, right after breakfast, raised half a million dollars assistance from a Rockefeller office, the sympathetic but perturbed landlord. Presently, while it was still a leasehold operation, a grey haired gentleman, W. G. Van Schmus, appeared about back stage and elsewhere silently observing. Word percolated in time that he was "a Rockefeller man." He was, in fact, an industrial and public relations expert of Chicago background, recommended into the picture by the late Ivy Lee, of public relations counsel and much fame thereby in the Rockefeller service.

That vast Rockefeller operation could not accept such a conspicuous debacle in the limelight of the Center's greatest challenge to public attention. With understandable reluctance Mr. Rockefeller was defensively brought into the show business. One may be assured that in so coming, he was not trying to get rich.

Metaphorically, the Music Hall was still tremendous, but like an iceberg—mostly under water.

It is necessary to have this recalled to give perspective to the status of the Hall at this anniversary of 1952. The way up started with many difficulties. The situation had been precipitated by undisciplined ardors of showmanship and the collaborations of men and forces with designs of personal glory and profit, with small measure of the larger scene.

Soon it was clear that only the motion picture was big enough both in physical dimension and supply to continuously serve that tremendous auditorium and its vast proscenium. Ranking pictures was a problem. The Music Hall and RKO shared the hostility of a film industry which looked askance at radio and its leadership bent on invasion. There was no sympathy.

The situation was to be met only by quiet strategy and the application of the patient genius of commonsense. With "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" the week of January 11, 1933, the Music Hall entered upon a motion picture policy, with more policy than pictures. Prestige and buying power were far in the distance.

March 13, Mr. Van Schmus took over. The Rockefeller interest had acquired its lease of the Music Hall by a quiet process tantamount to a foreclosure, and RKO was going through that benevolent order of receivership known as "77-B".

The problem in hand was the building of the creative departments relating to the stage numbers and all the complex of functions behind them, and the establishment of a supply of screen entertainment. The quest of films was a large problem for a theatre with no status. It was to take years for the Music Hall to establish, by performance, the standing which gave it call on top rank pictures from skeptical and jealous production-exhibition competitors. It was no royal road.

Enter Two Young Men

Two young men in the reconstituted Music Hall organization in that difficult 1933 were to prove figures of destiny. The canny Van Schmus found his concept of policy ably aided by Gus S. Eyssell, who joined in January of 1933, bringing experience of exhibition on major assignments across the land from his native Kansas City to Los Angeles, to New York and way stations, under Paramount auspices. He knew a lot about who and what and why within the esoterics of movieland—if you know what I mean, and you do. He spoke softly and passed the ammunition.

Concurrently there appeared most unostentatiously what the industry would call "a figure man." This was, and surely is, Russell V. Downing, who came to what is a highly important desk in any Rockefeller organization, treasurer and comptroller, in 1933. To borrow a phrase from Ben Franklin, those Rockefellers are positively superstitious about figures. So is Mr. Downing, possibly more then than now, because there were so many ghosts among them way back then.

About Gus Eyssell you know, and how he came along to succeed the late Mr. Van Schmus to become president and managing director of the Music Hall and has since moved on to become president of Rockefeller Center, Inc., becoming the while chairman of the board of the Music Hall Corporation. That made him unique as a big business executive, alumnus of movieland. This recognition that capacity for the functions of weighty concerns of wide-based American enterprise can evolve in and be demonstrated against the complex and frenetic background of movies and entertainment was reiterated only the other day, November 7th, when Mr. Downing was elected a member of the board of Rockefeller Center, Inc.

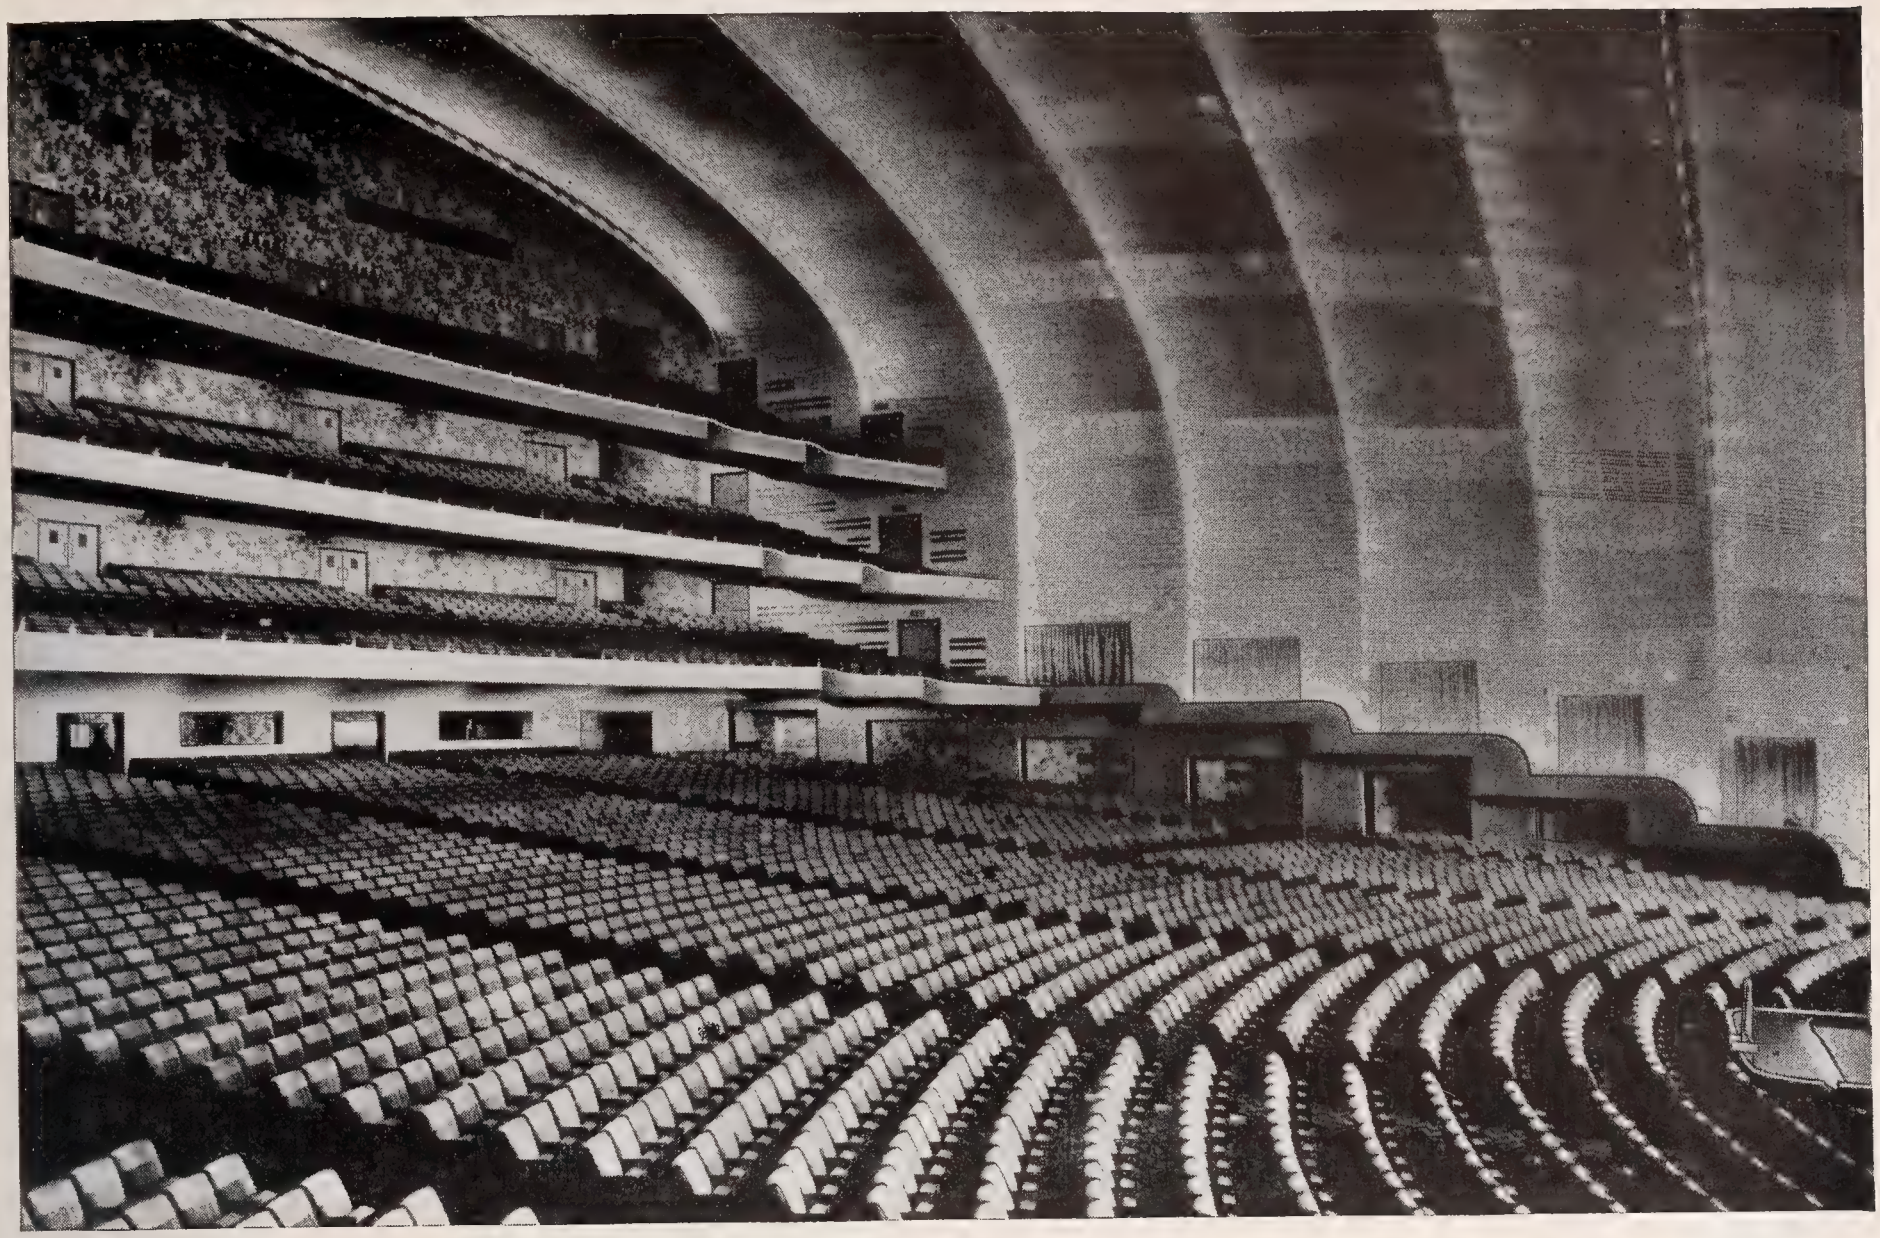
This Downing, like the Van Schmus, came from the outer world of industry with an abundant background of varied industrial and financial experience in posts which denoted his capacity as a man of facts, deliberation and action. He was by temperament and position a specially well placed observer of what went on and why and who did it, with what consequences. He was on his way up—vice-president in 1941, executive vice-president in 1948. Then Gus Eyssell, brought to recognition for his participation in the rise of the Music Hall, was made the president of Rockefeller Center, Inc., and moved into the observant post of chairman of the Music Hall board.



So it came that this man-with-the-facts, Russell Downing, moved into the presidency of the theatre corporation. This came about by a process as suave as an overlap dissolve in the films.

Those million dollar statistics of his incumbency, cited at our beginning, are attest to the most conspicuous aspect of the operation. They do not convey report directly, however, on the painstaking process of selection, those studies of production in process, inquiring excursions to Hollywood, endless screenings and evaluations, and the problems of availability-dates and timing which concern this tireless pursuit of facts, facts, facts. All this to be carried on, mind you, with executive attentions the while to the co-ordination of sensitive creative departments in such matters as stage craft, choreography, a great orchestra, and the very important and exactingly continuous functioning of theatrical housekeeping.

Mr. Downing, like many deliberative men, smokes a pipe, a slow burning briar, in interludes of long thoughts. He has more on his mind than on his desk. He has to take measure of several million minds—the customers, also a staff of 600, and I.B.M. has no machine for that, yet.

With the operation dependent on ten or eleven shows a year, the estimates have to be as sound as the judgments of fact can make them. That word fact seems always coming up.

And on this anniversary occasion it is appropriate, too, to make note that what comes out in type and printed word from the Music Hall, emanates from the advertising and publicity department presided over ever since when by a quietly blithe optimist, Fred Lynch, one time newspaper man. He has been there nearly since the beginning, getting the publicity and advertising put on paper, in the careful convincing manner and spirit of this all-American Music Hall.

'Hall' Started New Theatre-chair Era

The opening of Radio City Music Hall started a new era in theatre-chair design and construction, according to Keith Dickinson, theatre product manager of American Seating.

"Our research and development on theatre seating gathered impetus as a result of the success of this show place," Dickinson said. "Until then, the emphasis was on the ornate, with restricted spacing and width of seat inflicting their measure of suffering on the patron. The more 'overstuffed' chairs per row, the better theatre owners liked them.

"Now, however, sleek, comfortable seating, with ample space to sit in, is consistently preferred by the theatre owner who understands his customers' needs.

Modern Design

"Luxurious chairs, featuring modern design and modern comfort have come into their own, just as modern architecture and construction have advanced over the last 20 years. Improvements in chair design have eliminated frivolous ornamentation. New ways of providing comfort without overstuffed bulk give greater space for relaxed sitting. Better upholstering methods and materials have vastly reduced costly reupholstering.

"Experimentation in design, backed by laboratory testing have proved conclusively that cast-iron aisle standards can be streamlined and still perform their functions without failure," declared Dickinson.

To Seek Review of Jackson Pk. Ruling

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Commenting on a Federal Circuit court opinion leaving the door open for distributing companies to ask the Towne, Milwaukee, and Jackson Park Theatre, Chicago, to bid for pictures, attorney Thomas C. McConnell, representing the two theatres, said he intends to petition for certiorari in the U. S. Supreme Court.

McConnell interprets the Circuit court ruling not as making it mandatory for the two theatres to bid for pictures, but as permitting bidding or any other selling method which will fulfill the provisions of the Jackson Park and Towne decrees requiring distributors to offer pictures to the two theatres at "fair and reasonable rentals."

In other words, according to McConnell, the Circuit court overruled the District court's opinion that bidding is outlawed by the decrees, declaring that the end result, rather than the means of providing the two theatres with film at fair and reasonable prices, should determine whether the defendant distributors are meeting the requirements of the decree.

Ask Town to Repeal Tax

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 28.—Attorneys for Lancaster, O., theatres have asked the City Council to repeal the municipal three per cent admission tax because of "declining revenues." One local theatre has closed since the tax was levied four years ago. Two of the four remaining Lancaster houses "will barely break even" this year, the attorneys told the Council.

"The Redhead from Wyoming"

(Universal International)

AN EPIC WINDUP battle scene is offered in Leonard Goldstein's production, lifting this Western somewhat above standard formula lines. The color by Technicolor aids, too, in the appreciation of the excitement furnished by the final lengthy battle scene. The acting is adequate, none of the characters developing, mainly because of the dialogue. Lee Sholem directed, from a screenplay by Polly James and Herb Meadow, working from a Polly James story.

The story has Maureen O'Hara, pretty and trusting yet shrewd girl set up in a Wyoming town as a gambling house proprietor and cattle buyer. The setting up is done by an old associate in such matters, William Bishop. He merely tells her he's ambitious to become governor. What he doesn't tell her is that he has gunmen in the hills rustling cattle from a nasty cattle baron to add to her herd; and that he hopes the baron will war on the townspeople, whom he ostensibly champions; and that his gunmen will step in at the end and take over.

He also frames her for both the rustling and a murder, still posing as her champion. This nefariousness goes awry because a lowly, ill-paid sheriff, Alex Nicol, becomes curious. He also falls in love with Miss O'Hara, and she unwillingly returns the feeling. The pair succeed in having the townspeople and the cattle baron unite to do battle with the gunmen.

Others in the cast include Alexander Scourby, Jeanne Cooper, Claudette Thornton, Palmer Lee and Jack Kelly.

"Target Hong Kong"

(Columbia)

ALTHOUGH ROUTINE in theme, "Target Hong Kong" packs enough action to satisfy the adventure fans. A series of episodes leads up to a suspenseful climax in which a bomb, set afloat through Hong Kong's sewers, is located and disposed of in the nick of time.

Richard Denning and Nancy Gates share the starring roles in commendable fashion, while the supporting cast of sinister characters supply an atmosphere of intrigue which is the basis of the story. Denning portrays an American soldier of fortune in Hong Kong who finds himself involved in the fighting between the Nationalists and Communists. He lines up with the Nationalists, pitting himself against all sorts of Red villainy and intrigue. At a spy hangout in a gambling casino, Denning meets Nancy Gates and thus Herman Purdum's screenplay has its romantic angle. Wallace MacDonald produced and Fred F. Sears directed. Others in the cast are Richard Loo, Soo Yong, Ben Astar, Michael Pate, Philip Ahn, Henry Kulky, Victor Sen Yung, Weaver Levy, Kam Tong, Robert W. Lee.

Running time, 66 minutes. General audience classification. Release date not set.

Zukor Hails Color Tube

The newly developed Chromatic tri-color home television tube was underscored here by Adolph Zukor, board chairman of Paramount Pictures, as in keeping with Paramount's eye-on-the-future policy. Paramount owns a 50 per cent interest in Chromatic Laboratories Inc.

The occasion for Zukor's comments was the induction on Christmas Eve of 32 Paramount employes into the company's 25-Year-Club at the home office in the presence of Barney Balaban, president, and scores of other Paramount executives.

Following welcoming remarks by Balaban, in which he signaled 1953 as the most important year for the industry, Zukor presented to the 32 inductees gold watches to mark their entry into the club. In presenting Zukor to the inductees, Balaban pointed out that the occasion was doubly auspicious in that Zukor, in 1953, will mark the 50th anniversary of his association with Paramount, and its predecessors.

New Members

Those admitted to the 25-Year-Club were: Louis Phillips, Robert Denton, A. J. Richard, Edgar H. Fay, Mary A. ## "Last of the Commanches"

(Columbia)

ACTION AND SUSPENSE, combined with effective outdoor scenery and color by Technicolor, compose the necessary ingredients to satisfy the most demanding outdoor action fans. The story concerns the tragic adventures of a group of soldiers and Western travellers who are seeking to escape to a fort after having been beset by Indian attacks.

Six tattered U. S. Cavalry men, under Broderick Crawford, are the sole survivors of a renegade Commanche raid on a Western village. In their trek across the desert to reach the haven of a fort, they come upon a stage coach in which Barbara Hale is a passenger, thus offering the slight romantic angle. Two additional members of the caravan are picked up en route, Hugh Sanders and Johnny Stewart, the latter a young Indian. When the party takes refuge in an old Spanish mansion, the Indians start their rounds of attack and Crawford sends Stewart through the lines to get cavalry help. With the arrival of the horsemen, the party is saved—just as ammunition and water are about to run out.

Buddy Adler produced and Andre DeToth directed, from a screenplay by Kenneth Gamet.

Others in the cast are Lloyd Bridges, Mickey Shaughnessy, George Matthews, Ric Roman, Chubby Johnson, Martin Parsons, Jack Woody, John War Eagle, Carleton Young, William Andrews.

Running time, 85 minutes. General audience classification. For February release.

"The Importance of Being Earnest"

(J. Arthur Rank Organization-Universal)

THIS FILM VERSION of Oscar Wilde's play is made-to-order for art theatres; its chances for commercial success in regular houses are somewhat remote. It is strictly adult fare, smartly directed and produced, capably acted and further enhanced by rich tones of color by Technicolor. The subtle lines of Wilde's original play have been augmented by equally fine dialogue, made to conform with film requirements. By American standards, the picture might be considered by some to be "too British," and yet it is the British touch that brings out the full appreciation of Wilde's comedy. At times the rapid, clipped English dialogue becomes difficult to follow, but such instances are in the minority. For those who like sophisticated comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest" should have strong appeal.

The story concerns two eligible bachelors, Michael Redgrave and Michael Denison, the former in love with Denison's cousin, Joan Greenwood, and Denison with Dorothy Tutlin, Redgrave's ward. Anxious to keep his freedom as a playboy, Redgrave creates an imaginary brother, Earnest, and in that guise wins Joan's affections. Denison learns of Redgrave's deception and pretends to be Earnest in wooing Dorothy. Thus, each girl believes herself to be engaged to the non-existent Earnest. The resulting entanglements and the untangling of the situations form the basis for the improbable and yet highly amusing episodes.

The stars and supporting players turn in excellent performances under Anthony Asquith's direction and the production guidance of Teddy Baird. Others in the cast are Edith Evans, Margaret Rutherford, Richard Wattis, Miles Malleson, Walter Hudd and Aubrey Mather.

Running time, 95 minutes. Adult classification. December release.

TOA to Study 3-Dimension

The executive committee and the board of directors of the Theatre Owners of America will devote an entire day to the study of three-dimensional films when the TOA leaders meet here next month. Future possibilities of tri-dimensional pictures at the box-office will be discussed thoroughly, according to Herman Levy, TOA general counsel.

Levy said that the TOA executives would view Cinerama at the Broadway Theatre on the night of Monday, Jan. 26 and efforts would be made to obtain a print of "Bwana Devil," the Natural Vision feature, so that they can witness a demonstration of that project on Monday afternoon.

TOA's position on the government's 16mm. anti-trust suit will be decided at the sessions, which will be held Jan. 25-27, Levy said. The organization will determine whether to try to intervene in the case, and, if that step is vetoed, what other action should be taken. Other subjects, such as arbitration and admission taxes, also are on the agenda.

Levy said that between 50 and 60 are expected to attend the meetings which will be held at the Pierre Hotel.

U.K. Film Men, B.B.C. To Air TV Ideas

LONDON, Dec. 28.—An exploratory meeting to discuss, among other things, British Broadcasting Company's need of films for television and what's to be done about it, has been scheduled by the British Film Producers Association for Jan. 1.

Invited to the meeting at BFPA headquarters, in addition to B.B.C.'s television service chief, George Barnes, are William Speakman, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association; Edward Hinge, treasurer, and Walter Fuller, general secretary. They will be present as observers only.

BFPA Policy

Sir Henry French of B.F.P.A. is understood to have prepared a document setting forth the conditions on which BFPA members would like to use large screen TV. British exhibitors remain opposed to cooperation with television but it appears that producers might be willing to discuss some method of making TV films for BBC in return for theatre TV privileges from the government video-radio monopoly.

Significantly, Norman Collins, former BBC television service head, who is now identified with High Definition Films and Associated Broadcasting Development Co., both of which are partly backed by J. Arthur Rank and Sir Alexander Korda, is discussing arrangements for making his film supply available to BBC. His British-made films already have been made available to American and Canadian TV services.

On A.B.-Pathe Board

LONDON, Dec. 28.—W. A. Fielder, for many years general manager of Associated British-Pathe, has been elected a director of the company.

50% Increase In Film Real Estate Deals

Brokers Note Upswing In Sales and Leases

By AL STEEN

Activity in theatre buying and leasing has increased at least 50 per cent in the last year after about a two-year slump, according to Berk and Krumgold, theatre brokers here. Two years ago, the brokers said, "you couldn't give theatres away," but the situation has changed to such an extent that it is becoming difficult to supply the demand.

While some newcomers are coming into the field, most of the activity stems from exhibitors with one or two theatres who are seeking to expand their holdings. However, it was pointed out that the expanding theatre owners are aware of the fact that they must become accustomed to lower grosses than existed during the "lush" years. The spurt in theatre leases and sales, the brokers said, is a sign of renewed optimism in the industry.

Deals for drive-in theatres are

NEWS FLASHES

The MPAA will seek exhibitor reaction to its plan for an industry institutional TV show immediately after the new year, so that the project can be formulated quickly, even though the show may not hit TV screens until late in the year. Preliminary details are expected to be perfected within the first three months of the year, it is reported.

OTTAWA, Dec. 29.-A government trade survey reports that the total revenue of Canadian film distributing companies reached a new record of $29,225,867 during 1951 from all bookings, as compared with $26,800,789 in the preceeding year.

B'WAY THEATRES IN HOLIDAY BOOM

UPT Tells of 20% Holiday Upswing

Business for the four-day Christmas weekend was about 20 per cent higher this year than last year at houses affiliated with United Paramount Theatres, a UPT spokesman disclosed here yesterday. He credited the rise to a multiplicity of factors, including strong product.

Hall, Victoria, Capitol, Roxy Break Records in Post-Christmas Business

Booming Broadway business for the four-day Christmas holiday sent first-run New York grosses spiraling this week amid reports from other sections of the country of robust holiday grosses, certain to continue through Sunday.

Records were broken at the Radio City Music Hall, Victoria, Roxy, and Capitol. Most New York neighborhood circuit houses reported grosses either on a par with Christmas week last year or better. Other favorable reports came from the extensive United Paramount Theatres circuit and the smaller Shea circuit.

At the Radio City Music Hall, a 20-year record gross of $187,000 is estimated for the fourth week of "Million Dollar Mermaid" and the Hall's traditional stage show. The Hall's last previous high was set during the Christmas week of 1951, when $180,068 was racked up.

Another house record was broken at the Victoria Theatre, featuring the

Snaper Slated for Allied Reelection

Wilbur Snaper appears to be in line for reelection as president of national Allied when the board of directors meets in New Orleans next month. With the exception of Al Steffes and James C. Ritter in the early 1930's, every president has served at least two terms. Steffes and Ritter headed the organization for only one year each and Col. H. A. Cole was reelected for a third term, serving from 1939 through 1941. Abram F. Myers, general counsel, was president in the early days of the association, heading Allied from 1929 through 1931. Unless Snaper rejects the nomination, it is believed among Allied members

3-Dimensional Films Here To Stay: Irving Lesser

Three dimensional motion pictures are the next major development in the history of the film industry and are here to stay, it was stated here yesterday by Irving Lesser who, with Seymour Poe of Producers Representatives, will supervise the distribution of Sol Lesser's Tri-Opticon project. The tri-dimensional picture is in the same position that talking pictures were in 1927 and exhibitors might as well prepare for the inevitable, he said.

Lesser explained that Tri-Opticon was launched officially in Chicago on Christmas Day at the Telenews Theatre where it is heading for a $30,000 week. The house average is between $4,000 and $5,000, he said. The initial program consists of five short subjects, running approximately an hour. The next opening will be at the Pilgrim Theatre in Boston on

'52 Hall Record of $6,855,000 Seen

As 1952 draws to a close, a record 12-month gross of $6,855,000 is indicated for Radio City Music Hall. This year's estimated figure tops the record set in 1951 of $6,811,769, the previous high in the 20-year operation of the Hall.

Industry in N.W. Complains About Shipment Delays

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 29.—Exchangemen in this Northwest area are up in arms over what is described as a long and needless delay in returning prints to film offices, complaining that prints requiring only one day to deliver to theatres are delayed three days on the return trip.

They charge that the problem has become so acute it may have to be placed in the hands of the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission and the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission to force the creation of a film and theatre supply delivery service run independently of existing haulage concerns. The problem is in getting the film back to the exchange in time for adequate inspection and reshipment within a short time. At present the slow returns sometime mean that a badly-needed print is out of circulation for as long a period as two weeks.

The bottleneck is said to be on hauls where shipments are subject to truck relay. If a print which closes a weekend run on Sunday night misses a pick-up at the relay point, it is sometimes three days before it makes its way back to the exchange.

Film companies state that under the present system of contract carriers there is no central point where a trace can be made and that if the film is delayed in transit either to or from the exhibitor, neither the exhibitor nor the film company can check its whereabouts.

A previous appeal to the ICC for help in regulating the shipments failed because the ICC pointed out that the shipments were a matter of contract between the trucking firm and the exhibitor.

Although the film companies are reluctant to enforce it, there is said to be a clause in film contracts providing penalties against exhibitors for the late return of film. Distributors doubt that such drastic action will be taken but said that in cases where film is habitually late in return exchanges may refuse to sell film or impose rigid regulations covering pickup and return.

'The Jazz Singer' Premiere Tonight

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 29. — The stage is all set for the world premiere tomorrow night of Warner Brothers' "The Jazz Singer," at the Fox Beverly Theatre in Beverly Hills. Scores of stars and celebrities from all walks of life will join with fans from nearly every section of America in giving 1952 a film season farewell at the premiere of the Technicolor musical starring Danny Thomas and Peggy Lee. As a result of the influx of holiday visitors, the theatre was sold out days in advance of the event, with the studio announcing an all-time record in out-of-town reservations.

The uniforms of the Armed Forces also will be plentifully represented. Congressmen, governors of numerous states and mayors of many cities have reserved seats for service men and women from their respective communities. Members of the first "Jazz Singer" cast and crew, including William Demarest and May MacAvoy, two of the stars, will attend.

News syndicates and radio networks have arranged to carry the premiere ceremonies around the world, even penetrating behind the Iron Curtain. The globe-girdling radio broadcasts will be made in foreign languages, as well as in English.

In New York, a special premiere of "The Jazz Singer" for the benefit of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis will take place at the Paramount Theatre on Tuesday evening, Jan. 13.

Hollywood, Dec. 29.—With a five-day gross of nearly $22,000 racked up as of last night, John Huston's "Moulin Rouge" is running well ahead of his last film, "African Queen," which opened in the Fox Wilshire Theatre here at Christmas time a year ago.

"Moulin Rouge," playing the same theatre, grossed well over $5,000 yesterday for the biggest single day's business in the history of the house. Gross for the first week, ending tomorrow night, will be a record for any United Artists release ever to play the Fox Wilshire.

N. Y. Critics

Fred Zinneman the best director of the year for his direction of "High Noon."

Shirley Booth was voted best actress of the year for her role in the Hal Wallis production, "Come Back, Little Sneba," a Paramount release.

Ralph Richardson was voted best actor of the year for his performance in the English-made, "Breaking the Sound Barrier," a United Artists release here.

French Film Wins

The French production, "Forbidden Games," released here by Times Film Corp., was voted the best foreign picture of the year.

Under the critics' voting method, a two-thirds majority is required to designate a winner on any one of the first five ballots. A simple majority is sufficient on the sixth and final ballot, if one is necessary. "High Noon" won on a sixth ballot, with "African Queen," also a United Artists release, the runner-up.

Shirley Booth was named on the first ballot, with the task of the 15 voting critics simplified as a result of their being only one other nomination, that of Katharine Hepburn for her performance in "African Queen."

Zinneman won on the second ballot. Richardson won on the sixth by a vote of 10 to Charlie Chaplin's five for his performance in "Limelight." The critics also took six ballots to decide their best foreign film of the year, "Forbidden Games" winning over "The White Line" by an eight to six vote. One critic abstained on the ground she had not caught enough foreign films to be eligible to vote.

Technicolor Plans

would have a number of advantages for the European motion picture industry. They would make possible more prompt service and reduce costs.

"As it is now, cameras and crews to operate them have to be brought in from Hollywood or from England. Rush prints would be available at the end of each day's work, instead of after appreciable delay.

"Financial exchange problems would be minimized and payments of duty would be eliminated, and, of course, employment opportunity would be afforded citizens of the country," stated Kalmus.

Holiday Grosses

first week of "Come Back, Little Sheba," which is expected to register a sturdy $57,000. At the reopened Roxy, the initial week of "Stars and Stripes Forever" and the "Icecolorama" show set a new Christmas week record of $157,000.

At the Capitol, the initial week of Johnnie Ray on stage and "Against All Flags" on the screen is expected to hit a terrific $110,000. The holiday weekend at the Capitol saw the greatest number of admissions in the theatre's history.

'April in Paris' Excellent

The first seven days of "April in Paris" at the Paramount, which also features Sarah Vaughan on stage, is due to hit an excellent $108,000. A very nice $42,000 is expected for the opening week of "Blackbeard the Pirate" at Loew's State. "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris also is doing top business. A big $60,000 is due for the fifth week of the Samuel Goldwyn production at the Criterion, while a terrific $23,500 is slated for the Paris, also a fifth week for the picture.

At the Rivoli, a pretty good $50,000 is forecast for the first week of "My Cousin Rachel," while at the Mayfair a fine $25,000 is indicated for the initial seven days of "Ruby Gentry." "Limelight" at the Astor and the two-day-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux did quite well, with $20,000 indicated for the tenth week of the picture at the Astor and $7,500 at the 60th Street Trans-Lux. A fairly good $15,000 is seen for the second and final week of "Pony Soldier" at the Globe, where "Eight Iron Men" will have its bow Thursday.

Circuits Report

Among the New York neighborhood circuits reporting business good were RKO Theatres and Loew's Theatres. The Brandt circuit reported that grosses were on a par with last year's Christmas business, while a number of Trans-Lux houses reported holiday business less than anticipated.

The Broadway upswing was also felt by first-run houses off the main stem. "The Importance of Being Earnest" set a record of $12,000 for its first week at the Baronet. At the Fine Arts, a big $10,800 is due for the tenth week of "The Promoter." The initial seven days of "No Time for Flowers" at the Normanide is expected to rack up a fine $9,000, while a fairly good $5,800 is indicated for the final six days of "The Four Poster" at the Sutton. The Sutton's new attraction which opens today is "The Member of the Wedding."

With extra holiday showings, "This Is Cinerama" at the Broadway Theatre is forecast to hit a tremendous $42,000. "O. Henry's Full House" at the Trans-Lux 52nd Street is predicted to do a nice $6,000 for its 11th week.

Tri-Opticon Premiere Hailed As Success

CHICAGO, Dec. 29. — The U. S. premiere of Tri-Opticon at the Telenews Theatre here was a resounding success, breaking the single day record at the 600-seat Loop house with a gross of $5,000. Tri-opticon is expected to turn in the biggest week in the 13-year history of the house.

Elsewhere in the Loop, business picked up nicely to wind up much better than Christmas Day last year. Outlying business was spotty, being very good in some locations and mediocre in others.

'Road' Leads Boston Parade

BOSTON, Dec. 29.—The Metropolitan, featuring "Road to Bali," and the Astor, now playing "Hans Christian Andersen," led the holiday field among first-run theatres here. The Metropolitan is expected to gross $40,000 for the six day holiday period, ending tomorrow night, while the Astor is due to hit $40,000 for the Christmas holiday week, with advanced admission prices. Other theatres reported business ranging from excellent to fair.

Cleveland Spotty

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29. — Christmas Day business was very good to fair at Downtown first-runs. However, most neighborhood theatres reported grosses slow except the Fairmount where "The Promoter" is featured. Exceptionally good business at the majority of out-of-town theatres was reported. Good business was reported by the Loew and Warner Downstate houses and by the Select Theatre chain with theatres in various parts of Northern Ohio. Weather was clear with scattered snow flurries.

Up in Chatanooga

CHATTANOOGA, Dec. 29.—With the Tivoli probably going strongest with "Million Dollar Mermaid," the Rogers with "Meet Captain Kid" and the State with "It Grows on Trees," Chattanooga theatre managers say "this year's holiday business easily topped 1951."

Knoxville Grosses

KNOXVILLE, Dec. 29.—With "Operation Secret" moving over to the Bijou for a holdover after an unexpectedly good run at the Tennessee, "Million Dollar Mermaid" opened at the Tennessee with a full house, topping last year's holiday business. Knoxville has no television.

Best in 3 Years

NASHVILLE, Dec. 29.—With "Meet Me at the Fair" at the Tennessee and "Stars and Stripes Forever" at the Paramount, Crescent houses in Nashville scored the best holiday business in three years. Sales of theatre ticket books for gifts went well, with an automobile as the top prize in a sales contest.

'Hans' Sets Records in Boston, Miami Beach

Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" broke box-office records in Christmas Day openings at the Astor Theatre in Boston and the Colony Theatre in Miami Beach, it is reported, with the first four days at the Colony grossing $11,500 and the same period at the Astor drawing $26,000.

The film will outscore by more than 50 per cent the previous record-holder at the Astor, Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives," it was said. At the Colony, the film has played to capacity audiences at every performance. Meanwhile, in New York, the picture begins its sixth week at the Paris and Criterion theatres, with the fifth week reportedly almost equalling that of the opening session.

Here to Stay

Jan. 15. After these two engagements, Lesser and Poe will evaluate the presentations before additional bookings will be taken. However, the Victoria Theatre here has asked for a Tri-Opticon run after the closing of the current attraction, "Come Back, Little Sheba." No deal has been set.

Three more short subjects are now in production on the Coast and a script for a feature length picture, "The Runaway Train," has been completed, Poe said.

Four-part Package

Tri-Opticon is delivered to theatres in a four-part package, consisting of a metalized screen, the film, a coupling device for interlocking the projectors and the polaroid glasses. Unlike other tri-dimensional processes, Tri-Opticon furnishes permanent glasses instead of cardboard throwaways. The glasses are sterilized after each use. The depth effect cannot be achieved on an ordinary beaded screen, it was explained.

Distribution will be handled by Max Roth, headquartering in Chicago, for the Central territories, while Jack Thomas will head up the distribution in the Far West, with headquarters in Los Angeles. The major initial task in launching the project is the advertising and publicity. Because the public and the trade must be educated to the scope of the new medium, extensive campaigns are being planned for newspapers and the trade press, Lesser said.

Grainger Heads

will make a minimum of 20 features in 1953, with starting dates now set on the first two; five others are ready to follow.

"Arizona Territory," with Grainger as producer, and "Second Chance," with Wiesenthal as producer and Grainger as executive producer, have been given January starting dates.

Also headed for early starts are producer Robert Sparks' "The Son of Sinbad"; "The Silver Horde," a Rex Beach story; a Park Ranger story to be made in one of the National Parks, titled "High Frontier"; Harriet Parsons' "Size 12," and several stories recently submitted that the studio is considering purchasing.

It was also announced again that "the studio will consider any independent productions which are of top calibre which are submitted, although the present schedule of 20 films is sufficient to meet the distribution organization's demands."

Defendants will have 30 days in which to answer the amended complaint following its filing.

William C. Dixon, Western chief of the anti-trust division, and James M. McGrath, who has handled the 16mm. case directly, represented the government in the all-day session.

Ten defendant requests which the court denied pertained principally to relationships between individual defendants.

Exchangemen to Aid Federation Drive

Len Gruenberg, of RKO Radio Pictures, has been named chairman of the exchangemen's committee of the amusement division of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, it has been announced by over-all co-chairmen Barney Balaban, Simon H. Fabian and Manny Frisch.

In the process of completing organization of the industry in support of the current $20,000,000 city-wide maintenance effort on behalf of Federation's 116 hospitals and social service agencies, the co-chairmen also announced a Federation committee in film exchanges consisting of the following:

Denied Relief from New Mexican Law

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 29.—Exhibitors have partially lost their litigation against enforcement of the recently-enacted cinematographic controls law. Two hundred exhibitors in the provinces, of the syndicate that Manuel Espinosa Iglesias heads, were denied a temporary injunction against the law's enforcement by Federal Judge Ignacio Burgoa here. These exhibitors contended that the law is unconstitutional in that it gives the government almost complete control of the film trade. They also attacked the measure on the ground of violation of the constitutional precept of free trade by demanding 50 per cent playing time for Mexican pictures.

Judge Burgoa, who last year granted a group of exhibitors a permanent injunction against enforcement of a cinematographic law then impending on the ground that it was unconstitutional, explained that he refused the 200 exhibitors an injunction because they had failed to make out a clear case of the unconstitutionality of the present law.

Denney to Study TV for Paramount

Charles E. Denney, Jr., will join the staff of Paul Raibourn, president of Paramount Television Productions, immediately. Denney, who was formerly an account executive with National Broadcasting, will conduct a survey of the social and economic aspects of local, as compared with national programming in television.

Denney's first assignment will be a study of the factors in the Los Angeles market under the supervision of Klaus Landsberg, general manager of Station KTLA.

This is due not only to the fact that the car theatres are doing big business in the warm months but because many of them are operating in the winter even in cold areas. The brisk business in sales and leases is not confined to any one territory, it was said. The boom is nationwide.

50% Increase In Film Real Estate Deals

Brokers Note Upswing In Sales and Leases

By AL STEEN

Activity in theatre buying and leasing has increased at least 50 per cent in the last year after about a two-year slump, according to Berk and Krumgold, theatre brokers here. Two years ago, the brokers said, "you couldn't give theatres away," but the situation has changed to such an extent that it is becoming difficult to supply the demand.

While some newcomers are coming into the field, most of the activity stems from exhibitors with one or two theatres who are seeking to expand their holdings. However, it was pointed out that the expanding theatre owners are aware of the fact that they must become accustomed to lower grosses than existed during the "lush" years. The spurt in theatre leases and sales, the brokers said, is a sign of renewed optimism in the industry.

Deals for drive-in theatres are

Exhibitor Reaction Sought on TV Show

Exhibitor reaction to the Motion Picture Association of America's plan for an industry institutional television show will be sought by the MPAA immediately after Jan. 1 so that the project can be formulated as quickly as possible. While the proposed TV program may not hit home screens until late in 1953, preliminary details are expected to be perfected within the first three months of the new year, it was reported here.

Exhibitors will be informed that the proposed telecasts are being designed as a business-builder for theatres and not as a form of competition. It is reported that Hollywood guilds will not be contacted until after exhibitors have given their approval.

B'WAY THEATRES IN HOLIDAY BOOM

UPT Tells of 20% Holiday Upswing

Business for the four-day Christmas weekend was about 20 per cent higher this year than last year at houses affiliated with United Paramount Theatres, a UPT spokesman disclosed here yesterday. He credited the rise to a multiplicity of factors, including strong product.

Hall, Victoria, Capitol, Roxy Break Records in Post-Christmas Business

Booming Broadway business for the four-day Christmas holiday sent first-run New York grosses spiraling this week amid reports from other sections of the country of robust holiday grosses, certain to continue through Sunday.

Records were broken at the Radio City Music Hall, Victoria, Roxy, and Capitol. Most New York neighborhood circuit houses reported grosses either on a par with Christmas week last year or better. Other favorable reports came from the extensive United Paramount Theatres circuit and the smaller Shea circuit.

At the Radio City Music Hall, a 20-year record gross of $187,000 is estimated for the fourth week of "Million Dollar Mermaid" and the Hall's traditional stage show. The Hall's last previous high was set during the Christmas week of 1951, when $180,068 was racked up.

Another house record was broken at the Victoria Theatre, featuring the

Snaper Slated for Allied Reelection

Wilbur Snaper appears to be in line for reelection as president of national Allied when the board of directors meets in New Orleans next month. With the exception of Al Steffes and James C. Ritter in the early 1930's, every president has served at least two terms. Steffes and Ritter headed the organization for only one year each and Col. H. A. Cole was reelected for a third term, serving from 1939 through 1941. Abram F. Myers, general counsel, was president in the early days of the association, heading Allied from 1929 through 1931. Unless Snaper rejects the nomination, it is believed among Allied members

3-Dimensional Films Here To Stay: Irving Lesser

Three dimensional motion pictures are the next major development in the history of the film industry and are here to stay, it was stated here yesterday by Irving Lesser who, with Seymour Poe of Producers Representatives, will supervise the distribution of Sol Lesser's Tri-Opticon project. The tri-dimensional picture is in the same position that talking pictures were in 1927 and exhibitors might as well prepare for the inevitable, he said.

Lesser explained that Tri-Opticon was launched officially in Chicago on Christmas Day at the Telenews Theatre where it is heading for a $30,000 week. The house average is between $4,000 and $5,000, he said. The initial program consists of five short subjects, running approximately an hour. The next opening will be at the Pilgrim Theatre in Boston on

Industry in N.W. Complains About Shipment Delays

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 29.—Exchangemen in this Northwest area are up in arms over what is described as a long and needless delay in returning prints to film offices, complaining that prints requiring only one day to deliver to theatres are delayed three days on the return trip.

They charge that the problem has become so acute it may have to be placed in the hands of the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission and the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission to force the creation of a film and theatre supply delivery service run independently of existing haulage concerns. The problem is in getting the film back to the exchange in time for adequate inspection and reshipment within a short time. At present the slow returns sometime mean that a badly-needed print is out of circulation for as long a period as two weeks.

The bottleneck is said to be on hauls where shipments are subject to truck relay. If a print which closes a weekend run on Sunday night misses a pick-up at the relay point, it is sometimes three days before it makes its way back to the exchange.

Film companies state that under the present system of contract carriers there is no central point where a trace can be made and that if the film is delayed in transit either to or from the exhibitor, neither the exhibitor nor the film company can check its whereabouts.

A previous appeal to the ICC for help in regulating the shipments failed because the ICC pointed out that the shipments were a matter of contract between the trucking firm and the exhibitor.

Although the film companies are reluctant to enforce it, there is said to be a clause in film contracts providing penalties against exhibitors for the late return of film. Distributors doubt that such drastic action will be taken but said that in cases where film is habitually late in return exchanges may refuse to sell film or impose rigid regulations covering pickup and return.

'The Jazz Singer' Premiere Tonight

As a result of the influx of holiday visitors, the theatre was sold out days in advance of the event, with the studio announcing an all-time record in out-of-town reservations.

The uniforms of the Armed Forces also will be plentifully represented. Congressmen, governors of numerous states and mayors of many cities have reserved seats for service men and women from their respective communities. Members of the first "Jazz Singer" cast and crew, including William Demarest and May MacAvoy, two of the stars, will attend.

News syndicates and radio networks have arranged to carry the premiere ceremonies around the world, even penetrating behind the Iron Curtain. The globe-girdling radio broadcasts will be made in foreign languages, as well as in English.

In New York, a special premiere of "The Jazz Singer" for the benefit of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis will take place at the Paramount Theatre on Tuesday evening, Jan. 13.

Hollywood, Dec. 29.—With a five-day gross of nearly $22,000 racked up as of last night, John Huston's "Moulin Rouge" is running well ahead of his last film, "African Queen," which opened in the Fox Wilshire Theatre here at Christmas time a year ago.

"Moulin Rouge," playing the same theatre, grossed well over $5,000 yesterday for the biggest single day's business in the history of the house. Gross for the first week, ending tomorrow night, will be a record for any United Artists release ever to play the Fox Wilshire.

N. Y. Critics

Fred Zinneman the best director of the year for his direction of "High Noon."

Shirley Booth was voted best actress of the year for her role in the Hal Wallis production, "Come Back, Little Sheba," a Paramount release.

Ralph Richardson was voted best actor of the year for his performance in the English-made, "Breaking the Sound Barrier," a United Artists release here.

French Film Wins

The French production, "Forbidden Games," released here by Times Film Corp., was voted the best foreign picture of the year.

Under the critics' voting method, a two-thirds majority is required to designate a winner on any one of the first five ballots. A simple majority is sufficient on the sixth and final ballot, if one is necessary. "High Noon" won on a sixth ballot, with "African Queen," also a United Artists release, the runner-up.

Shirley Booth was named on the first ballot, with the task of the 15 voting critics simplified as a result of their being only one other nomination, that of Katharine Hepburn for her performance in "African Queen."

Zinneman won on the second ballot. Richardson won on the sixth by a vote of 10 to Charlie Chaplin's five for his performance in "Limelight." The critics also took six ballots to decide their best foreign film of the year, "Forbidden Games" winning over "The White Line" by an eight to six vote. One critic abstained on the ground she had not caught enough foreign films to be eligible to vote.

Technicolor Plans

would have a number of advantages for the European motion picture industry. They would make possible more prompt service and reduce costs.

"As it is now, cameras and crews to operate them have to be brought in from Hollywood or from England. Rush prints would be available at the end of each day's work, instead of after appreciable delay.

"Financial exchange problems would be minimized and payments of duty would be eliminated, and, of course, employment opportunity would be afforded citizens of the country," stated Kalmus.

Holiday Grosses

first week of "Come Back, Little Sheba," which is expected to register a sturdy $57,000. At the reopened Roxy, the initial week of "Stars and Stripes Forever" and the "Icecolorama" show set a new Christmas week record of $157,000.

At the Capitol, the initial week of Johnnie Ray on stage and "Against All Flags" on the screen is expected to hit a terrific $110,000. The holiday weekend at the Capitol saw the greatest number of admissions in the theatre's history.

'April in Paris' Excellent

The first seven days of "April in Paris" at the Paramount, which also features Sarah Vaughan on stage, is due to hit an excellent $108,000. A very nice $42,000 is expected for the opening week of "Blackbeard the Pirate" at Loew's State. "Hans Christian Andersen" at the Criterion and the off-Broadway Paris also is doing top business. A big $60,000 is due for the fifth week of the Samuel Goldwyn production at the Criterion, while a terrific $23,500 is slated for the Paris, also a fifth week for the picture.

At the Rivoli, a pretty good $50,000 is forecast for the first week of "My Cousin Rachel," while at the Mayfair a fine $25,000 is indicated for the initial seven days of "Ruby Gentry." "Limelight" at the Astor and the two-day-a-day 60th Street Trans-Lux did quite well, with $20,000 indicated for the tenth week of the picture at the Astor and $7,500 at the 60th Street Trans-Lux. A fairly good $15,000 is seen for the second and final week of "Pony Soldier" at the Globe, where "Eight Iron Men" will have its bow Thursday.

Circuits Report

Among the New York neighborhood circuits reporting business good were RKO Theatres and Loew's Theatres. The Brandt circuit reported that grosses were on a par with last year's Christmas business, while a number of Trans-Lux houses reported holiday business less than anticipated.

The Broadway upswing was also felt by first-run houses off the main stem. "The Importance of Being Earnest" set a record of $12,000 for its first week at the Baronet. At the Fine Arts, a big $10,800 is due for the tenth week of "The Promoter." The initial seven days of "No Time for Flowers" at the Normanide is expected to rack up a fine $9,000, while a fairly good $5,800 is indicated for the final six days of "The Four Poster" at the Sutton. The Sutton's new attraction which opens today is "The Member of the Wedding."

With extra holiday showings, "This Is Cinerama" at the Broadway Theatre is forecast to hit a tremendous $42,000. "O. Henry's Full House" at the Trans-Lux 52nd Street is predicted to do a nice $6,000 for its 11th week.

Tri-Opticon Premiere Hailed As Success

CHICAGO, Dec. 29. — The U. S. premiere of Tri-Opticon at the Telenews Theatre here was a resounding success, breaking the single day record at the 600-seat Loop house with a gross of $5,000. Tri-opticon is expected to turn in the biggest week in the 13-year history of the house.

Elsewhere in the Loop, business picked up nicely to wind up much better than Christmas Day last year. Outlying business was spotty, being very good in some locations and mediocre in others.

'Road' Leads Boston Parade

BOSTON, Dec. 29.—The Metropolitan, featuring "Road to Bali," and the Astor, now playing "Hans Christian Andersen," led the holiday field among first-run theatres here. The Metropolitan is expected to gross $40,000 for the six day holiday period, ending tomorrow night, while the Astor is due to hit $40,000 for the Christmas holiday week, with advanced admission prices. Other theatres reported business ranging from excellent to fair.

Cleveland Spotty

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29. — Christmas Day business was very good to fair at Downtown first-runs. However, most neighborhood theatres reported grosses slow except the Fairmount where "The Promoter" is featured. Exceptionally good business at the majority of out-of-town theatres was reported. Good business was reported by the Loew and Warner Downstate houses and by the Select Theatre chain with theatres in various parts of Northern Ohio. Weather was clear with scattered snow flurries.

Up in Chatanooga

CHATTANOOGA, Dec. 29.—With the Tivoli probably going strongest with "Million Dollar Mermaid," the Rogers with "Meet Captain Kid" and the State with "It Grows on Trees," Chattanooga theatre managers say "this year's holiday business easily topped 1951."

Knoxville Grosses

KNOXVILLE, Dec. 29.—With "Operation Secret" moving over to the Bijou for a holdover after an unexpectedly good run at the Tennessee, "Million Dollar Mermaid" opened at the Tennessee with a full house, topping last year's holiday business. Knoxville has no television.

Best in 3 Years

NASHVILLE, Dec. 29.—With "Meet Me at the Fair" at the Tennessee and "Stars and Stripes Forever" at the Paramount, Crescent houses in Nashville scored the best holiday business in three years. Sales of theatre ticket books for gifts went well, with an automobile as the top prize in a sales contest.

'Hans' Sets Records in Boston, Miami Beach

Samuel Goldwyn's "Hans Christian Andersen" broke box-office records in Christmas Day openings at the Astor Theatre in Boston and the Colony Theatre in Miami Beach, it is reported, with the first four days at the Colony grossing $11,500 and the same period at the Astor drawing $26,000.

The film will outscore by more than 50 per cent the previous record-holder at the Astor, Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives," it was said. At the Colony, the film has played to capacity audiences at every performance. Meanwhile, in New York, the picture begins its sixth week at the Paris and Criterion theatres, with the fifth week reportedly almost equalling that of the opening session.

Jan. 15. After these two engagements, Lesser and Poe will evaluate the presentations before additional bookings will be taken. However, the Victoria Theatre here has asked for a Tri-Opticon run after the closing of the current attraction, "Come Back, Little Sheba." No deal has been set.

Three more short subjects are now in production on the Coast and a script for a feature length picture, "The Runaway Train," has been completed, Poe said.

Four-part Package

Tri-Opticon is delivered to theatres in a four-part package, consisting of a metalized screen, the film, a coupling device for interlocking the projectors and the polaroid glasses. Unlike other tri-dimensional processes, Tri-Opticon furnishes permanent glasses instead of cardboard throwaways. The glasses are sterilized after each use. The depth effect cannot be achieved on an ordinary beaded screen, it was explained.

Distribution will be handled by Max Roth, headquartering in Chicago, for the Central territories, while Jack Thomas will head up the distribution in the Far West, with headquarters in Los Angeles. The major initial task in launching the project is the advertising and publicity. Because the public and the trade must be educated to the scope of the new medium, extensive campaigns are being planned for newspapers and the trade press, Lesser said.

will make a minimum of 20 features in 1953, with starting dates now set on the first two; five others are ready to follow.

"Arizona Territory," with Grainger as producer, and "Second Chance," with Wiesenthal as producer and Grainger as executive producer, have been given January starting dates.

Also headed for early starts are producer Robert Sparks' "The Son of Sinbad"; "The Silver Horde," a Rex Beach story; a Park Ranger story to be made in one of the National Parks, titled "High Frontier"; Harriet Parsons' "Size 12," and several stories recently submitted that the studio is considering purchasing.

It was also announced again that "the studio will consider any independent productions which are of top calibre which are submitted, although the present schedule of 20 films is sufficient to meet the distribution organization's demands."

Denied Relief from New Mexican Law

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 29.—Exhibitors have partially lost their litigation against enforcement of the recently-enacted cinematographic controls law. Two hundred exhibitors in the provinces, of the syndicate that Manuel Espinosa Iglesias heads, were denied a temporary injunction against the law's enforcement by Federal Judge Ignacio Burgoa here. These exhibitors contended that the law is unconstitutional in that it gives the government almost complete control of the film trade. They also attacked the measure on the ground of violation of the constitutional precept of free trade by demanding 50 per cent playing time for Mexican pictures.

Judge Burgoa, who last year granted a group of exhibitors a permanent injunction against enforcement of a cinematographic law then impending on the ground that it was unconstitutional, explained that he refused the 200 exhibitors an injunction because they had failed to make out a clear case of the unconstitutionality of the present law.

Newspapers, Wire Services Here and Abroad Carry Herald Poll of 'Money-Making Stars'

London, Dec. 29.—Newspapers throughout the British Isles gave unusual prominence to the Motion Picture Herald-Fame polls of American and British box-office champions of 1952, voted by exhibitors of the two countries. Results of the polls also were featured on British Broadcasting Co. programs.

Special comment was given to the survey's disclosure that eight British pictures figure among the 12 top-grossing films on this side in 1952. Responsible industry executives here commented that the newspaper space and radio time devoted to the poll stories constituted a valuable contribution not only to British production but to the whole industry here as well.

Newspapers and magazine supplements throughout the United States, as well as national and foreign wire services, also featured the 21st annual Motion Picture Herald-Fame poll of "Money-Making Stars of 1952" over the past weekend, from Friday through Sunday.

Eastern Film Group Starting Pact Talks

The newly-formed Eastern Motion Picture Council, set up by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, will start negotiating for its first contracts with New York television film producers shortly after Jan. 1, it was reported here yesterday. Purpose of the Council is to obtain basic pacts for the various production crafts in the TV film and independent commercial picture production fields. The group's constitution, recently drafted, has been approved by a majority of participating unions.

especially active, the brokers said. This is due not only to the fact that the car theatres are doing big business in the warm months but because many of them are operating in the winter even in cold areas. Locally, the Bronx Whitestone and the Route S-3 drive-ins are currently in operation despite the low temperatures. The Route S-3 is furnishing car heaters to its patrons.

The brisk business in sales and leases is not confined to any one territory, it was said. The boom is nationwide.

WB Reports $7,229,000 Net Profit

Fiscal Year Earnings Below 1951's Figure

Warner Brothers Pictures and subsidiary companies report for the year ending Aug. 31, 1952, a net profit of $7,229,000 after provision of $7,700,000 for Federal income taxes and after a provision of $550,000 for contingent liabilities. The net profit for the year ending Aug. 31, 1951, amounted to $9,427,000 after provision of $9,100,000 for Federal income taxes and after a provision of $700,000 for contingent liabilities.

Included in the current operating profit is a profit of $878,000 from sales of capital assets, before provision for Federal incomes taxes, which compares with a corresponding profit of $1,189,000 for the previous year.

The net profit for the year is equivalent to $1.46 per share on 4,950,600

UA Foreign Business Up 100%, Picker Reports

United Artists' income from foreign distribution during the fiscal year ended Nov. 1 was approximately double that of the previous 12-month period, according to Arnold M. Picker, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution. Picker, who has returned from a four-week tour of the Far East, said here yesterday that the rise in business was due not only to the product but a renewal of faith in the company by exhibitors.

Arnold Picker

Picker, in reviewing his latest overseas trip, revealed, among other things, (1) the appointment of new executive personnel in the Far East, (2) signing of important circuit deals, (3) plans for the distribution of a picture made in Manila, (4) plans for the opening of the company's own branch in Indonesia and (5) improved business conditions throughout the area.

Picker said the foreign department still is in the process of reorganization, the task he assumed when he took over the post a year ago. He said he

WB Theatre Sale Extension Is Due

A "substantial" extension in time for the divestiture of 54 Warner Brothers theatres, in line with the terms of the company's consent decree, is expected shortly, it was learned here yesterday.

Negotiations between company attorneys and Department of Justice officials, looking toward an extension from the Sunday deadline, have been going on both here and in Washington. Documents authorizing such an extension, the duration of which was not made public, are due here any day.

A company spokesman said the extension had nothing to do with the recent deal between Fabian Enterprises and the Brothers Warner, under which Fabian acquired the brothers' projected stock interest in Warner theatres.

WB Net Profit

shares of common stock outstanding. The net profit for the previous year was equivalent to $1.67 per share, on 5,619,785 shares of common stock then outstanding.

Film rentals, theatre admissions, sales, etc., after eliminating intercompany transactions, for the year ending last Aug. 31, amounted to $112,422,000, compared with $116,909,000 for the previous year.

Loss and damage claims resulting from the two fires at the Burbank studio were settled with the insurance companies subsequent to Aug. 31, for $4,515,690. Because the insurance carried was based on the replacement cost rather than on the depreciated book value of the properties, the insurance claims were for a substantially greater amount than the book value of such properties. Final determination of the assets to be replaced and the treatment for Federal income tax purposes of the excess of the insurance proceeds over the book value of the assets destroyed has not yet been made and, accordingly, no portion of such excess has been reflected in the net profit for the year.

The operating results of the company for the quarter ending Nov. 29, 1952, are not yet available but it is expected that the profit before capital gains and before provision for Federal income taxes and contingencies will be considerably lower than the corresponding profit of $4,170,000 earned for the same quarter last year.

week a year ago.

Seven attractions declaredly pointed at Academy consideration, and exploited on a grand scale accordingly, stacked up roughly as follows:

"Hans Christian Andersen," Warner's Beverly Hills Theatre, $45,000; "Member of the Wedding," Beverly Hills Canon, $7,500; "My Cousin Rachel," Fox Ritz, $14,500; "Moulin Rouge," Fox Wilshire, $25,000; "Star," Four Star, $12,500; "Come Back Little Sheba," Fine Arts, $9,000; "The Bad and the Beautiful," United Artists and Vogue theatres, $30,000.

Sharing in the prosperity wave are "Road to Bali," likely to gross close to $100,000 in seven area openings, "Million Dollar Mermaid," looking for $33,000 in two, and "Blackbeard the Pirate," aiming for similar figures at two others.

Chicago First-run Holiday Grosses Called Phenomenal

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—First run business here since the middle of last week has been little short of phenomenal, with some houses racking up their highs for the year. The Telenews probably will go over $30,000, a house record, for the opening week of Tri-Opticon's premiere showing.

The Chicago, with sidewalk holdouts all week long, showing "April in Paris," plus an ice show on the stage, should top $75,000. "Road to Bali" appears to be headed for $40,000 at the State Lake, as does "Million Dollar Mermaid" at the Oriental, with "Stars and Stripes Forever" and "Against All Flags" racking up $30,000 at Eitel's Palace and the Roosevelt, respectively, and "Invasion U. S. A." and "Red Planet Mars" winding up a big session of better than $20,000 at the RKO Grand.

At the art houses, "One Summer of Happiness" is going strong at the World Playhouse with $8,000 in prospect for the first week, and "The Promoter" is running ahead of "Lavender Hill Mob" and "Man in the White Suit" at the Surf and could top "Kon-Tiki" with a boost from the New Year holidays.

Total Christmas Week Gross in Kansas City Same as in 1951

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 30.—The total gross for Christmas week of area theatres appears on present data to have been about equal to that of 1951 with numerous reports of gains. Christmas Day receipts were called generally up to or ahead of last year's. Attendance that week was strikingly better than the average during the previous months in many situations when patronage seemed lagging behind commodity buying.

Several executives suggested that the fact of theatres on the whole getting not far from their full traditional share of holiday spending offers a fair index for expecting good health for the theatre business in the coming year. In cities marked selectivity of feature was evident, some theatres getting substantially above average grosses, others substantially below, indicating that the public was not merely going to a show.

Republic TV Deal Draws Allied Fire

As a result of Republic's sale of pictures for TV, national Allied issued the following statement here yesterday:

"It is with regret that we view the action of Republic in its sale of pictures made for motion picture theatres to television. One of the most important factors in the sales equation is goodwill and with one move Republic may very well have destroyed that factor. They certainly can do nothing but harm to the industry as a whole."

Holidays Bring Big Cincinnati Business

CINNCINATI, Dec. 30.—The traditional slump in holiday theatre attendance here failed to materialize this year, with first-run theatres racking up the highest grosses in many weeks and subsequent runs cashing in on the upsurge.

Heading the list was the RKO Albee, which did an estimated $16,000 with "Million Dollar Mermaid." Average at this house is $11,000. The RKO Palace, with "Blackbeard, the Pirate," was second with $14,000, compared with a $11,000 average. A double bill at the RKO Grand, "Thunderbirds" and "Battles of Chief Pontiac," reported a plus-average figure of $3,000 for a $10,000 gross. "Thunder in the East" accounted for an average figure of $10,000 at the RKO Capitol, where returns have been under par in recent weeks, "Stars and Stripes Forever" gave Keith's a healthy plus figure of around $10,000; average is $7,500.

Average Holiday Grosses in Capital

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Downtown and neighborhood theatre business during the holiday season so far has been just about the same as last year, "nothing exceptional," according to local exhibitors.

They said there had been the usual pre-Christmas slump and a little pick-up over the Christmas week-end.

Baltimore Business Spotty

BALTIMORE, Dec. 30. — Business is spotty during this week between Christmas and New Year's with major attractions drawing substantial grosses and film fans neglecting less important features. Some Christmas shows proved insufficiently strong to hold over for New Year's. Brighter news is from J. Lawrence Schanberger of Keith's who states "Road to Bali" grosses are the best since 1948 and 25 per cent above last year. New Theatre reports "Stars and Stripes" business 25 per cent above the same week last year.

Portland Up 25 per cent

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 30.—With the closing of Oregon's drive-in theatres, Christmas business made a decided swing to downtown. Theatres reported grosses 25 per cent above normal, soaring well above managers' predictions for the week.

Skouras Hits Back At Green Criticism

The management of 20th Century-Fox stands on its record, Spyros P. Skouras, president, said here yesterday when asked to comment on charges of "mismanagement" made by financier Charles Green, who has acquired at least 20,000 shares of 20th-Fox stock.

Skouras said "we welcome any kind of honest criticism," adding that "we have nothing to fear." He pointed to profitable current operations of the company and questioned why Green should choose 20th-Fox of all motion picture companies at which to level his criticism.

20th Salary Plan

tives earning more than $500 per week, with recovery of the reduction contingent on the company earning more than $1 per share on its common stock, Skouras explained. With 2,769,484 shares of stock outstanding, the company would have to net more than that number in dollars before any restitution of voluntary salary cuts is made. Skouras said the plan affects about 87 executives in New York and in Hollywood and that all are cooperating in its execution.

Unlike the previous voluntary cut plan, instituted two years ago, which hedged recovery of salaries on the basis of losses, the 1953 plan is based on earning at least $1 per share on outstanding stock, Skouras pointed out. He emphasized that the more drastic plan was adopted to point up the need for economy.

Skouras said he hoped the plan would serve as a guide to Hollywood production executives and to talent, whose salaries, he said, are not geared to the current box-office level. He called present salaries of stars "very high." Twentieth-Fox, he said, is trying to meet the situation in some degree by offering participation deals.

Due to many competitive factors, Skouras said, it is difficult to bring production costs down with the demands of the public currently, as compared to years ago.

earnings. He credited the worldwide acceptance of American films as the reason for the growing rise in foreign revenues, which, he said, currently account for about 38 per cent of 20th-Fox's income.

On the basis of his trip to the Far East, Skouras said he would forward a recommendation to the Motion Picture Association of America to encourage theatre construction in that area. The 20th-Fox president said that countries such as India, Indonesia, Thailand and the Philippines could utilize at least three times the number of theatres currently existing.

Skouras, who visited 22 countries in his 10-week trip which also took him to Europe, said his recommendation would be contained in a report which he will submit to the MPAA.

On his stop-over in Zurich, Switzerland, Skouras said he learned of further improvements made on the company's Eidophor CBS color theatre TV system. Current improvements, Skouras added, are aimed at simplifying the operation of the unit so that it will not require more skill in handling than is required of a projectionist. He estimated that within six months, a number of models of the improved Eidophor system would be available and, following a 90-day test, the equipment would be ready for production under the company's contract with General Electric.

Cites Growth

The growth of the international motion picture industry was cited by Skouras. The following is a rundown of the status of the industry in various countries as described by the 20th-Fox president:

Japan: Production and exhibition is extremely prosperous. At present there are 3,000 theatres, with many under construction. About 250 Japanese films are produced yearly, making Japan the second largest film producing country in the world.

Philippines: Three hundred theatres have been built since the liberation of the islands, putting the number of theatres in existence today at about 500. Domestically, 60 to 80 pictures are produced yearly, although domestic films are not nearly as financially successfuly as those produced in Japan.

Thailand: Progress in theatre construction is slow.

Indonesia: Needs many more theatres to aid in its spiritual development as a nation.

Australia: American films extremely popular, with the public being the most theatre-conscious in the world, having the largest per capita attendance of any country.

New Zealand: Development of the theatre-going habit is as high as in Australia.

India: Native film production is very high, but the need for new theatres to serve India's 500,000,000 population is acute.

Wherever he went, Skouras said, the majority of people expressed pro-American sentiments. He maintained that pictures sent abroad should not be hand-picked for purity or depiction of only the good side of American life. Skouras said all types of films should be sent abroad and foreign populations will recognize the honesty and courage of American producers who show all, not only the nice currents in American life. Skouras said that while the U. S. Government should encourage theatre construction in the Far East, it should not be underwritten by the government.

During a three-day visit to Korea, the 20th-Fox president was the guest of General Van Fleet.

Guilds Force 20th Out of TV: Skouras

Blame for 20th Century-Fox not entering the television film production field was placed on the demands of the various TV guilds by Spyros P. Skouras, president, here yesterday. He said the guild requirements for extra payment money for repeat TV film showings was "stifling" TV production.

Skouras claimed that if 20th-Fox and other major studios would engage in TV production, as well as the production of theatrical films, it would tend to bring down the cost of theatrical films.

arriving stars were scores of servicemen who attended the premiere as personal guests of governors and Congressmen of their home states. Also attracting cheers were arriving guests wearing the colors of the University of Wisconsin whose football team meets the University of Southern California Trojans in the Rose Bowl tomorrow.

Early arriving fans had six sections of bleachers facing the theatre across Beverly Drive filled before dark. By 8:00 P. M., when forecourt ceremonies started and the parade of stars began ariving, the crowd had formed a mass through which Beverly Hills police were hard pressed to keep theatre-bound traffic moving.

Adding a touch of nostalgia was the introduction of stars from the first "Jazz Singer," with which Warner launched talking pictures.

UA Business

was "happy over the results" and that planned improvements are continuing.

Ron Michaels, formerly sales manager for Australia and New Zealand, has been named co-managing director of the same territory, sharing the post with Walter Thorburn. Constantin Goldin, formerly with UA and recently with M-G-M, has been appointed manager for Indonesia where the company is preparing for the establishment of its own exchange. UA product currently is being handled there by Intraport under a franchise arrangement.

While in Manila, Picker arranged for the worldwide distribution of "Genghis Khan," which was produced by Manuel Conde on a multi-lingual scale. Further commenting on Far East production, Picker said that the Shaw Brothers in Malaya were increasing their producing schedule, turning out 18 pictures a year. The Shaws, who are large theatre operators, formerly operated on a smaller scale but now are expanding their production schedules and studios, Picker said.

A deal to play UA product throughout the Amalgamated Circuit in New Zealand was closed by Picker during his stay in Aukland where UA pictures will play for the first time in the Civic Theatre. By the end of the first week in February, Picker said, Charles Chaplin's "Limelight" will be played in all of the circuit's 50-odd theatres. Twelve prints of "Limelight" are being made available for New Zealand whereas five prints formerly was the maximum for a picture.

In Australia Picker met with the Hoyt circuit executives, his visit being the first by a UA foreign head since 1934. Picker said that "High Noon" had just finished a 10-week run at the Plaza Theatre, Sydney, the longest engagement of a picture at that house since "The Great Dictator" 11 years ago.

Pointing out that both theatre and general business were continuing on a high level throughout the Far East, Picker singled out Manila as a particularly good "movie-minded" city. Five new theatres are opening there in January. On Quezon Boulevard, a principal thoroughfare, 12 theatres are doing a thriving business, he said.

Picker reported that after careful study, UA planned to enter the 16mm. distribution market in 1953, teeing off in Brazil and Australia. He said the markets were now "ripe" for such development, although concrete plans have not been completed. He also disclosed that there had been "conversations" in regard to the pooling of various companies' operations in the foreign field but that the move had not gone beyond the discussion stage.

PARAMOUNT STARTS 1953 RELEASE SCHEDULE WITH 23 FEATURES; MORE ARE TO BE ADDED

14 Set for First Half, 10 Are in Technicolor

PARAMOUNT thus far has slated 23 pictures for release in 1953, with additional pictures to be announced as soon as arrangements have been completed with the studio, according to A. W. Schwalberg, president of Paramount Film Distributing Corp. Fourteen of these will be released during the first half of the year, and of that number 10 will be in Technicolor.

"On the basis of exhibitor reaction to pictures that have been announced for the year and to plans the company has for providing intensive point-of-sale, local and regional promotion activity for the 1953 program, I hesitate not at all to forecast one of the greatest business years in Paramount's long history," Schwalberg asserted.

Jerome Pickman, vice-president in charge of advertising-publicity-exploitation, elaborating on promotion plans for the year, declared that this year more than ever will Paramount "gear to local level operation." "It is on that level," he explained, "that our customers—and consequently our company—can derive the greatest benefits."

To Use National Media For Initial Pre-Selling

Pickman said that national magazines, supplements and fan magazines will be used in 1953 "to the limit of potential returns on every picture on which their use can be integrated into the over-all campaign as initial pre-selling. Where possible, these national media will be keyed to regional release dates."

Both Schwalberg and Pickman emphasized the extent to which Paramount's 1953 releasing plans have come to reflect the exhibitor viewpoint. The year's line-up, said Schwalberg, has been based on information gathered in face-to-face talks with exhibitors in every region. Pickman said the 1953 promotion programs "are based in large degree on conferences with exhibitors in all parts of the country, aimed at achieving the greatest possible direct value to local box offices from all company expenditures and efforts in promotion.

Confer with Exhibitors On Production Schedule

Schwalberg explained that "every one of the company's executives, including Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures; Adolph Zukor, board chairman; E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, vice-president of Paramount Film Distributing Corp., Pickman, myself and others, has at various times met with theatremen to learn at first-hand the entertainment tastes and demands of their patrons." He added that the pictures Paramount is offering the showmen in 1953 "are a synthesis of every element in the entertainment spectrum. And every picture reflects Paramount's determination to make only top-quality attractions and add new names to its long list of ticket-selling stars."

A. W. SCHWALBERG

JEROME PICKMAN

Pickman explained, too, that radio and television also will be employed where possible to get the biggest local returns on the pictures and stars. Local and national spot announcements and interviews will be widely employed. "No media, no method, no technique," he added, "will be overlooked in our determination to exploit every box office potential for our customers in every selling area."

Meanwhile, Schwalberg and Pickman reminded, the tours which they, in company with O'Shea, have been making will be continued in 1953 so they may keep informed on how promotion policies can be set up to conform to the individual needs of each territory.

Schwalberg described the Paramount studio's approach to production as "embodying intensive research into every requirement of exhibitors and their customers." Thus, he added, "when Paramount breaks new entertainment ground it does so with full assurance that box office strength is firmly fixed in the 'departure' picture."

Release Schedule for First Half of 1953

The Paramount line-up for the first six months of 1953 is as follows:

January—"Road to Bali," in Technicolor, starring Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour (this is the sixth in the famous "Road" series and the first to be made in Technicolor); "Thunder in the East," starring Alan Ladd, Charles Boyer, Deborah Kerr and Corinne Calvet; "Tropic Zone," produced in Technicolor by William Pine and William Thomas, and starring Ronald Reagan, Rhonda Fleming and Estelita.

Also, Cecil B. DeMille's circus epic in Technicolor, "The Greatest Show on Earth," is to all intents and purposes a January release. Approximately 10,000 playdates are ahead of it in 1953 even though some 6,000 playdates were covered in 1952 and, therefore, the DeMille picture is regarded by the company as one of its outstanding 1953 releases. Starring in it are Betty Hutton, Cornel Wilde, Charlton Heston, Dorothy Lamour, Gloria Grahame and James Stewart.

February—Hal Wallis' new Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis comedy, "The Stooge," and Wallis' "Come Back, Little Sheba," starring Burt Lancaster and Shirley Booth. The latter picture had its premiere openings as 1952 drew to a close, so that it could be considered eligible for the Academy Awards next March.

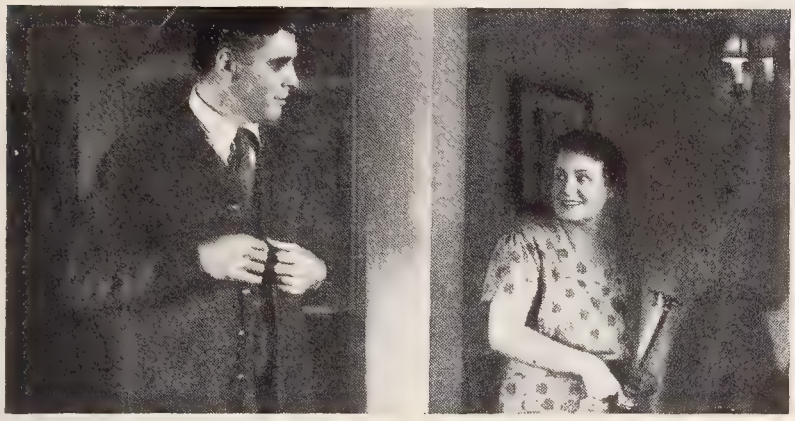
March—Two Technicolor productions, "The Stars Are Singing," starring Rosemary Clooney, Anna Maria Alberghetti and Lauritz Melchior, and "Pleasure Island," starring Don Taylor, Leo Genn and Elsa Lanchester.

Bob Hope's 'Off Limits' Is Set for April

April—Bob Hope's new comedy, "Off Limits," co-starring Mickey Rooney and Marilyn Maxwell, and "Pony Express," in Technicolor, starring Charlton Heston, Rhonda Fleming, Forrest Tucker and Jan Sterling.

May—George Pal's Technicolor production, "War of the Worlds," based on H. G. Wells' classic of science-fiction, and "Jamaica Run," also in Technicolor, starring Ray Milland, Arlene Dahl and Wendell Corey.

June—"Alaska Seas," in Technicolor, and Pine-Thomas' "The Conquerors," also in Technicolor, starring John Payne, Coleen Gray, Jan Sterling and Lyle Bettger.



The schedule for the rest of the year includes the following and others to be announced later:

June Releases Include Wyler's 'Roman Holiday'

"Roman Holiday," produced in the Italian capital by William Wyler, and starring Gregory Peck, Audrey Hepburn and Eddie Albert; "Arrowhead," produced in Technicolor by Nat Holt, and starring Charlton Heston and Mary Sinclair; "Shane," in Technicolor, produced by George Stevens and starring Alan Ladd, Jean Arthur and Van Heflin; Billy Wilder's production of the Broadway stage success, "Stalag 17," with William Holden, Don Taylor and Otto Preminger in starring roles; "Little Boy Lost," new Bing Crosby vehicle produced by Perlberg-Seaton.

Also, Hal Wallis' Martin-Lewis comedy, "Scared Stiff"; George Pal's "Houdini," in Technicolor, starring Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh; "Forever Female," starrring Ginger Rogers and William Holden; "Here Come the Girls," in Technicolor, starring Bob Hope, Arlene Dahl, Rosemary Clooney.

What Jose Ferrer Says About Robeson

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Paul Robeson is an artist of merit who has become so absorbed by Soviet Russia that he no longer can be regarded as American in any other category but nominal citizenship. He is at this moment the most vehement protagonist of Soviet Russia in this country and his services have been acknowledged by Joe Stalin.

Indignation against Robeson is usually expressed by patriotic Americans who have never been tempted by so-called left-wingism. Yet, no one has ever denounced Paul Robeson with such accurate pin-pointing of his unforgivable sins against his native land as Jose Ferrer, actor, who has also been attacked for some of his associations.

Ferrer's language is important because he expresses the problem of the artist who insists on freedom of expression but rejects treason. This is what Ferrer said about Robeson:

"Any American who accepts an award from the Soviet Union today does a tremendous disservice not only to his country but to the cause of peace throughout the world. It seems to me to be very clear that up to now the Soviet Union has discredited itself as to believability of intention and honesty of purpose.

Injures Negro Cause

"I have always felt deeply about the minority groups and their problems. In the case of Paul Robeson, his action in accepting Stalin's so-called 'peace prize' seems to me to be particularly reprehensible because he is doing almost irreparable harm to his own race, and grave injury to the cause of all Negroes. He pretends to be their spokesman, and he is not. I do not believe that Paul Robeson has anything fundamentally in common with Ralph Bunche, Marian Anderson, Joe Louis, Dorothy Maynor, Jackie Robinson, and other Negroes who are winning the uphill battle for Negro rights.

"Nor does he have very much in common with the Negro soldiers in Korea, who are helping to fight the battle for freedom against Communist aggression and dictatorship.

"Anyone who is in the arts must have freedom of expression. As an artist I insist on this privilege for myself and for all others. In its attempts to control artistic and creative expression, Communism is indistinguishable from Fascism or any other form of dictatorship. This is all the more reason to deplore the course which Paul Robeson has chosen."

The acknowledgment of the undeniable truth that "Communism is indistinguishable from Fascism" is emotionally difficult for many of those who in the hey-day of Hitlerism were willing to accept Stalin as an alternative. Their error was that there really is no alternative to evil. It is impossible to say that Stalin is less a devil than Hitler, for both were bred by the same Hegelian sire and only differed in the method of achieving an identical end.

Conclusion Same as Hitler's

Even in the matter of anti-Semitism, Stalin reaches the same position as Hitler did and for the same ends, namely, that any independence of thought or action is repugnant to him. To the very few Negroes who visit his country, Stalin can well present a facade of equality because he has no Negro population in his country, but he does have Jews in sufficient number to require him to reach a conclusion about them and his conclusion is the same as Hitler's was.

Jose Ferrer, therefore, has hit the nail on the head when he establishes the truth that when Robeson serves Stalin, he betrays not only the United States but the Negroes as well. It is a too usual, even though unjust, human trait to generalize from the particular. A handful of Negroes are Communists; therefore the illogical—and logic is perhaps the most difficult and unused of mental exercises—conclude that all, or most, or a great many Negroes are Communists.

Robeson, in particular, stands out like a sore thumb because he is so prominent and active and such a great artist. When he sings "Ole Man River" or "Water Boy," one almost forgets that he is a servant of Stalin's power. It is a pity because Robeson might have been of great service to his race and to this country. Instead, he is abhorred by most Americans and should be.

Jose Ferrer has served his country well by making the issue clear-cut and understandable. It is not the Negro in Robeson that brings him opprobrium in his native land; it is his treachery to its ideals and institutions.
